UNIDENTIFIED SPEAKER: So the person, anyone at McDermott, would it be possible for you guys, whenever you get a chance, to send out a tweet from the official Voyager UCC account letting us know -- obviously you do not have to divulge who it is, but -- and know you guys have given numbers before -- but letting us know how many members voted buddies and we're all just, you know, handing each other money. And we're all just keeping it in this tight-knit circle. You know, I just don't see how that -- people are benefiting from people knowing each other. And that's what I mean. It's like one person scratches the other person's back and we're all in cahoots, which a lot of us creditors feel like we were never properly represented and that the money expenditures and the decisions that have been made throughout this entire case have been completely against us because it's part of the boys club of let's scratch each other's backs. Do you see where I'm getting?

THE COURT: Yeah. It's not a question.

MR. SLADE: I object. That was argument. The facts are in evidence. And I object. That was not a question.

MR. CALANDRA: I join, Your Honor.

THE COURT: To the extent that there's a question in there, I think it is for you to explain, Mr. Hage. Do you think that your partner's connection with -- as being a brother of Mr. Raznick and the fact that that led to your appointment gives rise to a conflict in the performance of your duties as plan administrator? And if you don't think it does, please explain why it does not.

THE WITNESS: I do not think it does. First of all, the plan administrator is Paul Hage, not my law firm,

212-267-6868

Veritext Legal Solutions

yes and how many members voted no of Mr. Hage.

MR. AZMAN: This is Darren Azman from McDermott for the Committee. I'll just tell you right now. I have the minutes from the meeting. And again, this is not evidence. I wouldn't be able to introduce it through this witness because he was not there.

There are -- just a moment. There are four individual committee members who voted to appoint Mr. Hage as the plan administrator. And at the time we thought it would be a liquidating trustee, but same role. There are three individuals -- we had discussed -- just a moment, Your Honor.

I just wanted to make sure we weren't waiving any attorney-client privilege.

There are three committee members who voted to appoint two co-trustees together. Mr. Hage would have been one. And so I don't know whether you would call that unanimous or not, but that's what the vote was. Again, four that voted to appoint Mr. Hage only, three who voted to appoint two co-trustees, one of whom would be Mr. Hage.

UNIDENTIFIED SPEAKER: Okay. I just want to make sure I understand this correctly. So four people just voted for Mr. Hage and then three people voted for Mr. Hage plus one other person to be co-trustees with Mr. Hage?

MR. AZMAN: Yes.

212-267-6868

Veritext Legal Solutions
www.veritext.com

UNIDENTIFIED SPEAKER: Okay. And since it's four against three -- so I can see why it's unanimous in the sense that all seven said Mr. Hage. But three of the seven at least wanted a secondary person almost an oversight, someone to check over Mr. Hage to make sure that he's doing his job properly. So there's a tiebreaker there because it's four against three. Would you be allowed to say if one of the people that's on the four side was Jason Raznick, giving an advantage to just having Mr. Hage by himself versus having the co-trustee, of having that oversight over Mr. Hage?

THE COURT: I don't think that's -- first, I don't think it's a question for the witness. But also, I didn't hear the Committee counsel say that three people wanted an additional person as an oversight of Mr. Hage. They just said that they thought that there should be two trustees instead of one.

UNIDENTIFIED SPEAKER: You're right, Your Honor. He didn't use the word oversight. I am interpreting it that way, that that might have been the intention --

MR. AZMAN: Let me further clarify. I'm just reading the minutes more closely. Just to be clear, of the three who said Mr. Hage plus one -- and I did not say that they would be in an oversight role. There's two co-trustees. Of those three, one voted for Mr. Hage to appoint

212-267-6868

Veritext Legal Solutions
www.veritext.com

516-608-2400

that was part of the consideration that was given by the Committee.

UNIDENTIFIED SPEAKER: And to my question, would we be allowed to know which way Jason Raznick voted?

MR. AZMAN: Is that a question for the witness or --

THE COURT: I think it's a question to you as counsel, not to the witness. Because you're the only one that has the information.

MR. AZMAN: Sure. Mr. Raznick voted for Mr. Hage only.

UNIDENTIFIED SPEAKER: So Jason Raznick voted so that Mr. Hage got all of the business versus it being split with somebody else is kind of how I see that. Okay.

Other than asking questions, it's not like I really have any power in this case. But I do for the record want to state that I object to Mr. Hage. Nothing against him personally. I'm sure he does his job well. But considering everything that has surrounded this -- that has been -- this case being surrounded by so much non-transparency and just, like I already said, the whole let's scratch each other's backs and let's do each other favors. So for the record, I object to Mr. Hage being a plan administrator and I would prefer that someone else be chosen.

Mr. Hage with potentially one more trustee depending on the total price. I don't -- yeah. That's just what the minutes reflect. That's all.

THE WITNESS: Well, and let me add to that. I know that that was part of the consideration in that it is no secret that the professional fees have been significant in this case. It's a complex case and it's been professional-intensive. And I do believe that a factor that the Creditors' Committee considered was the expense of having multiple trustees. It is not uncommon to have multiple trustees. It's also not uncommon to have a single trustee. It is not uncommon -- in fact, I would say in my experience representing committees and trusts, it is not at all uncommon for the Committee to negotiate as part of the Chapter 11 case that there will be a post-confirmation trustee. And it is not uncommon for the selection of that trustee to be done by the creditors' committee, and it is not uncommon even for members of the creditors' committee to serve in that capacity. And so that is all part of the deliberation that went into this. One of my selling points, because I'm very mindful of the professional fees and that every dollar that is spent is a dollar that's not available for customers, is my rate, and that I am located in Michigan and not in New York. And therefore, my rate is substantially less than New York rates. And I'm sure that

THE COURT: Okay, I understand that. Do you have any more questions for Mr. Hage?

UNIDENTIFIED SPEAKER: No. Thank you so much, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Okay. Anybody else who wishes to question Mr. Hage?

MR. NEWSOM: Your Honor, this is Dan Newsom, pro se creditor.

THE COURT: Okay. Please proceed, Mr. Newsom.

BY MR. NEWSOM:

Q Good evening, Mr. Hage. In your representation of Mr. Raznick, did you advise him on how to act in the best interest of creditors (indiscernible)?

MR. CALANDRA: Your Honor, I am going to object that we're invading the client privilege here. I don't mind him just answering yes or no, but any further than that, I would object.

THE COURT: It seems to me you can answer yes or no to that question without breaching the privilege.

BY MR. NEWSOM:

A Yes.

Q Did you unofficially advise other members of the UCC on (indiscernible) during the meetings?

MR. CALANDRA: Objection. Don't even understand what unofficially means.

1 THE COURT: I don't, either. Objection sustained.

2 BY MR. NEWSOM:

3 Q Do you agree that one of the roles of the UCC is to 4 monitor fees (indiscernible) bankruptcy (indiscernible)?

5 A I'm sorry. I am having a hard time hearing the 6 question.

7 THE COURT: Do you agree that one of the roles of 8 the UCC is to monitor fees was the question.

9 BY MR. NEWSOM:

10 A I do.

11 Q I believe in one of the objections, Mr. Raznick stated

12 he has no control over fees. Did you advise him not to 13 raise objections or concerns to the fees?

14 MR. CALANDRA: Now we're getting into the 15 privilege, Your Honor. I object.

16 THE COURT: Did you have any non-privileged

17 communications with Mr. Raznick on that subject?

18 THE WITNESS: No.

19 THE COURT: Okay.

20 THE WITNESS: Not that I recall.

21 THE COURT: All right. The privilege belongs to 22 Mr. Raznick. I can't let the witness violate his 23 professional obligations and testify about matters that are 24 privileged.

25 MR. NEWSOM: Understood.

1 MR. CALANDRA: I'm sorry, I didn't even hear the

2 question. Could you repeat the question, please?

3 THE COURT: It was something about whether there

4 was somebody who had withdrawals in the 90 days before the 5 petition.

6 MR. SLADE: (indiscernible) money on the platform

7 that was withdrawn within the 90 days.

8 BY MR. NEWSOM:

9 A I do not know.

10 Q Did Mr. Raznick have any holdings that were withdrawn

11 in that same timeframe?

12 A I believe he did, although I don't know the amounts or 13 dates. He wasn't treated any differently than any other

14 retail customer in that regard.

15 Q Has the Committee -- strike that. It's your 16 representation Mr. Raznick prevents you from advising the 17 Committee to contemplate pursuing insider clawbacks or other

18 preferential clawbacks of those with insider knowledge?

19 MR. CALANDRA: Objection. I'm not sure if he's --

20 was advising the Committee. He was advising Mr. Raznick.

21 THE COURT: What was the question?

2 Q If I might ask, what was the final result of the vote

4 A I'm very sorry. I -- could you ask the question again?

5 THE COURT: What was the final vote on the motion

6 to approve the settlement? The one that you said Mr.

7 Raznick opposed.

8 BY MR. NEWSOM:

9 A I believe it was four in favor of not objecting to the 10 settlement, two who were voting in favor of objecting to the 11 settlement, and one, Mr. Raznick, who abstained.

12 Q To the best of your belief, that abstention did not

13 affect the outcome, correct?

14 MR. CALANDRA: I'm sorry, I didn't hear the 15 question.

16 THE COURT: The abstention then did not affect the 17 outcome of the vote. Is that right?

18 BY MR. NEWSOM:

19 A That is correct. Mr. Raznick voted last. And at that 20 point, the outcome of the vote had been determined.

21 Q Okay. And I'm not sure if this is attorney-client

22 privilege, but I'll ask and allow the Court to decide.

2 THE COURT: Did your representation of Mr. Raznick

3 prevent you from advising the Committee? Is that what your 4 question was?

5 MR. NEWSOM: Mr. Raznick specifically.

6 THE COURT: Mr. Raznick specifically.

7 MR. AZMAN: Objection. Mr. Raznick wouldn't have

8 the ability to pursue. I think it's a misunderstanding of 9 the function of the Committee and Mr. Raznick's role, Your 10 Honor. I think the witness can answer because I think he 11 understands.

12 BY MR. NEWSOM:

13 A I'm sorry, I don't understand the question.

1 THE COURT: He said good evening.

2 BY MR. HENDERSHOTT:

3 Q You can hear me fine?

4 A I can.

5 Q Yes, thank you. Excellent. So just to clarify, you

6 know, the creditors have filed the objection. It's not

7 necessarily against you, Mr. Hage. We don't even know you.

8 Our objection is overall the conduct of this trial what we

9 feel is the inappropriate status of Chapter 11. We feel

10 that there's fraud and dishonesty (indiscernible) gross

11 mismanagement. We feel that when the Texas Attorney

12 Generals brought this up back in October as well as

13 creditors bringing it up in January, this case should have

14 been converted to a Chapter 7.

15 You've extensively highlighted your credentials and 16 expertise in bankruptcy. Textbooks, articles, education,

17 experience. I'm curious if you could share with us your

18 beliefs on the status of this case remaining in Chapter 11

19 when numerous cases and United States Code (indiscernible)

20 United States Trustee that the primary role of Chapter 11 is 21 to (indiscernible) comprehensive reorganization according to

22 the United States Code (indiscernible), one of the paramount

23 objectives of a Chapter 11 is reorganization, iso to 24 rehabilitate, none of that which is happening in this trial.

25 So I'm curious, as the plan administrator going

212-267-6868

1 done. Again, with an eye towards maximizing the return to

2 all creditors.

3 Q Thank you for that response and insight. So let's talk

4 about the specifics of when you (indiscernible) to get

5 appointed as the administrator (indiscernible). Clawbacks

6 (indiscernible) just recently after voting was completed,

7 unfortunately. The claw backs proposed for retail clients,

8 customers, creditors only with a limit of 20 days between 9 the point of petition (indiscernible). My understanding is 10 that for retail customers, the standard clawback period is 11 90 days with one year for insiders. As a potential

12 administrator on a go-forward basis, are you abiding by that

13 20-day limitation only for retail customers, no clawbacks

14 for insiders?

15 THE COURT: What is this 20-day period?

16 MR. AZMAN: Your Honor, Mr. Hendershott is

17 referring to an amendment to the APA that was filed I think

18 a few days ago. What I think Mr. Hendershott -- I'm going

19 to try to help Mr. Hendershott with the question here. What 20 Mr. Hendershott may not realize is that -- yeah. What Mr.

21 Hendershott may not realize is that as part of the 22 transaction with Binance, Binance specifically negotiated to 23 acquire all claims that the estate has against customers.

24 Of course the idea being that they're basically buying

25 Voyager's customers. They don't want the estate to turn

212-267-6868

Veritext Legal Solutions
www.veritext.com

516-608-2400

1 forward, what is your viewpoint on the status of whether

2 this should have been Chapter 7 or Chapter 11.

3 MR. CALANDRA: Your Honor, I object to this

4 question. It's not even relevant what his view is on this.

5 THE COURT: Do you really object?

6 MR. HENDERSHOTT: It's going to be (indiscernible)

7 as we ask follow-on questions. You know, his methodology,

8 his pursuit of clawbacks, releases, communication style

9 (indiscernible) appointed to the role of administration.

10 THE COURT: I actually don't think it has anything

11 to do with those points, but I will allow him to answer the 12 question.

13 BY MR. HENDERSHOTT:

14 A It was a long question, but what I would say is that 15 Chapter 11 of the Bankruptcy Code is used to reorganize

16 businesses, it's frequently used to sell businesses, and it

17 can be used to liquidate businesses. The purpose and the 18 goal of every Chapter 11 case is to maximize value for the 19 benefit of creditors.

20 In this case, I believe that the plan that is before

21 the Court is the best method of what I've been aiming to 22 achieve throughout this case, which is to get the most

23 amount of money back to creditors as soon as possible.

24 And in terms of -- there was some reference to claims

25 and causes of action. That is the work that continues to be

212-267-6868

Veritext Legal Solutions
www.veritext.com

516-608-2400

1 around and sue the customers they just bought. Very common

2 in bankruptcy.

3 We have, however, a provision in the APA that

4 allowed the Committee to go to Binance and show them certain

5 transactions that we would request that they allow to be

6 carved out so that they could be preserved for the benefit

7 of creditors. They had no obligation to agree if we came to 8 them. But we did to go them with certain criteria. And 9 there were really two criteria that we came to them with.

10 One was former customers who were not creditors as of the 11 petition date. And the idea behind carving those customer

12 claims out is that they're not creditors. They don't even 13 have an opportunity to vote on the plan, by the way. But

14 there should be no reason that Binance would care if the 15 estate were to investigate and pursue former customers who

16 do not move over to Binance, nor could they. Because,

17 again, they don't have anything on the platform.

18 There are 32,000 customers that fall into that 19 bucket. We call them former customers. Binance agreed to 20 amend the APA in that manner. In addition to that -- and 21 it's approximately 32,000. I think it's like 32,800 or so.

22 In addition to that, the second criteria -- and 23 there were 92 creditors that satisfied the second criteria.

24 Essentially what we were looking for were indicia of 25 customers who may have had advanced notice of the freeze or

212-267-6868

Veritext Legal Solutions
www.veritext.com

the withdrawal limits that were getting ready to be imposed on customers and thus got their money out before others did. And that is what we went to Binance with. And we thought that that would be justifiable to Binance, and it was. And I don't think that they would have accepted anything else for the reasons that I stated earlier.

Mr. Hage, as counsel to Mr. Raznick, has nothing to do with whether that negotiation ended up in the place it did, of course. Mr. Raznick will have to live with whatever the plan and the APA say, and that is what is before Your Honor. I hope that's helpful, and I'm sorry to bring an argument to this, but I thought it would be helpful to clarify for Mr. Hendershott.

MR. HENDERSHOTT: I do appreciate that, Mr. Azman. So the question is --

THE COURT: Hang on, Mr. Hendershott. We've got to -- because of the timing, we have to probably terminate and re-log in. Is that it, Jackie? Does everybody need to dial back in or do you just need to do it?

CLERK: No, I just need to do it. That's all.

THE COURT: We'll take five minutes.

(Recess)

THE COURT: All right. Please be seated. I think we've reconnected to Court Solutions. It is quarter to seven. I would say that -- I'm not sure everybody

212-267-6868

Veritext Legal Solutions
www.veritext.com

exist here. I think that the primary focus in this case has been on specifically trying to exercise, execute a transaction quickly that would get money back to creditors. And so other than as necessary and appropriate for purposes of dealing with the release issues that are in the plan, I would say a comprehensive investigation of all of the potential claims and causes of action that may be pursued by me as the plan administrator has not yet been conducted. But it will be conducted. And if we conclude that there is merit to those claims and that there are collectable entities that are pursued such that it's a good use of creditors' money to pursue them, we will pursue them.

Q That's great. (indiscernible). Under the current manner of clawbacks, instead of the standard 90 day for retail and one year for insiders -- and Mr. Azman can correct me if I'm wrong. My understanding is it's 20 days for retail, a defined subset that Mr. Azman clearly articulated, and zero clawbacks for insiders. Am I misunderstanding that?

THE COURT: I think if I understand it correct, it's 90 days unless somebody has become a Binance customer, in which case part of the sale agreement and the exchange for the $20 million and other consideration was that claims against that person would be released except that the release would not apply as to those persons if they had appreciates it, but in light of the number of pro se people who are interested, I have been much more lenient than usual in terms of the questions I have allowed. I have tried to do that to try to make sure that everybody feels like they've had their questions addressed, even if not totally to their satisfaction, even where we've frequently strayed off the issues that are actually before us today. But given how late it already is, I will just make a plea that we focus on what's left of relevance to Mr. Hage himself, which is whether he has any conflicts of interest and whether he is appropriate for the choice as plan administrator.

So, Mr. Hendershott, I think you were asking questions. Would you like to continue?

MR. HENDERSHOTT: Yes, Your Honor. Thank you.

BY MR. HENDERSHOTT:

Q So, Mr. Hage, we left off on clawbacks, which is going to be a primary role of your position. Is that correct?

A Did you say clawbacks?

Q That's correct.

A I wouldn't characterize that as the primary role here. As Mr. Azman noted, the Committee was able to negotiate to retain some of the -- by clawbacks I assume you mean bankruptcy preference actions -- was able to negotiate that some of those be preserved. But, look, there's a wide variety of potential claims and causes of action that may

212-267-6868

Veritext Legal Solutions
www.veritext.com

516-608-2400

advance knowledge of the closing of the platform and if they withdrew within -- that's where the 20 days comes in. Am I right about that?

MR. AZMAN: Yeah. I don't remember the exact number of days. It might be 20 days. But yes, exactly what you said, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Okay. And is there any proposed limitation of the one-year insider preference period? Not that I recall.

MR. SLADE: I'm sorry, what was the question?

THE COURT: Is there any proposed limitation of the one-year insider preference period?

MR. SLADE: No, but if they're covered by the release -- that was --

THE COURT: Okay. I see. That's right. Yes. There is in the sense that they're released. That's right. Okay.

MR. HENDERSHOTT: So I'm correct. It was zero clawbacks for insiders, 20 days for retail.

THE COURT: No. No, that's not -- when you say 20 days for retail, 90 days for retail unless you are customer who has gone to Binance, in which case the claim preference clawback claims are released except that those people will not be released if they knew about the closing of the platform in advance and made withdrawals within the 20 days

1 before the platform was closed down. Have I stated that
2 correctly, Counsel?

3 MR. AZMAN: The only slight clarification is it's 4 not that they knew about it, because we don't know yet if 5 they knew about it. They're being preserved based on 6 indicia that we've developed, and they will be investigated.
7 They may not even be pursued. This is nothing about whether 8 or not --

9 THE COURT: So it's 90 days for retail unless 10 you're a Binance -- become a Binance customer, in which case
11 it may be narrower. Okay?

12 MR. HENDERSHOTT: Okay.

13 BY MR. HENDERSHOTT:

14 Q So, Mr. Hage, I've spoken to numerous bankruptcy
15 lawyers. This is the first time I've ever heard of any 16 retail being clawed back and no action taken -- that's the 17 other for the insiders. And actually, the law extends the 18 timeline for insiders specifically because they have more 19 responsibility, more insight, more knowledge than the 20 typical retail customer. So can you justify how all 21 insiders are let off the hook from this very painful process
22 (indiscernible)?

23 THE COURT: I'm sorry, Mr. Hendershott, that's not 24 Mr. Hage's decision. That's a provision of the plan. And I
25 will hear your argument as to whether that should happen.

1 it after the winddown trust entity is in effect?

2 THE COURT: Make amendments to what?

3 MR. HENDERSHOTT: The plan that you just mentioned
4 he has to comply with after your ruling, which 5 (indiscernible) of the plan (indiscernible) couple of days.
6 I'm curious if the administrator is authorized to continue
7 revising the plans post conclusion of the case and during 8 the lifespan, which could be years, of the winddown entity.
9 THE COURT: There are specific code provisions
10 that apply to request to modify a plan after it has been 11 confirmed. It is not impossible, but you have to satisfy 12 certain standards and you have to come back to me to get 13 approval to make those modifications. So I don't know if 14 that answers your question, Mr. Hendershott. But again,
15 whatever powers there are in general are really not 16 functions of this plan or of what's been proposed to 17 delegate to Mr. Hage.

18 MR. HENDERSHOTT: I feel that you've answered my 19 question. There is a process (indiscernible) potentially by 20 the administrator, but it's a court internal process of 21 amendments. Is that correct?

22 THE COURT: Yes, there is. There is a provision
23 in the Code --

24 MR. HENDERSHOTT: Thank you, sir.

25 THE COURT: Well, let me actually check that.

1 That's a function of the releases that have been proposed.
2 But whoever is -- if I confirm the plan, whoever turns out
3 to be the plan administrator will live with whatever the 4 terms of the plan are. It's not going to be that person's 5 decision as to whether those insiders were already released
6 or were not already released. That's an issue that's 7 separate from anything that Mr. Hage would have any possible
8 control over. It will either have happened because the 9 releases are approved, or it won't happen because the 10 releases won't be approved, and you can make your arguments
11 when we talk about releases later. But it really has 12 nothing to do with what Mr. Hage is going to do. He'll have 13 to live with whatever --

14 MR. HENDERSHOTT: (indiscernible).

15 THE WITNESS: Whatever claims or --

16 MR. HENDERSHOTT: (indiscernible).

17 THE WITNESS: (indiscernible) assigned to the 18 trust, I will investigate and pursue as any proper fiduciary 19 would do.

20 BY MR. HENDERSHOTT:

21 Q Great. (indiscernible). I'm not an expert by any 22 means. I thought you had more autonomy to make those 23 decisions.

24 So as the plan administrator, once it's approved by 25 Judge Wiles, do you have the ability to make amendments to

1 Maybe I just misquoted it. There is a provision for changes
2 to a time after confirmation and before substantial
3 consummation. Okay? In other words, if something changes
4 between the substantial consummation of the -- the 5 confirmation and substantial consummation, it can be 6 changed. And I don't want --

7 MR. HENDERSHOTT: Okay. And then after that, Your 8 Honor, there's no ability to amend?

9 THE COURT: Well, at some point it's done and 10 there's nothing to amend. I really -- you know, I can't 11 give you legal advice, and that's about as far as I can talk
12 to you about just -- you know, I'm not going to give you a 13 treatise on plan amendments, unfortunately. I can't. I'm 14 not allowed.

15 MR. HENDERSHOTT: Sure. I understand.

16 BY MR. HENDERSHOTT:

17 Q Okay. So, Mr. Hage, releases. Currently every single 18 entity that's touched this case, from the Debtors
19 (indiscernible) officers, employees, every single 20 professional, everyone except for the creditors are 21 receiving releases in this case. Can you (indiscernible)
22 that that is appropriate, especially under the recent 23 rulings of Purdue and even the Supreme Court just came out
24 with a ruling last week (indiscernible). Is that 25 appropriate in your opinion?

MR. SLADE: I object Your Honor. I don't know how the witness is supposed to answer that question.

THE COURT: He's not the one -- he is not the one proposing the releases. Do you understand that?

MR. HENDERSHOTT: He provided consult to the chairman of the UCC (indiscernible). Am I wrong?

MR. SLADE: That is privileged, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Well, he can't testify about advice he gave to Mr. Raznick.

MR. HENDERSHOTT: I'm not asking for his discussion with Mr. Raznick. I'm asking for his opinion.

MR. AZMAN: I don't even know that he did (indiscernible).

THE COURT: Yeah. I will sustain the objection.

BY MR. HENDERSHOTT:

Q Okay. Moving on. There was a lot of discussion, Mr. Hage, about your experience, and it was very impressive. (indiscernible) and may have just missed it, is your experience in this particular role as a plan administrator. Could you -- forgive me if you have to repeat it. But could you expand on that, please?

A I have not personally served as a plan administrator before. I have on multiple cases represented post-confirmation fiduciaries. So I am very -- it's a significant part of my practice. And so I am very familiar on (indiscernible). But my only concern is this is the first major crypto bankruptcy. It's a mega case. The first thought that comes to my mind, Mr. Hage, is maybe your first role as plan administrator could be on a less-complex, smaller size, not with all the novel complexity that is found in this case.

MR. AZMAN: Is that a question?

THE COURT: Yes, it's a question.

MR. HENDERSHOTT: It is a question.

THE COURT: What do you think?

BY MR. HENDERSHOTT:

A I would say that because the plan contemplates a transaction where much of the crypto assets will be transferred prior to my taking the position, I think that crypto, while an important part of this case, in many ways the role of the plan administrator will be similar to the role of the plan administrator in every Chapter 11 case, which is to investigate and pursue causes of action. And there aren't a lot of cryptocurrency in bankruptcy experts in the world because this is a very fairly new experience with the crypto bankruptcy cases that have been filed over the last eight months. I would say that I have quite a bit of knowledge and experience about the intersection of cryptocurrency and bankruptcy as a result of my involvement in these cases.

with the duties that exist for post-confirmation fiduciaries, the legal issues that come up with the types of claims and causes of action that are frequently pursued and I expect will be investigated here in the process.

Q Okay. So I didn't miss it. There is no direct experience as a plan administrator before. And you (indiscernible) about being a bankruptcy judge. I don't know if that was purely (indiscernible) or maybe a combination of both. But would being a plan administrator be on the pathway for you to achieve being a bankruptcy judge (indiscernible)?

A I think when bankruptcy judges are selected, that the respective court of appeals looks at a variety of factors. An applicant's professional experience, an applicant's personal integrity, his reputation within the community, both locally and beyond that. His empathy, his or her empathy for creditors, his judicial temperament. These are all things they look at in deciding who to select for a judgeship. And so in terms of relevant experience, I think that having experience serving as a fiduciary would probably be something that a court would look at and view as a positive thing so long as the fiduciary acted as a fiduciary, which certainly is my intention.

Q That makes sense. So (indiscernible) the motivation (indiscernible). That's a very admirable path that you're

Q Interesting. You talk about the (indiscernible) with the previous creditor. Have you seen the objection to the motion for approval of the plan that was submitted with the survey results, that was submitted to them through a third party, independent, SurveyMonkey, about the creditor class satisfaction with the representation, the letter of communication that was provided from your client to the creditor class?

MR. CALANDRA: It's not in evidence, Your Honor.

THE COURT: I'm sorry?

MR. CALANDRA: The survey results are not in evidence. They're hearsay.

THE COURT: The only question so far is --

MR. HENDERSHOTT: They are in evidence.

THE COURT: The objection --

MR. HENDERSHOTT: You submitted them --

THE COURT: The objection is overruled. You've asked him if he's seen them. I'll let him testify.

BY MR. HENDERSHOTT:

A I did read that objection, as I've tried to read all of the objections to the plan that have been filed.

Q And did you see that 97 percent of the creditors that responded voted that the UCC representation has been a failure to the creditor class?

A I remember the survey. I don't remember the details of

212-267-6868

Veritext Legal Solutions
www.veritext.com

the survey.

Q Okay. And so it's on the docket. It's document number 161. And if you trust me, I can read the results to you. It's 97 percent of the creditors responding perception of failure of UCC representation. 94 percent of the creditors responding Jason Raznick in his role as UCC chairman failed the creditor class.

You were directly responsible for providing guidance to Mr. Raznick as that chairman of the UCC committee. Do you find these findings concerning, significant? Is there any lessons learned (indiscernible) your own behavior and engagement between yourself as administrator and the creditors that you would take away from these survey results on a go-forward basis?

A What I take from those results is that there is a group of creditors in this case who are dissatisfied with the committee representation. I will say that -- I was not the committee. I did not represent the committee. I represented a member of the committee. But I know that in terms of communications with creditors, there were I believe four town halls that the committee professionals -- I was not one of them -- participated in and answered questions for lengthy periods of time from creditors in the case. I know that they have maintained a Twitter link to provide updates on the case. And I believe that this committee for Mr. Hage?

MR. JONES: Seth Jones, pro se, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Okay, Mr. Jones.

MR. JONES: I've got some questions.

BY MR. JONES:

Q Jason Raznick in the past has said that he had to hire a (indiscernible) lawyer before the UCC professionals were hired. How much work did you do for the UCC members (indiscernible) in this case?

THE COURT: Can you answer that question?

MR. AZMAN: Could I -- I'm not sure I heard.

THE COURT: The question was how much work did you do for Mr. Raznick before McDermott was hired to --

MR. JONES: No, no. the group. By the group.

THE COURT: I'm sorry?

MR. JONES: By the group.

MR. AZMAN: He didn't represent the Committee.

THE COURT: He didn't represent the Committee, so I'm not sure what your question is.

MR. JONES: No. Jason Raznick in the past has said that he hired a personal lawyer which helped (indiscernible) that a lot of work had to go in to figure things out. How much work was he involved with the other members of the UCC before McDermott was hired?

THE COURT: Were you -- were you involved in any

212-267-6868

516-608-2400

tried very hard to communicate as much as possible when you have a creditor body of this size. But I was not personally involved in those discussions.

Q Well, that's my concern. So I'm not hearing that you would do anything different. And actually, as part of the objection, (indiscernible). Pardon?

THE COURT: What was the question?

MR. HENDERSHOTT: Can you hear me?

THE COURT: We can hear you. But what was the question?

MR. HENDERSHOTT: I haven't finished asking it yet. Proceed?

THE COURT: If you have a question, proceed. Yes.

BY MR. HENDERSHOTT:

Q Yes. So as part of that same objection, Mr. Hage, (indiscernible) with the creditors that your direct communication expressly stating that it was not the responsibility of the UCC to communicate. And that is a direct result (indiscernible) to the 90-plus percent dissatisfaction rate. So it's very concerning to hear that you wouldn't change anything and that you feel that the level of communication (indiscernible) in this case. (indiscernible) and I will pass on the podium at this point. Thank you, Mr. Hage, for your time.

THE COURT: Okay. Are there any other questions

212-267-6868

Veritext Legal Solutions
www.veritext.com

work with the other members of the Committee before McDermott was hired?

THE WITNESS: I was.

BY MR. JONES:

A I met -- I spoke with Mr. Raznick for the first time sometime in mid-July. I believe the creditors' committee selected McDermott in late July. It is common in the -- I don't remember exactly the date when the creditors' committee was formed, but it was sometime in the middle there. It is not uncommon when there are appointed for them to have their attorneys participate in that process. That was I think particularly important in this case because, whereas in many cases the creditors' committee consists of usually seven trade creditors, some of whom have familiarity with the bankruptcy process.

In this case, the diverse committee that was appointed by the Office of the United States Trustee consisted all of retail customers of Voyager who, to my knowledge, none of whom -- no, I believe actually one of them may have served on a creditors' committee before, but most of them had no experience with the bankruptcy process at all.

And so as an attorney representing one of the members of the Committee for that week or so period before McDermott was hired as the counsel for the Committee, I took efforts

212-267-6868

Veritext Legal Solutions
www.veritext.com

516-608-2400

1 to help organize the Committee in terms of helping to deal
2 with a deluge of pitch packages that Committee members
3 received and coming up with an organized process of 4 identifying who we wanted to interview, who they wanted to 5 interview, and who they -- not me -- wanted to select.

6 Q Do you think in that week process, that gave you a leg-
7 up on getting appointed by the winddown trust?

8 A No.

9 Q How many applied and how many interviewed for the 10 winddown trust?

11 A I cannot speak to how many applied. I believe that the 12 Creditors' Committee interviewed three individuals. I say 13 that because it was in a pleading, I believe, that the 14 Committee filed. But I don't know how many people expressed 15 interest in it.

16 Q What is the voting procedures for the UCC when voting?
17 Is it one-by-one or is it a blind vote or what?

18 A As is customary for creditors' committees -- and I have 19 a lot of experience working with creditors' committees, as 20 do many of the other attorneys in the room here, it is -- I
21 have never seen a committee where it wasn't true that each
22 committee member -- again, it's usually seven members --
23 each committee member gets one vote. No one member's vote 24 carries more weight than any other committee member. The 25 chair does not have veto power or a more weighted vote.

1 THE COURT: Was abstaining the same as voting no?
2 Is that what you are asking?

3 MR. JONES: Abstain. Abstaining.

4 THE COURT: Yeah.

5 MR. JONES: Abstaining to a vote.

6 BY MR. JONES:

7 A I know that at the time Mr. Raznick voted, the decision
8 had already been determined because the requisite majority 9 of committee members had already voted not to object to the 10 settlement. Why Mr. Raznick -- and this was a heavily 11 debated thing. This was not an easy decision. It was not 12 an easy decision for any of the committee members. It was 13 heavily debated and deliberated on. Because those committee 14 members are all retail customers, just like you, sir. And 15 those -- so anyway, he was the last to vote. The decision
16 had already been made at that point. And why he abstained
17 as -- instead of simply voting no or joining the pack, I
18 can't answer that. Joining the majority I should say.

19 Q When did the vote take place to appoint a plan
20 administrator?

21 A I don't recall the exact date, but I would -- I think
22 it was probably in late October or early November.

23 Q You said this is a complex case. Do you think one
24 trustee should have the power to control $135 million
25 (indiscernible) recovering a billion dollars?

212-267-6868

Veritext Legal Solutions
www.veritext.com

516-608-2400

1 It's not done proportionate based on the size of a
2 creditors' claim. Each of the usually seven members gets 3 one vote, and it's majority rule with the exception that to 4 the extent there is any sort of conflict issue that comes 5 up, that somebody recuses themselves.

6 Q What was the voting procedures when they vote?

7 A What was the voting procedures?

8 Q Yeah, how did the voting procedures work? Is it a one-
9 by-one vote?

10 A Yes. Well, I've seen it done different ways. Usually 11 committee meetings are going to be run by the professionals
12 for the committee. In this case, that would be McDermott 13 and FTI. When an issue is presented for a vote, each 14 creditor votes. And usually they just roll through the 15 roster, vote yea or nay.

16 Q So one by one.

17 A That's correct.

18 Q Okay. So -- all right. Why didn't Jason Raznick vote
19 no if he claimed that (indiscernible). You said abstain is 20 the same method as voting no.

21 THE COURT: I think there were two questions
22 there. Which one do you want to ask?

23 BY MR. JONES:

24 Q Okay. Do you think abstaining is the same method as 25 voting no?

212-267-6868

Veritext Legal Solutions
www.veritext.com

516-608-2400

1 A Well, keep in mind that there is a three-person plan
2 administrator governing board. There is one plan
3 administrator. And the plan administrator in this case will 4 need to and will -- I will hire competent, experienced,
5 capable professionals to help fulfill that duty. So yes, I
6 do think it's good, it's sufficient.

7 And the alternative of having multiple trustees just 8 means more professional fees, which at the end of the day
9 will eat away at the recovery for customers and creditors.
10 All creditors, not just customers.

11 Q Is this true? The plan administrator shall have the 12 exclusive right, power, and interest to review, reconcile,
13 enforce, elect, compromise, settle, or elect not to pursue 14 the vested actions -- causes of actions, including, without 15 limitation, FTX, Alameda, and 3AC?

16 A There are provisions that deal with the plan
17 administrator's authority. And there's a generally broad 18 provision like that. There are some caveats to that I
19 believe where the amount at issue is subject to above a 20 certain threshold. I don't remember what those thresholds 21 are. But generally that's right. The plan administrator is 22 a fiduciary whose job is to decide which claims to pursue or 23 not to pursue, when to settle or not to settle, when to 24 litigate or not to litigate. And of course any fiduciary 25 would do that based on discussing and deliberating with the

212-267-6868

Veritext Legal Solutions
www.veritext.com

516-608-2400

professionals who that fiduciary has retained. And of course in this case, like most cases, because there is a trust or plan administrator governing board, in consultation with them as well.

And in some cases, settlements are frequently done by filing a motion with the bankruptcy court for approval of settlements. And so in some cases, that may be something that we would do as well.

Q Thank you for your time. I appreciate it.

A You're welcome.

Q That's all.

THE COURT: All right. Is there anybody else on the phone who wishes to cross-examine Mr. Hage? Okay.

In that case, is there anybody here, any redirect for the Debtors or any -- excuse me, examination by the Debtors?

MR. SLADE: No, Your Honor. Thank you.

THE COURT: No? Redirect by the Committee?

MR. CALANDRA: No, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Mr. Hage, just very briefly. If you uncovered circumstances that called -- that you thought suggested that you ought to criticize the work that the prior committee had done or that McDermott Will & Emery had done, would you feel any hesitation or limitation on your ability to make those criticisms?

statement that the SEC staff thinks maybe the VGX token is a security. It's kind of irrelevant because it's like Kirkland & Ellis saying something, our client is not allowing us to say it on behalf of our client. So I'm not sure how relevant it is, but it may have an impact on what the Debtors need to do with our plan. And I think we need some time to think about it. Just as an example. We might need to amend the plan to add an 1145 exclusion into it if the SEC might take this position.

And so what I would ask Your Honor to do is leave the evidentiary record open to allow us to do that if we decide that the debtors want to amend the plan. And, Your Honor --

THE COURT: We can reopen the evidentiary record if the plan is amended. Would that serve your purpose? Do we need to leave it open at this stage?

MR. SLADE: I would ask that you leave it open, because I'm just not sure how we're going to handle it.

THE COURT: All right.

MR. SLADE: I mean, in some respects the position they took this afternoon was even weirder than the kind of nothingburger that they gave the Court yesterday. So I just don't know what to do with it. But I do know that the Debtor professionals and the committee professionals need to talk about it.

THE WITNESS: No.

THE COURT: If you had to object to a claim by Mr. Raznick, would you have the ability to do that, or would you need to have conflicts counsel?

THE WITNESS: I think if there was an objection to a claim of Mr. Raznick -- and that is precisely the reason that I requested that there be that conflict provision there, because ethically I don't think that that would be something I could or should do.

THE COURT: Somebody else would handle that then.

THE WITNESS: That's correct.

THE COURT: So any decision about his proof of claim or about preference actions against him, somebody else would decide?

THE WITNESS: Absolutely.

THE COURT: Okay. All right. You are excused. Thank you very much.

THE WITNESS: Thank you, Your Honor.

MR. SLADE: I know it's late, Your Honor. Mike Slade for the Debtors. Before we close the evidentiary record, there was just one thing that the Debtors wanted to tell the Court.

I think we're just kind of struggling with what to do with what the SEC said, you know, an hour or two ago. You know, after years of doing nothing, now we have a

THE COURT: Okay. On timing. We're not going to have argument tonight because it's already 7:20. And I would like to be able to understand the arguments, participate in them. Monday I am committed to judge one of the quarterfinal rounds at the moot court competition that Mr. Hage has organized. So that would make it difficult for us to continue on Monday, unless you wanted to start argument on Monday afternoon. Or we can resume Tuesday.

But in either event, I would think that you're going to have to have agreement by Binance to move that milestone about the entry of the confirmation order. Because I won't have enough time to hear argument even if we do it on Monday and to make sure that we get something entered even if I were to rule that way.

MR. GOLDBERG: Your Honor, Adam Goldberg. I'm asking my client right now.

THE COURT: Okay.

MR. SLADE: Mr. Azman was mentioning he may have a scheduling conflict. If we can work it out, does the Court have availability on Wednesday?

MR. AZMAN: Well, actually, I don't think it works for Debtors. So don't -- are we going to be in-person for argument? I guess that's the question I had. Is there any --

THE COURT: I would prefer that, yeah. Tuesday I

3 day Tuesday. On Monday, I cannot remember what time my 4 round starts at St. John's. I just don't remember. But I
5 would only have -- whatever time I could give back here, I
6 would only have a few hours in the afternoon.

7 MR. SLADE: As long as we can get relief from the 8 milestone, that --

9 THE COURT: Resuming Tuesday would be best.

10 CLERK: Your Honor, if we start on Tuesday, it
11 would have to be Tuesday at 11:00 a.m. And I would ask that 12 the parties -- is this going to be Court Solutions or is it
13 going to be a hybrid hearing?

14 THE COURT: It will be the same way we've done the 15 hearing itself.

16 CLERK: I would ask those parties who are going to 17 participate through Court Solutions to please register your 18 appearance before the hearing and register at 11:00 a.m.
19 Please don't make all different times. Today I have to 21 THE COURT: Okay. But let's make sure that that 22 is our time before we ask everybody to do that. We've still 12 Hage, what time are the quarterfinal rounds? Do you have 13 any idea what my schedule is on Monday?

14 MR. HAGE: I don't. I think you're right. I

5 THE COURT: Well, I'll never turn anybody down who 6 wants to do that.

7 UNIDENTIFIED SPEAKER: So I have 15 years of legal

9 I've seen a lot of judges. And this whole confirmation
10 hearing is the first time I've actually participated in a 11 hearing. And lo and behold (indiscernible). But there have 12 been other creditors who have participated in the hearing,
13 and there has been mixed reviews. Some people saying, you 14 know, you seem like a good judge, some people saying that 15 they would prefer a different judge.

16 But I just want to say from what I've seen, you,
17 compared to other judges I've seen in my lifetime, are 18 actually very patient, very understanding, very helpful, and 19 very accommodating of us creditors. And I just want to say
20 that I really do appreciate that, and I hope you have a
21 great weekend, and I will see you Tuesday.

22 THE COURT: Thank you. On that patient,

1 while I call up my schedule here.

2 MR. HAGE: The first round (indiscernible) and 3 then (indiscernible).

4 THE COURT: Yeah, I know it's the second round. I
5 just can't remember if it's before or after lunch. I
6 thought it was just before lunch.

7 MS. TREVINO: Your Honor?

8 THE COURT: Yeah.

9 MS. TREVINO: This is Lisa Trevino, pro se
10 creditor. I just wanted to quickly ask you something. I
11 reached out to Kirkland & Ellis from our last hearing, not 12 this confirmation hearing. And I still don't have the 13 information that I had asked for. And it is the third, and 14 we have to get our information done by the 16th. Apparently 15 that's 13 days away. And seeing that I've been on these 16 confirmation hearings, I will have to work (indiscernible).
17 I am trying to get an answer on when I'm going to get that 18 information. I've sent emails, calls. I've spoken only 19 with one person. The gentleman called me back 20 (indiscernible). He said they were going to go back to 21 Voyager to get that information.

22 MS. SMITH: Your Honor, this is Allison Smith at 23 Kirkland. I actually corresponded with Mr. Trevino this 24 week and did relay to her that Voyager is pulling that data
25 and would send it as soon as they have it available and

1 offered to set up a call to walk through it with her. So
2 it's all in process and we are trying to get to her as 3 quickly as possible.

4 MR. TREVINO: I understand. But what I'm trying 5 to say is 13 days is not going to be enough time. And 6 that's going to be an issue. And, Your Honor, I would 7 really ask that you would move that back seeing that I have 8 asked for this information for quite some time and there is 9 a problem with my claim and I am really asking you to do
10 that, to move it back a little bit.

11 THE COURT: Let me just ask you. Work with the 12 Debtors. See what information you get. If for some reason 13 you need an extension of the deadline, you can ask then for 14 an extension of the deadline. But let's first just see if 15 they can get you information and see if it requires anything
16 else at that point. Okay?

17 MS. TREVINO: I think I missed what you said, sir.
18 It was too low. I couldn't hear you very well. I'm sorry.

19 THE COURT: What I was saying was just talk to the 20 Debtors. Get the information when they have it. If you
21 find at that point that you need an extension, you can ask 22 for it. But let's take it a step at a time. First get the 23 information and then see how much of an issue there is and 24 whether we really need any more time. Okay?

25 MS. TREVINO: Okay, Your Honor. I appreciate

1 a different time Monday. 10:00 Monday. Okay?

2 UNIDENTIFIED SPEAKER: Your Honor, I intend to 3 argue, but I have to travel to Ohio for another matter on 4 Tuesday morning. So can I do it by telephone?

5 THE COURT: Yes, you may.

6 UNIDENTIFIED SPEAKER: Thank you.

7 THE COURT: All right. Anything else before we 8 adjourn for the day? Okay. Thank you very much.

9 (Whereupon these proceedings were concluded at 10 7:31 PM)

1 that. I will be updating you. Thank you very much.

2 THE COURT: All right. I've finally gotten to my 3 schedule. And I am completely wrong. I am not judging the 4 quarterfinal round, I am judging the semi-final round, which 5 starts at 1:00 on Monday and ends sometime around 3:00 or 6 3:15.

7 MR. HAGE: I suspect that if you contacted the 8 (indiscernible), they could reschedule you for morning or 9 find a substitute.

10 THE COURT: Well, they might. But it's already 11 7:30 on Friday. How are they going to do that?

12 MR. HAGE: I can make a call (indiscernible). I 13 know, for example, that there (indiscernible) who has 14 volunteered to do a fill-in if necessary. And I suspect
15 that there are other judges in the preliminary round session
16 who would be willing to switch to make the accommodation.

17 THE COURT: Well, if it's a fill-in, then I can 18 just give you the entire day. And with apologies to St.
19 John's and the Duberstein competition just let myself be 20 replaced. Are you sure you have a replacement?

21 MR. HAGE: (indiscernible).

22 THE COURT: All right. In that case, we will
23 resume Monday at 10:00.

24 So notwithstanding what Lorraine said earlier, if 25 you're calling in for Court Solutions, Monday at 10:00. Not

PROCEEDINGS

THE COURT: Please be seated. All right. And we're ready to continue on the Voyager case.

MR. SLADE: Yes, Your Honor. Good morning.

THE COURT: Good morning.

MR. SLADE: Mike Slade for the Debtors. I hope you had a good weekend. We have a couple of updates for the Court. First is that Your Honor had made three requests of Binance at the beginning of the confirmation hearing. And Binance has agreed to make the changes for the first two.

First, we added language to the plan, clarifying that cryptocurrency that is sent to Binance for customers will always be held in trust by Binance. So I think what Your Honor had said --

THE COURT: For all time.

MR. SLADE: For all time. Your Honor wanted to make that clear, and there's additional language now. This is in the revised plan that was filed at Docket No. 1138 at Article 4(c) on page 31. And so I think it makes it abundantly clear, and hopefully the Court will agree.

Second, Your Honor had asked with respect to the unsupported jurisdictions that Binance give a cash out option to all customers after three months in parallel with the option given to, Your Honor used the example of customers in Ohio, and Binance has agreed to that. That appears in language that is in the new plan Article C(3)(c)(i)(A) on page 23 of the plan. And so those two issues should be resolved.

Your Honor had also asked them whether it was possible to segregate customer data. That, we were not able to convince them to change for Binance. They could explain this to you whenever Your Honor would like, but it's an economic issue for them. One of the things they bought of the transaction was customer data, which Voyager had the right to sell under Voyager's customer agreement and privacy policy. So two out of the three changes were made, and the revised plan was filed at Docket No. 1138. And I would offer that into evidence.

THE COURT: What is the problem on the data transfer?

MR. GOLDBERG: Your Honor, Adam Goldberg of Latham Watkins on behalf of Binance.US. Thank you for the opportunity to address the Court on this issue.

Essentially, Your Honor, the data transfer is from Binance.US's perspective a core economic element to the deal. This is a retail case, and in the retail world, getting a customer in the door is everything. And so what this --

THE COURT: Well, I thought what I said the other day was that I didn't mind the transfer of the customers'

212-267-6868

www.veritext.com

516-608-2400

contact information, that it was just the remainder, the customers' bank account, social security number, things like that that would be transferred only after a customer had elected to become a customer of Binance. So what's wrong with that?

MR. GOLDBERG: So on those issues, that data remains valuable to Binance.US, regardless of whether the customer joins.

THE COURT: How?

MR. GOLDBERG: Well, it can be valuable if the customer ever joins the platform in the future. As Your Honor is well aware, over the last year we've seen tremendous volatility in the crypto markets. People can choose to exit the market and maybe come back in in the future. And having that information reduces the cost materially of onboarding a customer by having their KYC information on hand already.

On this point, I think, Your Honor, it's important to note that the Voyager privacy policy squarely provides the ability of Voyager to transfer this data in connection with the transaction to sell its assets, expressly including a bankruptcy case.

THE COURT: Is there any reason you want it, other than potentially to make onboarding easier in the future?

MR. GOLDBERG: Your Honor, that's the primary

212-267-6868

Veritext Legal Solutions
www.veritext.com

516-608-2400

information that's been accumulated here by Voyager.

I'm not convinced that just the possibility that some customer will change his mind in the future and elect to become a Binance customer is good enough reason to send everybody's -- all of everybody's sensitive information to Binance, even people who may not want to be Binance customers.

MR. GOLDBERG: Your Honor, I should add Binance provides the ability for any customer to delete their accounts and their data. If a customer joins the Binance platform and clears their assets out of that account, they can then delete their account and their data on Binance.

This goes to the fundamental point, Your Honor, Binance.US wants the opportunity to have customers experience the platform.

THE COURT: If I require the wind down trustee, or it should be the wind down plan administrator. I'm sorry, the terms have been changing so much that I'm having trouble using the right one. If I require the plan administrator to keep custody of the customer data, so that if you do have somebody who changes their mind in the future, it can be immediately transferred to you by that customer. Why doesn't that solve your issue?

MR. GOLDBERG: Well, that requires additional resources on Binance.US's part, as well as materially

212-267-6868

Veritext Legal Solutions
www.veritext.com

516-608-2400

reason. It is a valuable data. It reduces the cost of onboarding. And it was part of the purchase price agreement, and I think that that is a core part of why the transaction was agreed at this pricing level.

I think Mr. Tichner (ph) testified that Binance.US was asked to modify these terms and that this was an economic point that affected the purchase price. So we would respectfully request that Your Honor approve that part of the transaction as part of the confirmation as a whole if Your Honor is so inclined on the basis of the 97 percent class acceptance of the transaction that evidences the interest of the estate and the will of the majority behind this transaction, Your Honor.

THE COURT: I have to tell you, I'm not entirely convinced.

MR. GOLDBERG: I understand that parties have raised issues with this aspect of the deal. No one has submitted any law or evidence contrary to the legal position that the -- each --

THE COURT: Well, just because you can do something doesn't mean you should. Right? There's got to be a business -- good business reason for it.

People, especially these days, are entitled to have concerns about their sensitive financial and personal information, particularly given the nature of the

212-267-6868

Veritext Legal Solutions
www.veritext.com

516-608-2400

impacting, you know, administrative expenses of the case --

THE COURT: Why does it require additional resources on your part?

MR. GOLDBERG: Well, I think rather than having a bulk data transfer, it would require additional data transfers as and when people elect in the future. The ability of having that data, and having someone be able to clear their account and trade very quickly is of economic value to Binance.US. They would not have agreed on this purchase price without these terms. Mr. Tichner testified to that and that was uncontroverted, Your Honor.

THE COURT: I don't remember him testifying to that specifically. And I certainly don't have testimony from Binance on that point. So you're saying customers can elect to erase data and get rid of their accounts, right?

MR. GOLDBERG: Yes.

THE COURT: So why shouldn't a customer have the right to opt out of this data transfer and say that you don't get their information?

MR. GOLDBERG: Well, that's a great question and that goes exactly to the retail nature of this case, is that Binance.US negotiated for the opportunity to have customers experience the platform. Because it's one thing to say I don't want anything to do with Binance.US, it's another thing to experience the platform and decide after you have

212-267-6868

Veritext Legal Solutions
www.veritext.com

516-608-2400

1 the opportunity to take a look at it.

2 Getting the customer in the door is the value of 3 this deal, and that's the core fundamental economic 4 proposition.

5 THE COURT: Nobody is going to be in the door
6 unless they elect and sign Binance's various -- whoever's on 7 the phone, stop talking. Mute yourself. I'm having a
8 question with counsel here, please.

9 Customers have to go through other procedures
10 before they -- it's not like they're automatically --
11 without doing anything else, customers of Binance, right?

12 MR. GOLDBERG: That's right, Your Honor. The 13 customer has to accept the Binance.US terms.

14 THE COURT: And if they don't, nothing happens.
15 So I'm still stumped here. Why shouldn't a customer be 16 allowed to say, I don't want you to have my data?

17 MR. GOLDBERG: Well, each customer agreed in their 18 contract with Voyager, Your Honor, that Voyager had their 19 data and could sell that data as part of a transaction.

20 THE COURT: But I already said, just because you
21 legally can do something doesn't mean you should.

22 MR. GOLDBERG: I understand, Your Honor. The 23 reason -- the equitable reason that we should do this 24 transaction is because all customers benefit with payment of 25 money into the estate from these terms, and they would not

1 seeking new -- a new injunction, Your Honor.

2 THE COURT: You've added to your proposed order
3 brand new injunctions that would broadly ban the federal and 4 state governments from contending that an of your 5 transactions -- restructuring transactions are illegal or in 6 violation of any state or federal regulation of any kind,
7 and that would ban them from suing any person involved in 8 the transactions to stop them in any way, or to hold them
9 liable in any way.

10 You didn't seek such thing. In fact, just the 11 opposite of what you sought and what your original order
12 said. How is that an appropriate way to seek an injunction?

13 MR. SLADE: I guess that's not our interpretation
14 of what we're seeking. And if we need to adjust the 15 language, we can. What the Debtors are trying to do is, you
16 know, create a transaction and once we implement that 17 transaction in good faith, assure that we are not going to 18 be, you know, come after -- after the fact, after Your Honor
19 has approved the transaction.

20 To us, it's aligned with the common exculpation
21 terms that are in, you know, nearly every plan.

22 THE COURT: Not really. I don't think I've ever 23 issued an order in connection with plan confirmation that 24 says that if a regulator thinks there's a problem, the 25 regulator can't stop.

212-267-6868

1 have agreed -- Binance.US would not have agreed on these 2 economic terms without acquiring all of this data.

3 THE COURT: And what if I were to just say that 4 anybody who hasn't become a Binance customer within six
5 months, you're required to delete their data?

6 MR. GOLDBERG: So I don't know, Your Honor. I'd 7 have to consult with my client. I don't think that that 8 would be part of the deal, and I believe that they would 9 seek economic adjustments to the transaction.

10 THE COURT: All right. You should talk to your 11 client and find a solution to this because I'm having 12 problems with it. Okay?

13 MR. GOLDBERG: Thank you, Your Honor.

14 MR. SLADE: Thank you, Your Honor. Again, Mike
15 Slade for the Debtors.

16 As I told you when we last left on Friday night,
17 the Debtors regrouped over the weekend to try to assess what 18 to do in light of the SEC's position. The other amendments
19 that were made to the plan that was filed yesterday relate
20 to the 1145 exemption. To the extent --

21 THE COURT: Do you seriously think that filing a 22 proposed order on Friday that has new injunctive terms is 23 compliance with due process with the procedures for seeking 24 an injunction?

25 MR. SLADE: I don't perceive us as being -- 516-608-2400

1 MR. SLADE: We're not saying that, Your Honor. If 2 --

3 THE COURT: Sure, you did. That's exactly what 4 your proposed order says.

5 MR. SLADE: So we certainly can work on the 6 language. What our position is, is that if the SEC were -- 7 let's say, as an example, the plan is confirmed, and then 8 two weeks later, Cepheus says we want to block the 9 transaction. We're not saying that Cepheus doesn't have the 10 power to do that. They do. What we're saying is that our 11 efforts to implement the order that Your Honor would approve 12 today, that --

13 THE COURT: What if two weeks from today, the SEC
14 wants to accuse Binance of being an unregistered
15 broker/dealer and to shut its operations until such time as 16 it files registration?

17 MR. SLADE: Same thing.

18 THE COURT: They can do that?

19 MR. SLADE: They can do that.

20 THE COURT: It didn't look to me like they could 21 do it from reading your order.

22 MR. SLADE: Well, what we are trying to accomplish
23 is that -- what we are doing to effectuate the plan, until 24 and unless they change the rules, okay, they can't come back
25 to us and say retroactively, you are violating the rules, even though all you were doing is honoring and trying to effectuate a court order to return cryptocurrency to customers. That is not -- that is not a fair outcome.

212-267-6868

THE COURT: Let me put it differently. Are you saying that you don't want individuals who are doing what I have given them permission to do, to be subject to penalties?

MR. SLADE: Correct.

THE COURT: So you're not trying to stop anybody from doing what they can -- what their regulatory authority would otherwise permit them to do?

MR. SLADE: Correct.

THE COURT: Simply saying that if I authorized them based on the evidence in front of me, they shouldn't be penalized based on a regulator later saying, by the way, I didn't tell you at the time, but this was wrongful.

MR. SLADE: Correct, Your Honor. And I'll just -- as an example, Your Honor authorized us to start the rebalancing when Your Honor approved the APA a month or so ago. Then we see in there a filing that they think that might violate the securities laws. It doesn't make any sense for us to come and propose a plan, and for us to get approved and start implementing it because we want to return cryptocurrency to customers as soon as possible, and then for the regulators to come at us after the fact that said, we could have those three things removed, our objection to that language would be taken care of.

THE COURT: All right. We'll get to the exculpation a little later, but I was more focused on the new language that was proposed, and just what it was trying to get at and what the proper scope of it would be.

How about the SEC or the Justice Department? The other people who weighed in on this. With that clarification, do you have an objection?

MS. SCHEUER: Your Honor, Therese Scheuer from the U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission.

Your Honor, I think we would need to see the precise language that the Debtors are proposing. I would note that, you know, we have objected to confirmation on the plan because there are risks that, you know, the transactions may violate the security (indiscernible - 10:25:44). And to somehow, you know, be enjoining us because -- in the face of our highlighting these regulatory concerns is -- you know, Section 523(a)(19) (indiscernible - 10:26:06) prohibits -- excuse me, Your Honor, prohibits the discharge of securities (indiscernible - 10:26:13) violations in individual bankruptcy cases.

So I'm just unclear about precisely what the Debtors will be seeking with this revised language.

THE COURT: I think what they're saying is -- you

oh, yeah, remember those super vague rules? They meant that was illegal. That is not what's supposed to happen here.

THE COURT: A number of governmental entities who've objected to your language, if all of the language is -- if we change it to clarify, the only thing that it's doing is saying that the people who have done what I have authorized them to do are not liable for having done so, do you have a problem with that?

MR. SLADE: That's fine, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Let me ask -- I assume that the SEC and the other agencies who would object to this language are on the phone, although I haven't looked at the list. Are they there?

MS. RYAN: Good morning, Your Honor. This is Abigail Ryan with the State of Texas. And we did object to the language. Were changes to clarify that language are fine. I think that very helpful because we read that language as you did, to be very broad.

The only other portions that are objectionable are the references back to paragraph 97 and 99 in the plan, and to the exculpation provision. I mean, 97 and 99 in the proposed order, and exculpation provision in the plan.

That basically guts any type of regulatory enforcement as it excludes us from bringing any type of case. They're injunction provisions, Your Honor. And so if know, at this point, the SEC hasn't actually taken a position. It's sort of indicated to me in what I can only describe as conclusory terms that there might be an issue as to the VGX token. But I think all the Debtors are saying is that, look, if based on the evidence that I have today, I authorized the Debtors to do certain things, then the people who do what I say that they can do shouldn't be penalized or in hindsight subjected to penalties for allegedly having violated laws and regulations that the applicable regulators haven't stood up in front of me and said affirmatively that they're being violated. That's just not fair.

You know, I understand, and nobody's trying to stop you from making arguments as to whether something's illegal, but if you want to penalize the people who will actually do what they're proposing to do, and that I may authorize them to do, you ought to be speaking up and taking a more affirmative position today and not just showing up later and say, got you. You know? We didn't give you any reason to think that what you were doing, you know, was going to be punished, but you know, now we've decided to do so.

I mean, that's just -- how is anybody supposed to do anything in the world if they have that hanging over their heads?

MS. SCHEUER: Your Honor, it's not in every case that we raise these kinds of concerns. The SEC has objected to plan confirmation. We objected at the disclosure statement phase. We objected to the motion to approve the sale. The Debtors here are seeking to immunize themselves and third parties. And they're -- I mean, the language that they have in now, and I understand, you know, that it's -- they may be changing it, but it would allow them to make securities laws and other violations in connection with their restructuring transactions.

They're asking Your Honor for permission to violate the securities laws to give them essentially a blank check. We've raised concerns regarding the sale. We filed an objection to the sale and disclosure statement. The parties have been on notice that there are regulatory concerns here and they've proceeded at their own risk.

I think that we would have to analyze the -- you know, any revised language (indiscernible - 10:29:10) if we could get comfortable with it.

THE COURT: The parties who are in front of me are entitled to know whether they can proceed or not. If you want to reserve the right to try to stop them and enjoin what they're doing, if and when you eventually make up your minds about this stuff, then I'm not going to stop you from doing that.

But are you seriously telling me that without way that doesn't, in hindsight, come back and unfairly punish the people who may do what I authorized them to do. If that's not good enough for you, then we'll have a full-blown litigation today about whether this is legal or not, and I'll make findings on it today. And they will bind you.

And I cannot imagine that you want that. Okay?

So all the Debtors are suggesting is that when we have no clear contention that anything is in violation of law, quite the opposite. We have the regulatory agencies sort of -- practically deliberately avoiding taking a position on the issue. That when I authorize it to go forward and, in fact, order that it go forward by my approval, that those people who are doing what I have authorized are not subject to penalties or liabilities for having done so. That's standard exculpation that I've done in a lot of bankruptcy cases.

So I would hope you would agree to that because the alternative is we just have to open up the hearing. Because the one thing I'm not going to do is basically say, go forward, but take your chances. That's not fair. It's absolutely not fair. I don't know anybody in this case who would or should go forward with that kind of risk hanging over their heads.

So the language that I've approved in other cases, I don't have it memorized, but in the Aegean (ph) case, I taking a position on the issue at all, and only telling me what the potential issue might be in a limited sense, that I should leave a sword hanging over the heads of anybody who's going to do this transaction, and tell them that although I'm approving it, by the way, you might get -- you know, be the subject of an enforcement action, and subject to whatever penalties the securities laws might impose on you, that it's okay with me, but, you know, you'd be crazy if you did anything because you have no idea what the government might do.

How can a bankruptcy case or any court proceeding function with that kind of suggestion?

MS. SCHEUER: If Your Honor is suggesting language that is (indiscernible - 10:30:37) with 1125(e).

THE COURT: I mean, look, if you want to do it a different way, I'll tell you -- I'll compel you to come forward with your evidence. And I will hold against you as a matter of collateral estoppel and res judicata if you don't come forward with it. Okay?

So there's no way that I'm going to approve a transaction that essentially says to the business people involved here, go ahead. Go forth. Subject yourself to penalties. Okay?

I'm trying to leave you the ability to do what your regulatory authority compels you to do, but just in a said that parties were exculpated from liability for entering into and performing under agreements and transactions that have been approved by the Court. Okay?

And I think all the Debtors are saying is, you know, it's just like personal liability of the people involved. We're not trying to stop you from saying that as a regulatory matter, something should be stopped. It's just if you come in later and say, you know, we didn't tell you at the time, but that was illegal and you're subject to this fine and penalty. That's what it's meant to focus on.

MR. SLADE: Your Honor, the language we were looking at over the weekend was from Aegean and also from the Fairway case that Honor had.

THE COURT: Mr. Morrissey?

MR. MORRISSEY: Your Honor, very quickly. Richard Morrissey for the U.S. Trustee. Good morning, Your Honor.

I just -- just for a point of clarification regarding what Your Honor just said, coupled with what Your Honor said a few moments ago about when we're going to deal with the exculpation issues in general, I'm perfectly prepared to wait for that.

But one of the issues we had was who generally is covered by the exculpation provision, not just what actions are covered. And I can defer that, but one of the issues we have is that the distribution agent is included in the exculpation provision. As a matter of fact, something was just added to Article 6 of the plan, stating that rather specifically, and I just didn't know when Your Honor wanted to deal with that issue. But I'd be happy to wait if that's Your Honor's preference.

THE COURT: Let's wait.

MR. MORRISSEY: Thank you.

THE COURT: All right. Does the SEC need time to

--

MR. BARNEA: Good morning, Your Honor. I'm sorry. Can you hear me over the telephone?

THE COURT: Who's speaking?

MR. BARNEA: This is J.B. Barnea from the U.S. Attorney's Office. We filed a limited objection to the last proposed approval order last week, and then we saw the revised language last night. If it would be possible for the government to be heard as well.

THE COURT: Yes.

MR. BARNEA: So our concerns are somewhat different, although overlapping with those of the other governmental entities that Your Honor just heard from. We cannot agree to an order that broadly immunizes all participants, including non-debtors, from all possible liabilities to all possible government authorities in connection with implementing, you know, a variety of should both have a positive obligation to do those things, and be subject to punishment under different statutes for doing exactly what they are obligated by my order and the Bankruptcy Code to do, makes no sense. Okay?

So if somebody thinks that what the individuals, what the Debtors are going to be doing is illegal, they should be speaking up. Okay? We are not going to bar people from enjoining things. All we're saying is that people shouldn't be subject to punishments.

If the SEC wants to step in and say Binance should not be allowed to go forward because it's operating as an unregistered dealer, I don't think anybody is stopping them. If the SEC wants to try to enjoin the distribution of VGX, I don't think we're trying to -- well, maybe we're trying to stop that, depending on the 1145 issue that I haven't heard yet. But not by this language we're not.

All we're saying is in the context of exculpation, you know, that there are people here who are going to be ordered by me to do these things when I confirm the plan. And that should carry with it an exemption from legal liability for doing what I am, in effect, ordering them to do. Unless you want to step forward and tell me why I shouldn't order them to do it. And so far, nobody's been willing to do that.

Telling me people on notice. First of all, transactions.

Transactions may incur taxable income. They would then have to be responsible for those texts -- for the resulting payment of tax. And if there's a disagreement, the IRS has to be free to go after them. People might commit fraud in some ways, civil or criminal, in engaging in transactions. The government has to be free to pursue that fraud. People may violate all -- any number of rules or regulations. We understand that the Court is prepared to approve a transaction. It seems that way. And that's fine.

And in the event that --

THE COURT: Nobody is trying to deal with any of those things. Here's the issue. Under Section 1142(a) of the Bankruptcy Code, the Debtor and any entity organized or to be organized for the purpose of carrying out a plan, shall carry out the plan. Okay?

There is an affirmative statutory obligation once I confirm a plan for the plan to be carried out. Now, nobody has been willing to come forward and to actually have a litigation in front of me today on the question of whether anything that the plan would require the Debtor or the winddown Debtor to do is actually illegal.

And if I confirm the plan, those people will have a positive obligation under the Bankruptcy Code to do what the plan contemplates. So for anybody to suggest that they

212-267-6868

Veritext Legal Solutions
www.veritext.com

nobody's on notice of anything here. I have a hard time understanding just what basis it is for the limited things that you told me the other day. And I certainly, if I were one of the individuals who had an obligation to carry out this plan, I wouldn't feel very comfortable that I knew exactly what risks I was taking.

MR. BARNEA: Your Honor, the government -- putting aside -- the government -- the parts of the government that I represent right now, as opposed to the SEC or any other office that may be separately represented in this case, don't have any current sense that any specific transaction is itself illegal. But that does not mean that someone may not in executing those transactions violate some rule or regulation, or incur a tax liability, or do something else that may expose them to some kind of liability to the government. And that is --

THE COURT: That's fine.

MR. BARNEA: -- what we are trying to protect against.

THE COURT: They may vary from what they're compelled to do under the plan, and may engage in who knows what the mind can invent that might go wrong. And nobody's trying to say that people are freed from that. They may commit tax fraud. They may lie. They may do all kinds of things, but the question is, you know, if I'm approving a

212-267-6868

Veritext Legal Solutions
www.veritext.com

516-608-2400

1 plan that authorizes a distribution to VGX, a pointed
2 example, and by my confirmation of that plan, the Debtors
3 are under a statutory obligation to distribute VGX in the 4 way that the plan contemplates.

5 For somebody to come in and say, you people who
6 did that are subject to fines under the securities laws,
7 even though you had no choice once I ordered it, would be 8 rather absurd, wouldn't it?

9 MR. BARNEA: Well, to the extent that the Court is 10 providing exculpation as allowed under 1125(e), I think 11 that's uncontroversial. If the question is if the Court is 12 going beyond that, that is a separate question.

13 THE COURT: Well, I already issued a decision in 14 Aegean about what I think about exculpation, and that I
15 think that I do have the power, and it is absolutely 16 appropriate for me to say that if people engage in 17 transactions that I approve, after notice and a hearing, 18 they shouldn't be liable for having done so. That makes 19 perfect sense to me.

20 Otherwise, I'm in effect having a meaningless
21 confirmation hearing, and leaving you with a regulatory veto
22 of what I'm doing. And you may have veto to the extent --

23 MR. BARNEA: Well, another way to put it is Your 24 Honor is authorizing parties to do something and they are -- 25 those actions are subject to the normal rules and laws that

1 heard any contention that Voyager is the issuer of Bitcoin,
2 for example, which would -- and I have -- while I won't
3 contend that I understand all of the arguments about the 4 commodity and securities laws here, I would have trouble
5 understanding an argument that Voyager was the issuer.

6 So you've proposed that I find that everything is 7 exempt under 1145. But under 1145, to the extent that the 8 plan includes the offer or sale of a security of an issuer
9 other than the Debtor, that there's an exemption only if the 10 issuer of such security is required to file reports under 11 Section 13 or 15(d) of the Securities Exchange Act of 1934.
12 And in -- okay. I -- just I'll stop right there.

13 You're not prepared to tell me that you have 14 identified an issuer of all of these cryptocurrencies and to 15 show that they are in compliance with that provision so that 16 1145 applies to them, are you?

17 MR. SLADE: We included the language because the 18 SEC had said that VGX may be a security, and to the extent
19 they ultimately come to that conclusion, it would be likely 20 that Voyager was the issuer. So that's what we were talking 21 about when we included the 1145 language.

22 THE COURT: Yeah, but the language you've proposed
23 said all of your transactions, all of your cryptocurrency
24 transfers are exempt under Section 1145. Nice try, but I
25 mean, you plainly can't satisfy that requirement, can you?

1 all actions in the world are subject to.

2 THE COURT: But you didn't listen to what I said.
3 When I confirm a plan, I'm not just giving somebody an 4 option. I'm not telling them that it's okay with me, and 5 they just take their chances. Under the statute, once I
6 confirm the plan, there is an affirmative obligation to do
7 what the plan contemplates. It's not an option. Okay?

8 The people who are involved here are required to 9 go forward. So it's not like I'm saying, well, it's okay
10 with me if you want to take that risk. That's not what it 11 -- that's not what confirmation amounts to.

12 MR. BARNEA: I understand Your Honor's position.
13 The government respectfully disagrees, and we would like to 14 see any final language to which we may well still have 15 objections before this matter is resolved.

16 THE COURT: You can certainly see final language,
17 and I'll ask the Debtors to dig out from the Aegean case, 18 and try to propose some language that's more consistent with 19 that.

20 What about this 1145 issue? You know, I don't 21 really have any indication at the moment of who is contended
22 to be the issuer of any cryptocurrency that might constitute 23 a security. There was a reference to VGX, and my guess 24 would be that the contention would be that Voyager was the 25 issuer or is the issuer of VGX. But I don't -- haven't

1 MR. SLADE: We understand Your Honor's point. We 2 were talking about VGX. Who knows what the SEC is going to 3 say tomorrow.

4 THE COURT: All right. So you want to say that to 5 the extent that VGX is intended to be a security issued by 6 the Debtor, that it's subject to 1145? I don't know. Maybe 7 they have some theory that it's a security issued by 8 somebody else.

9 MR. SLADE: I don't know what their theory is.
10 They won't tell us.

11 THE COURT: But I can't apply 1145 if it's their 12 -- that's their theory, because you can't show me that the 13 issuer, if it's somebody else, just complied with those 14 other requirements. Right?

15 MR. SLADE: Well, I'm not sure if I can or can't,
16 to be honest. I would have to check with other folks that 17 know more about the token than me.

18 THE COURT: If the issuer were somebody other than 19 Voyager, you'd have to show me that the issuer had filed -- 20 had been required to file the reports under Section 13 or 21 15(d) of the Securities Exchange Act of 1934. How would you 22 do that?

23 MR. SLADE: I don't know.

24 THE COURT: Yeah. So to the extent you say that 25 Voyager is the issuer of VGX, you're asking for the

1 application of 1145.

2 MR. SLADE: Correct.

3 THE COURT: And I saw the SEC's supplemental 4 objection, where they say that you just haven't made the 5 showings that you need to, and I think to the extent that,
6 as I have said, the extent that you wanted to seek the 7 application of 1145 to every cryptocurrency that you are 8 transferring, I think the SEC is entirely right. You
9 haven't and I don't think can make such showings.

10 But as to VGX, is there an -- what's the objection
11 as to the application of 1145?

12 MS. SCHEUER: Your Honor, Therese Scheuer for the 13 Securities and Exchange Commission.

14 THE COURT: Yeah.

15 MS. SCHEUER: Your Honor, I will just begin by 16 noting that these provisions were added to the plan and 17 confirmation order overnight. We had conjured and knew the 18 Debtors arguments, to the extent they have any, with respect
19 to VGX, and to discuss with other divisions, including the 20 Division of Corporation Finance. It is their role to review
21 these types of transactions.

22 If it's acceptable to the Court, we would request
23 permission to make a written submission following argument
24 on these issues, and any specific questions that Your Honor
25 may have regarding 1145.

1 under the terms of the plan?

2 MS. SCHEUER: Your Honor, (indiscernible -
3 10:50:23) that 1145 is not available for the proposed
4 transaction because the crypto assets, including VGX, being 5 purchased and sold were not in exchange for claims. In the 6 rebalancing exercise, (indiscernible - 10:50:39)
7 distribution of securities for which there is no Securities
8 Act exemption.

9 For VGX, the rebalancing exercise appears to 10 involve within market purchases and sales that are not in 11 exchange for claims against the Debtor.

12 THE COURT: But when the --

13 MS. SCHEUER: So there's --

14 THE COURT: When the Debtors turn over VGX to 15 Binance for credit to customers' accounts, how is that not a
16 distribution on a claim?

17 MS. SCHEUER: Your Honor, I don't think you can 18 separate out that piece of the distribution from how it got 19 there. And it got there through the rebalancing transaction
20 or the rebalancing exercise.

21 THE COURT: Well, the Debtor have held VGX for a
22 long time. Right? I suspect that if the Debtors have done
23 anything, they've probably reduced how much VGX -- I don't 24 -- I have no idea what -- how the rebalancing worked. But 25 let's just focus on that, you know, to leave aside the

212-267-6868

Veritext Legal Solutions

516-608-2400

1 THE COURT: Well, I raised the 1145 issue, and I'm
2 not sure I -- I'm not sure it's something that the Debtors
3 have to affirmatively invoke in their plan, is it?

4 MS. SCHEUER: Well, Your Honor, the Debtors have 5 the legal burden of demonstrating that 1145 of the Code or 6 4(a)(2) are available exemptions for them. And they've 7 provided no argument.

8 I am prepared to, you know, go forward with an 9 argument today, but I think as -- you know, to the extent
10 Your Honor has an additional specific question --

11 THE COURT: Well, I think the Debtor's initial 12 position is probably that VGX is not a security. So that's 13 probably why they didn't mention 1145. And I think what 14 they're saying is, hey, if you think otherwise, and this is 15 the question I had for you the other day, if you think 16 otherwise, the SEC, why wouldn't Section 1145(a) be 17 applicable?

18 And you're in the same boat you were the other
19 day, where you keep telling me it's the Debtor's burden.
20 It's the Debtor's burden. What is it that you think the 21 Debtor needs to prove that the Debtor hasn't shown in that 22 case?

23 If VGX is a security issued by the Debtor, what 24 more do you think the Debtor needs to show to me in order to 25 be entitled to Section 1145 as to the distribution of VGX

1 rebalancing. Let's just focus on the distributions. Okay?

2 When the Debtors --

3 MS. SCHEUER: Your Honor --

4 THE COURT: -- deliver things to Binance --

5 MS. SCHEUER: I don't think the Debtor --

6 THE COURT: Obviously, when the --

7 MS. SCHEUER: I don't think the Debtors were --

8 THE COURT: Obviously, when the Debtors give VGX
9 to Binance for credit to customer accounts, that is a
10 distribution on a claim.

11 MS. SCHEUER: My understanding, Your Honor, is 12 that VGX is subject to the rebalancing exercise. It is not 13 -- the Debtors aren't engaging in a rebalancing of VGX.

14 THE COURT: But when the Debtors take the VGX that 15 they have and give it to Binance for credit to a customer's 16 account, that act is plainly in distribution on a claim, 17 isn't it?

18 MS. SCHEUER: Your Honor, I don't think that you
19 can separate that fact out from how it got there. And it 20 got there through the rebalancing transaction -- the 21 rebalancing exercise.

22 THE COURT: So you're saying -- I understand that 23 you're saying that the rebalancing may have been 24 unauthorized transactions in securities. And I'm -- I 25 understand that you don't want to give up that argument, but

1 I'm trying to focus on, you know, they are different things,
2 whether you complained about how the Debtors got them or 3 not.

4 When the Debtor has turned VGX over to customers,
5 as the plan contemplates, that plainly is a distribution on 6 a claim, right?

7 MS. SCHEUER: Again, Your Honor -- I understand
8 Your Honor's position, but I don't think that you can -- 9 (indiscernible - 10:53:35) position is that you cannot 10 separate the transaction out into those pieces. You have to 11 look at how VGX got there.

12 And as part of the rebalancing, you know, it
13 appears that Voyager is conducting a distribution of VGX to 14 Binance or any other party that's acting as a broker of 15 trades on behalf of Voyager in the rebalancing exercise.

16 Neither 1145 nor any exemption for that matter,
17 including 4(a)(2) is available for Debtors that are 18 conducting distributions. Nor is it available for 19 underwriters involved in such distribution.

20 THE COURT: Who is the underwriter here?

21 MS. SCHEUER: Potentially Binance.

22 THE COURT: How is Binance an underwriter here?

23 MS. SCHEUER: It could potentially be Binance or 24 any other party acting as a broker of trade on behalf of 25 Binance -- or Voyager in the rebalancing exercise.

1 giving them a chance to be heard. I'm not going to give 2 them a long time to be heard because they have had some 3 notice. But if they want to make a submission, I'm going to 4 let them make it. And we're going to have to fix our timing
5 here, because either that or you drop your request as to the 6 VGX finding, because they're entitled to let me know what 7 their position is.

8 MR. SLADE: Okay. We also have a milestone for 9 today that Binnace has not --

10 THE COURT: That's what I'm saying. You better
11 change it or you better drop the VGX, because we're not 12 going to do both. I'm not going to overrule the SEC's
13 objection without letting them be heard, and do all that 14 today just to meet your milestone. The issue has come up
15 too late.

16 So I will require them to make a submission. I'll 17 require it by tomorrow. I'll rule promptly. But you're 18 going to have to get relief from your milestone. I'm not 19 going to let your milestone be used to squeeze a party on an 20 issue that only came up effectively for sure over the 21 weekend. Okay?

22 MR. SLADE: The other thing I want --

23 THE COURT: I think it was reversible error for me
24 to do so, which wouldn't serve any of your purposes.

25 MR. SLADE: I'm not sure about that, but I

1 THE COURT: Is that --

2 MS. SCHEUER: And if Your Honor would like further
3 detail on that, we would request permission to submit a
4 written submission.

5 THE COURT: Do you think any broker is an 6 underwriter?

7 MS. SCHEUER: In the rebalancing transaction,
8 Binnace or potentially any other party acting as a broker of 9 trades on behalf of Voyager in that transaction may be 10 acting as an underwriter.

11 MR. SLADE: Your Honor, briefly. Just to respond
12 to the SEC's request for more time, I mean we provided them
13 all the information they requested about VGX in 2021. Since 14 the bankruptcy, we have responded to numerous information
15 requests from the SEC. I was on weekly calls with the SEC
16 to make sure we were satisfying their information --

17 THE COURT: You didn't ask for a specific 1145
18 finding until you -- until after I raised the issue on 19 Thursday, and then you mentioned that you might on Friday
20 night. And then you did over the weekend.

21 MR. SLADE: Well, the SEC didn't tell us that they 22 even thought anything might be a security until Friday
23 afternoon, after refusing to take a position the day before.
24 So --

25 THE COURT: But I'm not going to rule without

1 understand Your Honor's point. The one other thing I just 2 wanted to make sure that there was no ambiguity about,
3 pursuant to Your Honor's order that you entered, approving 4 our entry into the APA, the Debtors have been doing the 5 rebalancing. We have been selling VGX. And so I didn't 6 want Your Honor to be under any other impression, because 7 that has been happening, as Your Honor authorized us to do.

8 THE COURT: I understand that. No, I do
9 understand that.

10 MR. SLADE: Okay.

11 THE COURT: Right.

12 MR. SLADE: I was actually just standing up to 13 complete the evidentiary record, and I was going to hand the 14 podium to my colleague to do argument. So I guess, Your 15 Honor, I would offer the revised plan that was filed, which 16 was Docket 1138. And we did file a supplemental declaration
17 from Mr. Renzi to explain that as Docket No. 1139. And I
18 would offer those. And Mr. Renzi is here.

19 THE COURT: But I didn't see any supporting facts
20 in Mr. Renzi's declaration. It was just the explanation of 21 why you're seeking it.

22 MR. SLADE: Supporting facts for?

23 THE COURT: For anything. Whether VGX is a 24 security, whether you're the issuer, whether it's proper to 25 issue relief as to anything other than VGX. All I see is a statement that -- an explanation that you're trying to modify your plan, and that an argument is still -- it's not really a declaration with any facts. It's not testimony. It's an argument.

MR. SLADE: Okay. Mr. Renzi did discuss in the declaration why we were making the change, what the change was, and the fact that the Debtors don't believe VGX is a security, and that we have an opinion letter from a nationally recognized law firm supporting that view. I mean, those are certainly facts.

THE COURT: Are you preparing to offer that opinion letter into evidence?

MR. SLADE: I'm not. I don't have authority to do that.

THE COURT: Well, then telling me there's an opinion letter is just hearsay.

MR. SLADE: Not to the extent that it's offered to show that the Debtors are relying on that fact to take a position.

THE COURT: What -- why do I care what they're relying on to take a position? What does that tell me?

MR. SLADE: I think it explains why the Debtors are making this proposal in the plan.

THE COURT: I don't think I need any further explanation. I know why you're seeking the approval, right?

the Court's order, that we won't need the 1145 exception, and so we would be prepared to remove it.

And so what I would propose is we just proceed to arguments on the confirmation issues under the premise that we are going to proceed with the plan that does not include the 1145 exception.

THE COURT: Okay.

MR. SLADE: And I would cede the podium to Ms. Okike to do that.

MS. OKIKE: Good morning, Your Honor.

THE COURT: By the way, let me -- the debtors have closed their case, is there any other party that has evidence they wish to offer?

(No verbal response)

THE COURT: Okay, I'll consider the evidentiary record closed then.

MS. OKIKE: Good morning, Your Honor, Christine Okike of Kirkland & Ellis on behalf of the debtors.

Your Honor, in terms of argument, I would propose to address each of the issues raised by the objectors, followed by opportunity for the committee and the purchaser to weigh in, if they so choose, followed by each of the objectors, just in terms of proceeding in a way that makes sense. Does that work for Your Honor?

THE COURT: I think so, but it may make sense to

212-267-6868

Veritext Legal Solutions
www.veritext.com

516-608-2400

It's pretty obvious why you're seeking it. It's a question of whether you're entitled to it.

MR. SLADE: Okay. I guess I'm -- where would Your Honor propose to go from here? I'm not sure.

THE COURT: Well, if you want the -- first of all, I'm not going to give you a ruling on anything other than VGX. And I'm not going to give you a ruling on anything other than VGX insofar as you allegedly are the issuer of VGX. As to whether I give you a ruling on that, I'm going to let the SEC make a submission by no later than tomorrow morning. And I will review it and consider it, and we either get relief from your milestone as to the entry of a confirmation order, or you'll have to drop the 1145 issue as to VGX. I can't do both.

MR. SLADE: Okay. Can we take a recess and talk about that, Your Honor?

THE COURT: Yeah. We'll take ten minutes.

(Recessed at 11:01 a.m.; reconvened at 11:16 a.m.)

THE COURT: Please be seated. Yes?

MR. SLADE: Thank you, Your Honor, we appreciate the opportunity to discuss it and, you know, collectively, we've come to the conclusion that as long as we get the exculpation in the form that the Court has approved in previous cases and we get confirmation that it's going to apply to the rebalancing that has taken place pursuant to take issue by issue rather than kind of have you run through your position on all --

MS. OKIKE: Yes, correct --

THE COURT: -- 20 issues.

MS. OKIKE: -- that's what I was proposing.

THE COURT: Okay, good.

MS. OKIKE: So, Your Honor, I'm going to start with feasibility. A number of the objections go to the feasibility of the plan.

We believe the plan is feasible. It provides for either the sale transaction or the liquidation transaction, as applicable, as determined by the debtors to be in the best interests of their estates.

Your Honor, with respect to the sale transaction, a number of the objectors question Binance.US's financial wherewithal and the security of the crypto to be transferred to Binance.US.

Your Honor, based on our due diligence and representations made by Binance.US, as highlighted in Mr. Tischner's testimony, we believe that Binance.US has the financial wherewithal to close the sale transaction.

Under the sale transaction, Binance.US would not be required to pay the debtors the value of the cryptocurrency on the Voyager platform to consummate the transaction; rather, Binance.US will only be obligated to

212-267-6868

Veritext Legal Solutions
www.veritext.com

pay up to 35 million in consideration to the debtors. We have performed due diligence on Binance.US and Binance.US's financials show that it has ample cash on hand to pay the debtors up to 35 million in cash.

In addition, the risk of a run on the bank, which has befallen some of the other companies in the industry, is minimized by what we understand to be Binance.US's business model. Our understanding, based on sworn statements by Binance.US, is that Binance.US maintains a hundred percent reserves for all of its customers' digital assets. That means that if a customer has deposited one bitcoin with Binance.US, Binance.US holds one bitcoin on account of such customer. And, importantly, Your Honor, our understanding is that Binance.US does not engage in any lending.

Based on what we know, even if all of Binance.US's customers withdrew all of their assets, Binance.US would still have the financial wherewithal to consummate the proposed transaction.

Although the debtors will transfer substantially all of the cryptocurrency on the debtors' platform to Binance.US, assuming that the vast majority of customers onboard onto their platform, Binance.US is essentially serving as a distribution agent of that cryptocurrency to accountholders in accordance with the plan.

Your Honor, the objectors also question the 212-267-6868

Veritext Legal Solutions
www.veritext.com

516-608-2400

debtors' cryptocurrency will not transfer to Binance.US at closing; rather, cryptocurrency and cash will be transferred to Binance.US following closing on a weekly basis as accountholders and OpCo general unsecured creditors complete Binance.US's onboarding requirements.

Second, Binance.US has to make any cryptocurrency and cash transferred to it by the debtors available to those accountholders and holders of OpCo general unsecured claims that have completed the onboarding requirements within five business days of receipt, and to use commercially-reasonable efforts to do it in 48 hours following receipt.

Third, accountholders and holders of OpCo general unsecured claims will retain all right, title, and interest in the distributions made to them on the Binance.US platform.

Fourth, cryptocurrency will be held by Binance.US solely in a custodial capacity in trust for the benefit of accountholders with no time limitation.

Fifth, cash transferred to Binance.US for further distribution to accountholders or OpCo general unsecured creditors will at all times until transferred to such creditor be held solely in a third party bank account of an FDIC-insured financial institution solely for the benefit of such creditors.

Sixth, Binance.US will not pledge, re-pledge,

212-267-6868

Veritext Legal Solutions
www.veritext.com

security of the crypto to be distributed to customers once transferred to the Binance.US platform. Your Honor, based on our due diligence and sworn statements made by Binance.US to the debtors, we understand that Binance.US holds digital assets of its customers solely in a custodial capacity and on a one-to-one reserve basis. Binance.US segregates customer assets from Binance.US's digital assets on its general ledger. Only employees of Binance.US are able to move customer assets from the platform. Binance.US does not lend or re-hypothecate customer assets.

Binance.US has the technical expertise, required licenses, other than in the unsupported jurisdictions, and existing infrastructure to perform its obligations under the asset purchase agreement, including with respect to the onboarding and making distributions to customers.

Binance.US maintains information security protocols, policies, procedures, and standards consistent with leading industry standards, which are reviewed by multiple independent auditors and which Binance.US believes are adequate to ensure the safeguarding of customer assets and customer personally-identifiable information.

Your Honor, notwithstanding Binance.US's representations, we believe the structure of the sale transaction is designed to minimize risk, which also goes to feasibility. These protections include, first, all of the hypothecate, re-hypothecate, invest, sell, lend, stake, transfer, or use any of the cryptocurrency to be distributed to accountholders for any period of time and without retaining a like amount of cryptocurrency, except as may otherwise be directed by such creditors.

Your Honor, the debtors believe these protections significantly reduce the risks associated with the sale transaction and the transfer of cryptocurrency to Binance.US to facilitate distributions to creditors.

Your Honor, you may be wondering why we are still considering the sale transaction given the numerous rumors regarding Binance.US and, Your Honor, the simple answer is that the sale transaction maximizes the value of the debtors' estates.

As Mr. Tischner testified, based on our estimates, the sale transaction will provide over a hundred million of value compared to the liquidation transaction due to, among other things, the costs of restarting the platform and liquidating 20 percent of the unsupported tokens that cannot be withdrawn in kind. Your Honor, the debtors believe --

THE COURT: What happens under the -- remind me, under the Binance deal, what happens if I confirm it and before closing the SEC gets an injunction against Binance doing business?

MS. OKIKE: Your Honor, at that point, we would

212-267-6868

Veritext Legal Solutions
www.veritext.com

516-608-2400

proceed with the liquidation transaction.

THE COURT: What happens with your Binance deal, is it terminated? Who has what obligation to whom?

MS. OKIKE: I would have to look at the specific termination provisions. We do have a fiduciary out, so we can always exercise that, but there are certain regulatory actions which allow us to terminate the agreement without exercising the fiduciary out.

THE COURT: And, if that happens, does one party owe any money to the other for termination, for expenses, for forfeiting of deposits, any of that kind of thing?

MS. OKIKE: It's very fact specific, Your Honor. There are certain circumstances -- if we were to exercise the fiduciary out in the absence of a purchase or a default, it's likely that their expense reimbursement would be triggered, but if there's a regulatory action, there's -- a lot of those provisions were explicitly included in the APA as to not trigger the expense reimbursement.

THE COURT: Okay. And are there circumstances where Binance would give up a deposit or anything like that?

MS. OKIKE: Yes, Your Honor.

(Pause)

MS. OKIKE: So, Your Honor, with respect to the good faith deposit, if Binance were to terminate the APA, in the absence of a seller breach, we would be entitled to the

MS. SCHEUER: Yes, Your Honor. My apologies, my phone was muted. Therese Scheuer for the Securities and Exchange Commission. And, Your Honor, I should have said it earlier, but thank you for allowing us to participate in the hearing today telephonically.

Your Honor, there's a lot -- going to some of the points that Ms. Okike raised, there's a lack of credible evidence demonstrating that customer assets are secure on the Binance platform. No one from Binance testified and the only evidence submitted about Binance are declarations and testimony from Voyager's professionals.

Mr. Tischner admitted that his team doesn't have expertise regarding the safety of crypto assets or security protocols. He also testified that the debtors haven't hired any expert to assist it in the review of the representations made by purchaser.

Given the specific circumstances of this case, Your Honor, that's concerning. And, as Your Honor has observed, most of the assurances about the safety of assets are based on hearsay. There were apparently some third party reviews of the buyer's security protocols, but the debtors haven't offered an adequate description or details about those reports of evidence. Although there is an officer certificate filed from Binance, it was not admitted for evidentiary purposes and there was no opportunity for

Veritext Legal Solutions
www.veritext.com

good faith deposit.

THE COURT: Okay. Okay, please go forward.

MS. OKIKE: So, Your Honor, we believe that the sale transaction, to the extent that it can be consummated and is in the best interests of the estates, is the most value-maximizing option available to the debtors today, but we recognize that this is a volatile industry and circumstances change every day and, for that reason, we included a toggle to the liquidation transaction whereby the debtors would distribute cryptocurrency and cash to creditors on their own if the debtors determine in their business judgment between now and closing that the sale transaction is no longer the highest or otherwise best option.

So, Your Honor, we believe that the plan is feasible whether we move forward with the sale transaction or the liquidation transactions.

THE COURT: Okay.

MS. OKIKE: Would you like to hear from other parties on feasibility before --

THE COURT: Yes. I think the SEC is the primary objector who raised the feasibility; do they wish to be heard?

(Pause)

THE COURT: Is the SEC on the phone?

cross-examination of the declarant --

THE COURT: What provision of --

MS. SCHEUER: -- and the debtor's professional --

THE COURT: -- Section 1129 of the Bankruptcy Code are you invoking and do you think wasn't complied with by not having a Binance witness testify or by not having an outside security consultant look at the security protocols? Just what is it about that that you think means that I shouldn't confirm the plan or can't confirm the plan?

MS. SCHEUER: Your Honor, we acknowledge that this is a liquidating debtor. The debtor is transferring its assets and its customers to a buyer and I think making it, for practical purposes, a successor, as discussed at the last hearing, the staff believes Binance.US is operating an unregistered securities exchange in the United States. Binance.US and those seeking to trade on Binance.US may be impacted by ongoing regulatory investigations, as previously discussed with the Court. Given these issues, it could be faced with highly challenging legal and practical issues, and Your Honor is well aware of what effect a business failure can have on a crypto platform.

THE COURT: But, you know, it doesn't sound like there's a specific Code provision that you can point to that suggests that I needed to actually have Binance testify about its security protocols, for example, or that the

212-267-6868

Veritext Legal Solutions
www.veritext.com

1 debtors needed to have an independent expert. You're kind
 2 of picking away at what the debtors did in due diligence to 3 try to criticize it, but in terms of whether there should be 4 a sale to Binance, whether that makes sense as a business
 5 matter, I think, under the applicable Second Circuit
 6 authorities, my job and the limit of my authority is to 7 determine whether the debtors have exercised a reasonable
 8 business judgment -- not a guarantee, but a reasonable
 9 business judgment; not even the judgment that I would have 10 made, not even the judgment that another reasonable person
 11 might have made, but a reasonable business judgment.

12 So on some of these points that you're complaining 13 about, you're really saying that you disagree; you would 14 have hired an outside security consultant and not just 15 accepted the audits that the debtors received. You would 16 have wanted a witness by Binance, although you didn't 17 subpoena a witness from Binance and nobody else did either.

18 But at the same time, while you criticize the 19 assurances and the value of the assurances that the debtors
 20 got, nobody here has offered any -- and I mean any -- 21 admissible evidence that anything of any kind is going on at 22 Binance that is wrong, that it is mistreating -- misusing
 23 customer assets, that customers who go to Binance will be 24 unsafe, that it is not doing what it represented in its 25 sworn statement that it does in terms of the handling of

212-267-6868

Veritext Legal Solutions
www.veritext.com

516-608-2400

1 understanding from the debtors, they can correct me --

2 THE COURT: Yeah, I don't --

3 MS. SCHEUER: -- if that is not --

4 THE COURT: -- I don't think that's right. And,
 5 you know, my job, under 1129(a)(11), is to confirm unless it
 6 is likely that there's going to be a further reorganization
 7 or liquidation, the only evidence I have is that it's not 8 likely.

9 I mean, I'm as worried as anybody else. I'm the 10 one who's probably going to be blamed if anything does go
 11 wrong here. But, you know, I'm a Judge; I'm not a 12 regulator, I'm not an investigator, I have -- not only do I
 13 have no independent information on any of these points, as a 14 matter of judicial ethics, I'm barred from having 15 information on any of these points. I can only consider the 16 evidence that the parties have brought in front of me.

17 I am aware of scores of hearsay allegations and 18 conclusory arguments that, gosh, aren't we worried, maybe
 19 Binance is another FTX, but I have absolutely -- and I mean
 20 absolutely -- zero, zero evidence that any of that is true.

21 So, given my role, given what I'm supposed to do
 22 here, how could I possibly say that the risks of Binance
 23 here are so great that the debtors could not reasonably make 24 the choice that they are making? How could I possibly 25 conclude that based on the actual evidence that I have,

212-267-6868

Veritext Legal Solutions
www.veritext.com

516-608-2400

1 customers, that its security protocols are faulty, zero. I
 2 have absolutely nothing on that point.

3 So criticizing, you know, just how strong the 4 assurances are that the debtors have received, how does that 5 get me to the point of saying that, as a matter of business
 6 judgment that the debtors -- no reasonable person could 7 decide to go forward with this deal?

8 MS. SCHEUER: Your Honor, I think it goes to both 9 the adequacy of disclosures -- and this is the final -- the 10 hearing on final approval of the disclosure statement -- and 11 also feasibility of the plan under 1129(a)(11) --

12 THE COURT: Well, under 1129 --

13 MS. SCHEUER: -- Your Honor --

14 THE COURT: -- feasibility under 1129(a)(11) just 15 means that the confirmation of the plan won't be followed by 16 a further reorganization or a liquidation unless a
 17 liquidation is contemplated in the plan.

18 So I already pointed out --

19 MS. SCHEUER: Yes.

20 THE COURT: -- even if everything goes wrong as to 21 Binance and it drops out of the deal, we have a toggle plan.
 22 So I don't see how confirmation of the plan would create an 23 issue under 1129(a)(11).

24 MS. SCHEUER: Your Honor, I think, after the deal
 25 closes, the toggle becomes unavailable. That's my

212-267-6868

Veritext Legal Solutions
www.veritext.com

516-608-2400

1 particularly when you like to make hints and suggestions,
 2 but you haven't offered me anything?

3 You know, you criticized the review of the 4 security protocols. I don't have any reason -- so far as I
 5 know, you don't have any reason -- to doubt the security
 6 protocols that Binance uses, at least you haven't elected to 7 clue me in on any.

8 So, you know, all these little kind of nits and 9 gnats criticisms, how do they amount -- how do they get you
 10 to the point of saying that the debtor's business judgment
 11 has been wrongfully exercised here and no reasonable person
 12 could want to do this?

13 MS. SCHEUER: Your Honor, I think the issues that 14 we're raising can also be looked under 1125 and whether the 15 debtors have provided adequate information about risk and 16 how it could affect customers who transfer to the Binance
 17 platform.

18 THE COURT: Well, the debtors told customers that 19 they understood that Binance holds assets in custody, they 20 told customers that they understand that Binance holds
 21 assets in a one-to-one ratio, so that -- and that it doesn't 22 lend or re-hypothecate. They told customers that they are 23 satisfied that Binance has the financial resources to 24 complete this deal. Okay?

25 Now, you've called this a disclosure issue. I

212-267-6868

Veritext Legal Solutions
www.veritext.com

516-608-2400

1 said at the beginning and I'll repeat it: this is a
2 substantive objection masquerading as a disclosure issue.

3 The debtors have made clear that as questions come
4 up, as newspaper articles appear, they have and will
5 continue to ask questions of Binance. That doesn't mean
6 that every single time they have a conversation with Binance
7 we have to stop, redo the disclosure statement, and start
8 this entire process over again.

9 We would never get anywhere if we had to do that 10 and it would be peculiar because, you know -- well, I'm 11 certainly not going to tell the debtors that they have to 12 stop doing their due diligence at the risk of having to redo
13 their disclosure statement. Maybe they haven't done as many 14 things in due diligence as you think they should have done
15 or you don't like the degree of assurances that they've 16 gotten, those aren't disclosure issues. Those are 17 substantive criticisms of the due diligence, there's no --
18 the debtors haven't changed their conclusions that they 19 offered in the disclosure statement.

20 And, you know, you're just saying that you wanted
21 more, that's all, that you think that the debtors should do
22 more before they do this deal. I don't think those are 23 disclosure issues, I think those are questions of business
24 judgment. The debtors -- I just don't see where, you know,
25 for example, the fact that the debtors looked at an

1 THE COURT: -- as to how --

2 MS. SCHEUER: -- as presented --

3 THE COURT: -- as to how this could affect the 4 ability to trade at Binance, for example, I asked you --
5 your colleague, actually, was standing at the podium on 6 Thursday -- if the SEC were to take action contending that 7 Binance needs to register as a broker/dealer, would that 8 mean that all Binance activities would have to stop, or 9 would it just mean that the particular activities that 10 required registration would have to stop, but that other 11 activities could continue, and your answer was you don't 12 know.

13 So now you're telling me that the debtors should 14 have made a prediction on this point and should have 15 disclosed to their customers exactly what would happen in 16 this situation when you yourself couldn't answer the 17 question. So how does that make sense?

18 (Pause)

19 THE COURT: Do you have an answer?

20 MS. SCHEUER: To clarify, I think, you know,
21 subject to all of the caveats that were stated at the last
22 hearing, you know, as to that point, Your Honor, the staff
23 believes that, you know, based solely on the facts and 24 circumstances known to the staff that they previously
25 stated, that Binance.US is operating an unregistered

1 independent audit of security protocols and didn't
2 commission their own, I don't see that that's a disclosure
3 issue in the slightest.

4 And as to the risk of --

5 MS. SCHEUER: Your Honor --

6 THE COURT: -- as to the risk of regulatory 7 actions, the debtors did say that it's a highly uncertain
8 regulatory environment. There are several places in the 9 disclosure statement they said they couldn't predict what 10 regulators would do. Regulators may decide to take action;
11 it's an extremely uncertain environment, they don't know
12 what people might do.

13 So you can't even tell me what you're going to do,
14 so what was the debtor supposed to say other than what they 15 actually said?

16 MS. SCHEUER: Your Honor, the debtors didn't 17 include how distributions to accountholders and their 18 ability to trade could be affected by regulatory 19 investigations and potential regulatory actions if they're 20 successful. You know, Mr. Raznick testified that those 21 risks he didn't take into account in putting together his 22 liquidation analysis. These are all disclosure issues that 23 could have informed how creditors vote on the plan --

24 THE COURT: Well --

25 MS. SCHEUER: -- because the numbers --

2 those seeking to trade on Binance.US may be impacted by 3 ongoing regulatory investigations and could be faced with 4 highly challenging legal and practical issues.

5 THE COURT: Well, did you say that to anybody
6 publicly before last Friday? And, if not, how are you
7 contending that the debtor should have disclosed it in the 8 disclosure statement that they circulated in January?

9 MS. SCHEUER: I think the regulatory risks were 10 known to the parties -- could have been disclosed by the 11 parties involved.

12 THE COURT: I'm sorry, I couldn't understand what 13 you said; could you repeat it?

14 MS. SCHEUER: Regulatory risks could have been 15 disclosed by the parties involved.

16 THE COURT: They did disclose. They said they 17 didn't know what regulators might do.

18 (Pause)

19 THE COURT: Are you saying they should have 20 somehow anticipated the exact statement that you wound up
21 making this past Friday. They should have read your mind
22 and known six weeks in advance that you were going to take 23 that position?

24 MS. SCHEUER: Your Honor, it could have been 25 modeled from -- in numbers that were provided in the liquidation analysis or, you know, further risk factors or caveats added to make clear that distributions could be affected by those risk factors.

THE COURT: I think they did that. They said they don't know what's going to happen with regulators; that the regulators might take action that might influence or impede the completion of the distributions that are contemplated. I don't know what more they could have said.

Okay. I think the disclosures on these points were sufficient and the criticisms --

MS. SCHEUER: Understood, Your Honor.

THE COURT: -- the criticisms of individual due diligence points are just substantive attacks, not disclosure issues. And I don't think that this goes to feasibility in the sense that term is used in the Bankruptcy Code. There could be regulatory issues here, but the debtors, I think, have tried not to eliminate that possibility, you know, that maybe could have taken a different approach and required you to put your proof on, but nobody has tried to do that. They've tried to give you your regulatory freedom to the extent that it makes some sense here, but all they can do in that regard is say, look, there are risks that people might interfere, regulators might interfere, we can't guarantee what will happen.

But, you know, the only alternative to saying

MR. MORRISSEY: Your Honor, if I may, I do have additional points.

THE COURT: Okay.

MR. MORRISSEY: Your Honor, good morning, Richard Morrissey for the U.S. Trustee. Although I do have additional points to make, there will be some overlap regarding disclosure and feasibility.

At the January 10th hearing on the debtor's motions to enter into the asset purchase agreement with Binance and for conditional approval of the debtor's amended disclosure statement, we pointed out that in the wake of the collapse of Voyager's prior deal with FTX that the creditors wanted to know as much as possible about the new purchaser as they could, not least to be assured that the painful FTX experience would not be repeated in this case.

The creditors had reason to be especially sensitive about the Binance transaction as Voyager was to share their personal information, personal information that Voyager worked so hard to protect at the beginning of these cases with Binance.

Voyager's customers had questions. How stable is Binance? Was the proposed purchaser in the crosshairs of any government investigations? Would any intercompany transactions at Binance impact the customers' cryptocurrency? Was Binance.US truly independent of something like that in this regulatory environment would be to sit around for I have no idea how long and do nothing, and wait until Congress and the competing regulatory authorities sort out amongst themselves just who has what authority over what aspects of this business and what kind of authority they have. I have no idea how long that's going to take and we can't do that in bankruptcy. The Bankruptcy Code doesn't contemplate an endless period of time, things have to be done. We have creditors who are waiting and who, in the midst of all this uncertainty, have no access to property in which they've invested, in some case, their life savings.

So we have to take some kind of action, we have to do something, and we can't just put everything on pause just because we don't know for sure how the regulators will eventually make up their minds on points that they seem to have been debating for years. Okay?

I just don't think that that's really a disclosure point here and I don't think it's a reason to criticize business judgment. Things need to be done, the world needs to move.

Okay, let's move -- I think the U.S. Trustee had objections also on the disclosures about Binance and its controls. Are you satisfied or do you have additional points to make?

Binance.com or Binance.Global?

As the Court has heard over the first two days of this hearing, Voyager's customers still have such questions.

Now, to be sure, Your Honor -- and I'm talking about the disclosure statement here -- if they looked hard enough in various portions of the amended disclosure statement, the customers could find answers to certain other questions such as how their recoveries would be affected if, for example, the litigation with respect to Voyager's intercompany transactions went one way or another, or if Alameda's claim against the debtors were allowed or disallowed. They could also find --

THE COURT: You know, you're standing here telling me that customers found the disclosures on these points inadequate, I don't have a single customer who's taken that position.

MR. MORRISSEY: Your Honor, I apologize if that's what it seems that I said --

THE COURT: That's what you just said.

MR. MORRISSEY: -- that's not what I was trying to say.

THE COURT: You just said that this is all stuff that customers wanted to know, and that might be what you think, but not a single customer has filed an objection on that ground, not a single one, as far as I know.

1 MR. MORRISSEY: Okay. Your Honor, my point is 2 what is and what is not in the disclosure statement for any 3 parties in interest to discover.

4 One example, Your Honor, is that the customers
5 could find a description of Voyager's security protocol,
6 both in the amended disclosure statement and in the 7 declaration that was filed in connection with the debtor's
8 cash management motion.

9 THE COURT: I'm sorry, what is it, you think
10 Voyager should have disclosed its own security protocol?

11 MR. MORRISSEY: Well, no, Your Honor. As a matter
12 of fact, I'm saying that Voyager did. Voyager gave a 13 description in the disclosure statement regarding its own 14 security protocol, it did not give a description of 15 Binance's security protocol. And I'll get into that in just 16 a moment, if I may, Your Honor. The --

17 THE COURT: Didn't they say that Binance
18 maintained wallets at Amazon Web Services located in two 19 jurisdictions and didn't they talk about various 20 certifications that Binance had provided as to its 21 compliance with a number of different security standards?

22 MR. MORRISSEY: That was discussed, Your Honor, in 23 a combination of the declarations submitted shortly before
24 the hearing --

25 THE COURT: I'm pretty sure it was in the

2 The debtors assure the parties that Binance has 3 the wherewithal to consummate the asset purchase agreement,
4 but there's precious little information about Binance.US in 5 the disclosure statement to back up that assurance. Now, we 6 did hear testimony regarding that.

7 Also, as far as the mechanisms to protect the 8 cryptocurrency, we heard that from Voyager's witnesses and,
9 as Your Honor pointed out, there's something about that in 10 the disclosure statement --

11 THE COURT: Well, here -- what you just said is 12 really not so much an argument that there was a lack of 13 disclosure, but that there was -- they didn't kind of 14 incorporate all their declarations into the disclosure
15 statement itself to give a full explanation of all the 16 homework that they had done and intended to do that 17 supported the conclusions that they had reached --

18 MR. MORRISSEY: No --

19 THE COURT: -- that's not really a disclosure.

20 MR. MORRISSEY: Well, except that --

21 THE COURT: When does anybody ever do that in a
22 disclosure statement?

23 MR. MORRISSEY: Well, the -- a lot of the 24 information contained in the declarations and disclosed in 25 the live testimony should have been in the disclosure

212-267-6868

Veritext Legal Solutions
www.veritext.com

1 disclosure statement.

2 MS. OKIKE: Yeah, it's in the disclosure
3 statement, Your Honor, it's Article 5(b)(1)(B).

4 THE COURT: I reread the disclosure statement in 5 preparation for this hearing and I remember seeing it there.

6 MR. MORRISSEY: But, Your Honor, what the debtor
7 provided here in the disclosure statement was assurances 8 about Binance. The disclosure statement was very 9 informative about Voyager's history both before and during 10 the pendency of the cases. It said a lot about where the 11 customers have been, but very little about where they've 12 been invited to go.

13 Your Honor, in a conventional sale -- and the 14 final approval of the sale is up for today as well, as it's 15 part of the plan, assets are exchanged for proceeds and the 16 latter has a reasonably equivalent value to the former.
17 Here, the 20 million or the maximum 35 million amount to far
18 less than the value of the assets.

19 The vast bulk of the sale involves the transfer of 20 the crypto held by Voyager to the Binance.US platform.
21 Although the crypto goes to Binance.US, the debtor's due 22 diligence cannot follow the crypto to Binance.US. Once the 23 crypto has been transferred, the matter is out of Voyager's
24 hands. Voyager's control of the asset is limited to either 25 the 20 or the 35 million, or whatever number in between may

1 statement before the ballots went out, so that the people
2 voting could make a more informed decision as to what they 3 were voting on.

4 And, Your Honor, I'd like to interject one point.
5 It's been repeated many times over the last two days and 6 even in the press about the fact that 97 percent of the 7 creditors supported the plan and they had overwhelming
8 support among the creditors. As I said the other day, Your 9 Honor, six percent of the creditors voted on the plan; I
10 don't know why the 94 percent did not, but the overwhelming
11 majority of the creditors did not.

12 Having said that, Your Honor, I do concede, as I 13 did the other day, that what Your Honor has to consider in 14 terms of whether there's adequate support is in fact the 15 votes that were actually cast, not the ones that were not 16 cast. So we understand that, but I just want to make sure 17 that everyone is clear that there is not an overwhelming
18 support for the plan among the entire creditor body.

19 THE COURT: By the same token, I heard a couple of 20 customers complain about Binance and say they didn't want to 21 go to Binance, only a few. So, out of the thousands of 22 customers who voted and the, what, million customers that 23 exist, I have less than a handful of customers who objected
24 to the proposal of having the debtor deal with Binance here, 25 recognizing that we've also tried to set it up so that customers who don't want to have Binance accounts don't have to have Binance accounts and are free to elect not to have that; right?

MR. MORRISSEY: Yes, Your Honor, and there's also the toggle to the other plan, which we do recognize.

THE COURT: So nobody is forced to be a Binance customer who doesn't want to be a Binance customer.

MR. MORRISSEY: That is correct, Your Honor.

MS. PROVINO: (Indiscernible) --

THE COURT: Who is speaking?

MS. PROVINO: I'm sorry. This is Lisa Provino, pro se. I just wanted to support something that Mr. Morrissey is saying that is quite --

UNIDENTIFIED SPEAKER: (Indiscernible) --

MS. PROVINO: -- which is quite important. I found yesterday that -- and the reason -- this is on his first comment about us not commenting on some of the documents, Your Honor, there have been documents on Stretto that have been deleted. Please note for the record that Docs. 66, 70, 149, 219, 187, 184, 165, 359, 380, 381, 382, 497 (indiscernible) 607, 359, and 1049 documents have been deleted from Stretto.

So it has been very challenging for us, as we have mentioned multiple times, to keep up, but it's even worse when the documents have been deleted. And so, if they have

THE COURT: But it didn't have to be, it was --

MS. PROVINO: That one --

Okike?

MS. PROVINO: I went through -- and then I wanted to mention something else as well.

THE COURT: Well, you should have gotten a big document in the mail.

MS. PROVINO: Sir, I did not. I have gotten nothing in the mail.

MS. OKIKE: Email, email.

THE COURT: Email, excuse me, in the email.

MS. PROVINO: On Document 863? I'm sorry, which are you speaking of? Please clarify for me.

THE COURT: The disclosure statement that we're talking about should have been sent to you by email in approximately mid-January.

MS. OKIKE: Along with a ballot --

MS. PROVINO: No, I did not receive it.

MS. OKIKE: -- for you to exercise your vote.

THE COURT: Along with a ballot.

MS. PROVINO: No, if you remember, this goes to the point -- another point of Mr. Morrissey that 94 percent of the people didn't vote. May I comment again that 3506 people were blocked from voting? Yes, I understand that we been deleted and we have not been able to respond, I want for the Court to know that it's unfair, and we did support what -- excuse me -- what Mr. Morrissey has just stated.

THE COURT: Okay.

MS. PROVINO: So --

THE COURT: You're not --

MS. PROVINO: -- meaning that (indiscernible) --

THE COURT: You did get the disclosure statement; right?

MS. PROVINO: No, not the one that -- which one are you talking about, sir? The one that you mentioned that we didn't respond to that Richard Morrissey just brought up. Which disclosure statement are you speaking of? As I mentioned, there were multiple documents --

THE COURT: There is no --

MS. PROVINO: -- deleted off of Stretto and I'm very upset about that.

THE COURT: There was a large disclosure statement submitted in connection with the request for confirmation of the plan.

MR. MORRISSEY: Your Honor, if it may help, I do remember one ECF document number for the amended disclosure statement, I believe that's the one we objected to, it was Document Number 863 on the docket and I hope that is still there.

got an email about the ballot, but, if you remember correctly, there were several of us that had complained.

And we went to extreme lengths, we did call Mr. Morrissey, as well as many other regulatory bodies that we possibly could, in addition to the debtor. So I just want to see things for the record because --

THE COURT: Let me ask you to hold -- let me ask you to hold on those complaints while we just finish with Mr. Morrissey's comments about the disclosures. Okay? And then we'll come back to you.

MS. PROVINO: That's fine, but I just wanted you to know about we support what he just said and I need you to know that, sir, that's all --

THE COURT: I understand.

MS. PROVINO: -- and especially about the documents, I'm very upset about that as well.

THE COURT: Okay. Go ahead.

MR. MORRISSEY: Thank you, Your Honor.

(Pause)

MS. OKIKE: Your Honor, just to address that point. We understand from Stretto that the docket numbers referenced were removed because they included customer PII.

MS. PROVINO: But that was never mentioned to us at all, so we could have at least downloaded those.

(Background noise)

1 THE COURT: All right, a lot of people have open
2 lines. Please mute your line unless you have permission to 3 speak. Okay?

4 MR. MORRISSEY: Thank you, Your Honor.

5 Your Honor, although Voyager's history and actions
6 are well described in the disclosure statement, when it
7 comes to information about Binance.US, the disclosure
8 statement is more of a statement of assurance.

9 The debtors have said that the objectors have not 10 produced any evidence to counter their assurances about 11 Binance, but it is not the objectors' obligation to make 12 disclosures about Binance, it is the debtors' job to do so
13 and it's a job that the debtors have not done.

14 THE COURT: What should they have said?

15 MR. MORRISSEY: Your Honor, they had a lot of 16 communications between the debtors on one side, and perhaps 17 the committee on the same side, and Binance on the other and 18 they got a lot of assurances from them.

19 Again, I understand that these are restructuring
20 professionals and not specifically crypto experts, but they 21 got the assurances from them, including the fact that there
22 are third parties, independent third parties who have 23 reviewed the security protocols. But the information they 24 got from them was walled off from the creditor body because 25 there was not -- the substance of the information was not in

212-267-6868

Veritext Legal Solutions
www.veritext.com

516-608-2400

1 their restructuring professionals -- were unable to make an
2 independent determination regarding the security protocols.
3 They got a showing, they were satisfied with the showing,
4 obviously, but they didn't make their own determination.

5 And that's why I said, Your Honor, this is more of 6 a statement of assurances than a disclosure statement and 7 that's where I think that the debtors fell short.

8 Your Honor, there are other issues that we have,
9 but, again, I'll defer to other parties and take those on 10 later, such as releases, exculpations, et cetera.

11 THE COURT: Right.

12 MR. MORRISSEY: Thank you, Your Honor.

13 MR. GOLDBERG: Your Honor, if I may be heard?
14 Adam Goldberg of Latham & Watkins on behalf of Binance.US.
15 I'd like to respond quickly to one point that Mr. Morrissey
16 made about the voting and the questions Your Honor has about 17 who voted and why.

18 I was doing some math, looking at the voting
19 declaration, which is at Docket Number 1127, to think about 20 that, and what it shows is that $541 million of claimed
21 value voted in favor of the plan out of the customer class,
22 which in the disclosure statement is estimated at 1.763
23 billion. By my math, that's a little over $9,000 per claim
24 of the people who voted in favor. There was only 10 million
25 in claims that voted against the plan and by my math that

212-267-6868

Veritext Legal Solutions
www.veritext.com

516-608-2400

1 the disclosure statement.

2 THE COURT: What information did they get, the 3 substance of which was not in the disclosure statement?

4 MR. MORRISSEY: They were -- they got assurances,
5 Your Honor, they got assurances that they had the financial 6 wherewithal to --

7 THE COURT: That's in the disclosure statement.

8 MR. MORRISSEY: That they did have the 9 wherewithal?

10 THE COURT: Yeah.

11 MR. MORRISSEY: Yes, it was a -- it was a small 12 comment.

13 And just to put it in perspective, Your Honor, 14 Binance itself, there were three pages out of the 98 in the 15 disclosure statement dedicated to Binance. This plan, Your 16 Honor, is all about Binance, a lot more than it's about 17 Voyager. It's all about what Binance can do holding and 18 protecting the assets on the platform because Voyager, as I 19 said earlier, is transferring the bulk of the assets to 20 Binance.

21 One last point, if I may make, about due
22 diligence, Your Honor. We learned that the debtor's
23 restructuring professionals had reviewed the information
24 that they received from Binance, but because they were not 25 crypto experts, they -- meaning the debtors themselves,

212-267-6868

Veritext Legal Solutions
www.veritext.com

516-608-2400

1 was a little over 5,000 per claim who voted against. The 2 remaining over 900,000 people who did not vote, the 3 remaining claims pool, would be about $1900 per claim.

4 And so what that math shows, Your Honor, is that 5 the people with the greatest interest in this estate voted 6 in favor of the plan.

7 And, Your Honor, this plan, my client's goal, the 8 debtor's goal, as I understand it, is to deliver 9 cryptocurrency to customers as quickly as possible, and 10 that's why we believe that the customers voted 11 overwhelmingly in favor and those with the greatest 12 interests did so.

13 Thank you, Your Honor.

14 MR. HENDERSHOTT: Your Honor, this is Tracy
15 Hendershott, pro se creditor, may I approach the podium?

16 THE COURT: In a minute, Mr. Hendershott. We've 17 got the committee counsel already standing here ready to 18 argue, so we'll hear the committee counsel first.

19 MR. HENDERSHOTT: Thank you, sir.

20 MR. EVANS: Your Honor, Joseph Evans from 21 McDermott Will & Emery on behalf of the committee. I'd like 22 to share a few points and I'll try not to repeat things that 23 have already been said. We think it's important for the 24 creditors to know what the committee's role has been and 25 what we've done in connection with this deal.

1 The committee supports the plan. According to the 2 experts, the Binance deal will give customers incremental
3 value of $100 million.

4 Based on the substantial diligence that we've done
5 concerning the Binance deal, the information provided and 6 the representations made by Binance, the committee supports
7 a plan which includes the Binance deal and the opportunity
8 to toggle. We believe that it's the best available option
9 to get the most crypto back as quickly as possible.

10 One reason why the committee supports the plan is 11 because of the significant protections that the committee
12 negotiated for and obtained in the APA. For example, the 13 Binance.US deal initially contemplated transferring all
14 Voyager crypto to Binance.US before Voyager creditors
15 onboarded with Binance.US. This would mean that Voyager
16 customers' crypto would have been exposed to Binance.US
17 risks for a period of time before they were able to 18 withdrawal. The committee refused that deal.

19 The committee negotiated for and Binance agreed to 20 have customer crypto transferred on a weekly basis only 21 after customers are onboarded with Binance. So, if they 22 choose to withdraw and not be Binance customers, the 23 exposure to Binance will only be for a matter of days.

24 Those provisions are contained in Section 2.4 of 25 the APA.

1 that diligence is ongoing.

2 With respect to one important report from Reuters
3 on February 16th, 2023, we've done diligence and we were 4 assured that; one, Merit Peak does not withdraw a customer
5 fee out of crypto; Merit Peak nor any other market maker had 6 the ability to withdraw a customer fee out of crypto; and 7 Merit Peak no longer conducts any activity at Binance.US.

8 And we'd like to take a moment to speak about the 9 SEC's position. With respect to the SEC, the SEC staff
10 statements on Thursday, Friday, and this morning do not 11 change the committee's position. We were particularly 12 unmoved by the SEC staff statement this morning that we are,
13 quote, "on notice" of some unspecified regulatory violation;
14 we are not.

15 On Friday, the SEC attempted to clarify its 16 position with respect to its objection. In its 17 clarification, they said on four separate occasions that 18 these were statements of the staff and not the Commission.

19 Why does that matter? Well, for one thing, the 20 staff cannot bring lawsuits without approval from the 21 Commission. The staff cannot initiate an administrative 22 proceeding without Commissioner approval.

23 In a statement from then-Chairman Jay Clayton, he 24 stated that, quote, "The Commission's long-standing position
25 is that all staff statements are nonbinding and create no

1 There are also provisions that we negotiated for 2 that made clear that when Voyager customer crypto goes to 3 Binance that Voyager customer crypto remains property of the 4 estate until the customers have the ability to withdraw.
5 And there is also the fiduciary out, which has been the 6 subject of a lot of the testimony, though, before Your 7 Honor.

8 The second reason why the committee became 9 comfortable with the Binance deal was because of the 10 significant amount of due diligence conducted by the 11 committee, the debtors and their professionals.

12 The committee interviewed Binance.US executives on 13 these issues on seven separate occasions. And, as this 14 Court heard from experts from BRG and Moelis, the Binance
15 deal is the best available deal for creditors. So the 16 committee supports a plan which includes the Binance deal.

17 There was a number of representations that we've 18 all heard that were important. The crypto is held on a one-
19 to-one reserve basis; the company segregates the company's 20 assets from customer assets; CZ, Binance.Global, anyone
21 outside of Binance.US cannot take customer crypto out of 22 Binance.US; and the company does not lend or re-hypothecate
23 the customer assets.

24 There were also a number of press releases,
25 Tweets, congressional letters. We've also diligenced those,

1 enforceable legal rights or obligations of the Commission or 2 other parties."

3 In short, this statement from the SEC staff about
4 what they believe is not something that we can meaningfully
5 consider when weighing against $100 million of customer
6 value.

7 The staff stated that the VGX, quote, "has the 8 attributes of a securities transaction." So even the staff
9 is not willing to say that VGX is a security.

10 With respect to Binance, they say that Binance.US
11 is operating as an unregistered securities exchange. Well,
12 what does that mean? You could be operating an unregistered 13 securities exchange because one token that you're selling is 14 a security, there's ten tokens that you're selling as a
15 security, there's a hundred tokens that you're selling as a 16 security. We don't know what they're thinking and they're 17 not willing to tell us.

18 Let's say, for example, they think BUSD stablecoin
19 is a security. Okay. There was a statement a few weeks ago
20 from Paxos indicating that they were being investigated for 21 BUSD. Okay. The committee and its professionals, the 22 debtors and its professionals, did not consider the Treasury
23 and BUSD in connection with their valuation of whether 24 Binance.US can close the deal; they have enough cash in the 25 bank to do so.

212-267-6868

When you look at the recent actions against crypto exchanges and settlements, on January 19th, the SEC settled charges with Nexo for $22.5 million; on February 9th, the SEC settled with Kraken for $30 million. Those amounts, even multiples of those amounts, would not impact Binance.US's ability to close the deal based on the diligence we've performed.

The SEC's stated purpose is to protect investors. The SEC's refusal to take a firm position here stands to harm retail investors. The SEC staff is asking the Court, the UCC, and the debtors to eradicate $100 million of creditor recovery based on a position that the staff members cannot even get the Commission to support. They are saying we are on notice that there may be a regulatory violation.

From where I sit, the SEC staff statement appears to be designed to intimidate the professionals and the fiduciaries to refuse to go forward with the plan, hoping that we will be afraid of having a decision called into question and we will choose to instead erase over $100 million of customer recovery. We are not going to do that.

We have had one goal from the outset of this case: get as much crypto back to customers as quickly as possible. The SEC's refusal to take a firm position does not alter that goal. The committee supports the plan.

THE COURT: All right. Thank you.

attending these meetings at personal sacrifice.

Everyone is in agreement with the Department of Justice and it's unfair to state that if thousands of creditors do not invest the time for every nuance of this trial that he does not speak on our behalf. And I just wanted to call that out to your attention for your consideration.

THE COURT: Okay. Just to make clear, Mr. Hendershott, today there are substantive issues that I -- as to whether the plan complies with the requirements of the Bankruptcy Code and, of course, I'll hear everybody's testimony about that. There's also the issue for the final approval of the disclosure statement and my comments about not having a creditor complaint about the disclosure statement I think reflected the fact that the information that Mr. Morrissey says should have been in that lengthy document, but wasn't, I said I hadn't gotten any complaints from creditors to that effect.

Now, what you just said really is to the effect that creditors shouldn't have to read all of that, but that doesn't really support Mr. Morrissey's objection because what Mr. Morrissey is saying is that you should have read all of it and that there should have been even more in it for you to read, which seems different from what you just said to me.

Mr. Hendershott, it's your turn.

MR. HENDERSHOTT: Yes, sir, thank you. I just want to tag onto Mr. Morrissey as a representative of DOJ and address comments that you've made, as well as we've heard throughout this entire trial comments from counsel to the debtors-in-possession that by not hearing from a plethora of creditors that means agreement with what is going on.

I understand the counsel for the debtors, they're being paid to advance their agenda and that's why they would promote that false narrative, but I know, Your Honor, I don't believe you have an agenda. And I just want to call out that it's an undue burden, you know, to expect creditors to miss work, you know, spend all of their nights and weekends, you know, reading thousands of documents.

The Department of Justice is the voice of creditors here. Every single objection and motion that the Department of Justice has pushed throughout this trial, starting with trying to object to the KERF, which actually had 2,000 creditors documented as going against it, and that information was held from me, Your Honor, when you specifically asked what is the creditor perspective of that.

They also try to protect us with data privacy ombudsmen. And you've heard the handful of creditors that have sacrificed their work relationships and they're

MR. HENDERSHOTT: I apologize, sir, if I misspoke, but that was not my intent. I never intended to say creditors should not have read the disclosure statement. I was certainly -- my intent was to call out that I wished more credence of Mr. Morrissey and his department representing and speaking on behalf of the creditors was taken into consideration.

Thank you.

MS. PROVINO: Exactly. This is Lisa Provino, pro se again, I support that last statement. And we are reading the documents, Your Honor, that's why I brought up the deletion of the Stretto documents just for the record.

THE COURT: Okay.

MS. RYAN: Your Honor, this is Ms. Ryan with the Texas Attorney General's Office. We did have a disclosure statement objection and if I may address it now?

THE COURT: Yes.

MS. RYAN: So, in reading the disclosure statement, the information pertinent to customers was not easily laid out for the consumers to see and digest. And one particular segment of the information that was buried is these Alameda claims and what will happen to the customers, the consumers if the debtor is not successful in fighting these claims.

And I don't think any of the creditors objected to

Veritext Legal Solutions
www.veritext.com

212-267-6868

516-608-2400

1 that because they didn't see it, it wasn't there. It was 2 hard to tease out.

3 And so, in that regard --

4 THE COURT: The information --

5 MS. RYAN: Yes, sir.

6 THE COURT: -- the information about the effect of 7 the Alameda's claims that you say should have been in the 8 disclosure statement, you cite that information and it comes 9 from the disclosure statement. The very information that 10 you say should have been in the disclosure statement is 11 information you took from the disclosure statement.

12 MS. RYAN: You're right, Your Honor. My point is 13 it was buried in this disclosure statement.

14 When we're working with this many consumers -- I
15 do lots of work for consumer protection in bankruptcy --
16 generally, we make those things easy to read and easy to 17 find and in this disclosure statement they just aren't. In 18 fact, on the page that I would assume most consumers would 19 look at, there is no reference to the drastic cut of the 20 returns --

21 THE COURT: I don't --

22 MS. RYAN: -- if Alameda is successful.

23 THE COURT: -- I don't agree with you. You know,
24 there are so many things that the Bankruptcy Code requires
25 to be in and practice requires to be in a disclosure

212-267-6868

Veritext Legal Solutions
www.veritext.com

516-608-2400

1 THE COURT: Well, because some of the
2 distributions will be in the form of cryptocurrencies and 3 because cryptocurrency values can fluctuate quite widely,
4 there is no practical ability to be extremely precise in 5 what people will actually get, but the debtors did offer an 6 analysis in the liquidation analysis of specifically what 7 recoveries would be under the financial transactions, what 8 recoveries would be if they toggled to the other plan, and 9 what recoveries would be if instead they were to be under 10 Chapter 7.

11 And they did that, frankly, I think, as precisely
12 as circumstances permitted. Given the nature of this 13 business, given the nature of some of the uncertainties, and 14 given the nature of the assets, I don't know how anybody
15 could have been any more precise than they were.

16 MS. RYAN: Your Honor, I believe they could have 17 added one more column that said recoveries if Alameda is 18 successful, and that would have given an estimated bottom
19 number and that was not disclosed.

20 THE COURT: But it's in a footnote on the same
21 page, isn't it?

22 MS. RYAN: Your Honor, it is -- the footnote on 23 that page does not tell us any type of percentage and it
24 doesn't actually point to the consumers' claims or 25 accountholders' claims, it's in a general section at the

212-267-6868

1 statement, and then so many additional things that the 2 debtor added because of objections and criticisms and 3 comments that were received in January, that to say that all 4 of that somehow should have been done in an easily-read-and-
5 digestible form, you can't do it, you just can't.

6 Disclosure statements necessarily are long; they necessarily 7 have things in different sections. You can't take 8 everything that every individual thinks is important and put 9 it on page 1 because there's 180 pages of things that 10 everybody would want to be on page 1. You just can't do it.

11 It is in there and I'm not going to say that it
12 was inadequate just because you don't think it had as much 13 highlighting or was as easy to find as you think it should 14 have been.

15 MS. RYAN: Your Honor, I understand your point and 16 I still object. I do believe that that should have been 17 highlighted better for the consumers and it wasn't. And I
18 think an effect of that lack of -- that lack of highlighting 19 for the consumers is the fact we have no idea of what a 20 bottom return number would be, it's been quoted in the 21 disclosure statement as low as 24 percent, it's been quoted
22 in testimony as high as 48 percent.

23 The consumers have really no understanding of the 24 bottom of their return and I think the disclosure statement
25 was also very inadequate in that manner.

212-267-6868

1 top. And so I don't think that it was meaningful for the 2 accountholders.

3 THE COURT: By the way, I know you were heard when 4 we considered the initial approval of the disclosure
5 statement in January, did you raise this issue then?

6 MS. RYAN: Honestly, Your Honor, I don't remember.

7 THE COURT: Okay.

8 MS. PROVINO: What date was that? I can check.
9 This is Lisa Provino. I wrote notes.

10 THE COURT: In January, I don't remember the date.

11 MR. MORRISSEY: Your Honor, Richard Morrissey for 12 the U.S. Trustee. Actually, I raised the issue and a 13 footnote was added, and my questions or comments were very 14 similar to Ms. Ryan's that they were hidden in -- certain 15 things were hidden in different parts of the disclosure 16 statement at the time. I don't remember, however, whether 17 Ms. Ryan chimed in.

18 THE COURT: But we discussed it and the change we 19 made is what I approved, right?

20 MR. MORRISSEY: Yes, Your Honor.

21 THE COURT: I don't think anybody complained that 22 the change we made didn't adequately address the objection.

23 MR. MORRISSEY: Your Honor, there's another aspect
24 of that as well. The intercompany transfers, the litigation
25 on that, will also affect possibly the distribution.

212-267-6868

Veritext Legal Solutions
www.veritext.com

516-608-2400

THE COURT: One at a time.

MR. MORRISSEY: Yes.

THE COURT: So, in terms of the Alameda, you know, I vaguely remember some issues coming up and we put this information in specifically to address them, and my understanding is that that took care of the objection and that there -- you know, to say now that it just wasn't highlighted or was in the wrong place, I don't think that's sufficient for me to find that the disclosure statement was inadequate. Okay?

MS. RYAN: Okay, Your Honor. I had one other issue that I wanted to raise now and then when we come to the releases and exculpation issue, I'll save my arguments for then.

Texas does have concerns with the security on Binance's side and we believe that Texas is an unsupported jurisdiction whose customers can't go over to Binance right now. Their personally identifiable information should not be transferred to Binance.

I understand Binance bought the customer list and so information such as emails, so they can market once they are licensed in Texas, that's fine, that should go over, but bank accounts and other personally identifiable information transferring I think is not appropriate in this case.

THE COURT: Okay.

212-267-6868

Veritext Legal Solutions
www.veritext.com

516-608-2400

and, whether it was Binance.US or Binance.com, it was a requirement to be licensed in Texas and they refused to do so.

Likewise, in the documents uploaded to support the Binance due diligence done, no mention of Binance.US's wherewithal is mentioned in there, none. All we have is hearsay testimony or testimony that they relied upon X, Y, Z, and we've never seen X, Y, Z. And so we actually are very concerned with Binance's financials as there's very little to no information in the record about it.

And that's all of my argument for now, Your Honor.

THE COURT: If Binance doesn't have the 20 million or 35 million or whatever it's supposed to pay at closing, then the deal will be done, right?

MS. RYAN: Correct.

THE COURT: So --

MS. RYAN: Well, that --

THE COURT: -- what do we need to --

MS. RYAN: -- my -- Your Honor, my big concern is -- you know, 25 or 30 million, they can probably pay that, I haven't seen any proof that they could -- my concern is, six weeks after the sale closes Binance ends up in bankruptcy and all of the accountholders that transferred over are once again in this same position.

We don't have evidence that Binance won't end up

212-267-6868

Veritext Legal Solutions
www.veritext.com

516-608-2400

MS. RYAN: And then, finally, on the feasibility of the plan, Texas is concerned with the lack of information on Binance's wherewithal. Binance abandoned their Department of Banking license application after a year for failure to give us financial information that was necessary. Binance's documents --

THE COURT: Wasn't that --

MS. RYAN: -- that were just filed --

THE COURT: -- wasn't that a refusal -- in Texas, wasn't that a refusal to give you financial statements of its parent company, isn't that what led to the --

MS. RYAN: Your Honor, I would need to go back and look at the abandonment letter. Regardless, it is a qualification to be licensed in Texas and they would not provide us the information.

THE COURT: But --

MS. RYAN: Secondly, the --

THE COURT: -- as I recall -- as I recall your prior submissions on this point, Binance.US gave you and was willing to answer your questions about its finances, but declined to give you information about the finances of its parent company; right?

MS. RYAN: I again would have to go back and review the documents, but the point is Binance doesn't want to disclose financial information when regulators require it

212-267-6868

Veritext Legal Solutions
www.veritext.com

516-608-2400

in a liquidation like FTX did, Your Honor. We don't have evidence as to their financials --

THE COURT: We don't have any --

MS. RYAN: -- to make sure they won't.

THE COURT: We don't have any evidence that they will, do we?

MS. RYAN: Your Honor, it's the debtor's burden to prove that Binance is -- that it is a good business judgment to sell to Binance and right now I don't see anything that proves Binance isn't going to end up in bankruptcy too because we have no financial information.

THE COURT: But when you say you don't see enough to prove it, you're just saying that you wouldn't make the same judgment. You don't trust --

MS. RYAN: No, I don't --

THE COURT: -- the evidence that the debtors have relied on?

MS. RYAN: No, that's correct because the debtors haven't shown us what they relied on for financial information. They've testified as to hearsay and they've testified that they relied on some documents, which nobody has ever seen except them. And so, no, I don't trust that evidence, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Okay. Anything else --

MS. RYAN: Thank you.

212-267-6868

Veritext Legal Solutions
www.veritext.com

516-608-2400

THE COURT: -- Ms. Ryan?

MS. RYAN: Not at this time, Your Honor. I will reserve some argument for the releases and exculpation provisions. Thank you.

MR. GOLDBERG: Your Honor, Adam Goldberg of Latham & Watkins on behalf of Binance.US, if I may respond to a few points.

First, on the personal information point, we are working on coming back to Your Honor on that issue, but I think, generally speaking, this is a fundamental and core aspect of the deal that is the basis for the economic transaction embedded in the $20 million purchase price.

On the point of the abandonment of the application as Texas asserts, Binance.US completely disagrees with that characterization. In Binance.US's view, they made every effort to provide financial information that was requested of Texas to them. Texas found that that was not sufficient and deemed the application withdrawn. Binance is working on providing -- on filing a new application, which we expect to be done as soon as possible.

And Binance.US continues to make every effort to work with the State of Texas to resolve its issues to make it -- take it out of the category of being an unsupported jurisdiction, as we have done with Vermont.

On the question of feasibility and Binance's

212-267-6868

Veritext Legal Solutions
www.veritext.com

516-608-2400

for example, is like it says only employees of the company are able to -- this is number 5 -- only employees of the company are able to move or withdraw the customer assets from the company's platform.

So there's that portion about my assets and then I think it's number 8 where they talk about access to my personal identifiable information. It doesn't say anything about whether my assets or my personal information is in the U.S., like is it being, you know, held here in the U.S., or is it being possibly held say like in China or something like that?

So that does concern me that it doesn't say anything like that.

And the other concern that I have is it says, you know, only the company's employees or in the security section it says only the authorized person, but, you know, there are a lot of companies that kind of comingle their employees. So there's nothing in there that says absolutely no one at Binance.com, which is the global (indiscernible) has access to any of my funds or personal information at Binance.US.

So those things I find concerning from a security perspective.

THE COURT: All right. Who wishes to address that objection?

212-267-6868

Veritext Legal Solutions
www.veritext.com

516-608-2400

financial wherewithal to perform the transaction, I think Your Honor has correctly found that the question of feasibility is -- that that is not a question of feasibility in this case; it is a question of the debtor's business judgment. Binance.US provided bank statements to the debtors as the basis for their business judgment. The State of Texas, if they distrusted that information and the debtor's diligence, had every opportunity to conduct discovery on Binance.US and they did not do so.

In our view, the debtor's business judgment is correct in this case because the Binance.US transaction does what we have set out to do from day one of our involvement in this process going back to last year and that is deliver cryptocurrency to customers as quickly as possible.

Thank you, Your Honor.

THE COURT: All right. Anything --

MS. DIRESTA: Your Honor, I'm a pro se creditor, am I allowed to speak to the security issues that have been brought up thus far or do I have to wait for a different time?

THE COURT: Go ahead. Who is this?

MS. DIRESTA: I am Gina DiResta; I'm a pro se creditor. And I read the Binance officer's certificate and one of the things -- or a couple of things that -- let me just go to it -- a couple of the things that they mention,

212-267-6868

Veritext Legal Solutions
www.veritext.com

516-608-2400

MR. GOLDBERG: Your Honor, Adam Goldberg of Latham & Watkins on behalf of Binance.US.

We are -- I think we have provided ample diligence to the debtors on these issues that evidences the security of the information and currency, cryptocurrency that is held by Binance.US. I am working with my client in order to be in a position to respond to the Court directly about where data is held, which would be in accordance with the Binance.US privacy policy, which is available online on the Binance platform.

THE COURT: What does the privacy policy say about where information is held?

MR. GOLDBERG: I'm working on that right now, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Okay.

MR. GOLDBERG: I can understand --

MS. DIRESTA: And I'm sorry, just --

MR. GOLDBERG: -- that that is held in the United States, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Okay.

MS. DIRESTA: What is held in the U.S.? Is it my personal information or also my crypto assets?

MR. GOLDBERG: The response I just received is that I understand personal data is held in the United States. Cryptocurrency is held in the United States and in

1 Japan. So it's disclosed in the disclosure statement.

2 MS. DIRESTA: And what about, you know, the 3 terminology of the company's employees and, you know, let's 4 just use CZ as an example. CZ might be right now an 5 employee of Binance.com, but who's to say that at some point
6 he doesn't be considered an employee of Binance.US, and so
7 then he has access to my stuff. And now, you know, then 8 Binance.com and Binance.US aren't independent like they 9 claim they are.

10 THE COURT: Is CZ an employee of Binance.US and 11 does he have access to transfer customer assets off the 12 Binance.US platform?

13 MR. GOLDBERG: Your Honor, CZ is the ultimate 14 beneficial owner in majority of Binance.US, not the 15 exclusive owner. I can't get into the security protocols in 16 detail in an open proceeding for security reasons. But my 17 understanding is that one individual would not be able to 18 cause the transfer of customer funds off of the U.S.
19 platform.

20 MS. DIRESTA: But my question isn't how many 21 individuals can cause a transfer. My question is can 22 Binance.com employees at some point then be considered
23 Binance.US employees, and therefore, someone like CZ now has 24 access to not just my crypto, but my personal information,
25 when they're supposed to be completely independent.

1 - 12:42:38). And even if they do go with Binance, they can
2 pull their crypto off of the platform immediately. The 3 second that it's distributed and hits their account.

4 MR. GOLDBERG: Your Honor, I would say two things.
5 One, the officer certificate which has been filed in the 6 Court, it says that only employees of the company are able 7 to move or withdraw customer assets from the company's 8 platform.

9 In addition to Mr. Azman's points, no one is 10 required to sign up to the Binance.US platform. If they 11 don't want to be a Binance.US customer, they can have their 12 crypto liquidated and receive cash.

13 THE COURT: The question was are there employees
14 of Binance.US who have access to the cryptocurrencies and 15 the power to move it, who are also officers or employees of 16 Binance.com?

17 MR. GOLDBERG: Your Honor, my understanding is 18 that that is not the case.

19 THE COURT: Okay.

20 MR. GOLDBERG: In terms -- I assume Your Honor
21 meant that there would be officers of Binance.com who could 22 move assets, I believe you may have misspoken. You said
23 Binance.US officers.

24 THE COURT: Well, what I meant was, are there 25 people who do have that power because they are employees of

1 To me, independent means no employee of 2 Binance.com ever touches anything to do with Binance.US.

3 MR. GOLDBERG: Your Honor, I can report to the 4 Court that CZ is not an employee and has no access to 5 personal information of customers or cryptocurrency of 6 customers on the Binance.US platform. I think in terms of 7 the details of the division between Binance.US and 8 Binance.com, they are separate companies. Binance.com does 9 not own Binance.US. They are separate legal entities with 10 separate governance structures. And I think the Debtor's
11 diligence should suffice to satisfy the statutory 12 requirements for their business judgment to go forward with 13 this deal.

14 MS. DIRESTA: But the only person -- the only 15 employee you addressed is CZ because I gave him as an 16 example. But what about all of the other employees, that no
17 Binance.com employees have access to Binance.US assets and 18 customer information; is that correct? That no employees
19 whatsoever, not just CZ.

20 MR. AZMAN: Your Honor, Darren Azman for the 21 committee.

22 While Mr. Goldberg looks for it, I think one thing
23 to remind the Court, at least as it relates to crypto and 24 creditors on the phone is, and this is by design, right, the 25 customers have two options here. They can go (indiscernible

1 Binance.US, who are also officers or employees of
2 Binance.com?

3 MR. GOLDBERG: Your Honor, I understand my 4 client's listening in and reports no.

5 THE COURT: Okay.

6 MR. GOLDBERG: Thank you, Your Honor.

7 MS. DIRESTA: Did I hear him correctly, Your 8 Honor? He said no employees of Binance.com has access to 9 anything in -- with Binance.US?

10 THE COURT: I believe that is what he said. He 11 said that the people who are employees at Binance.US, who 12 have access to and the ability to transfer cryptocurrency,
13 are not officers or employees of Binance.com.

14 MR. GOLDBERG: That's correct, Your Honor.

15 MS. DIRESTA: Okay. And then to the point that 16 the UCC just made about how customers can go to Binance and 17 immediately remove their assets, I understand that. But my 18 personal information still ends up with Binance. So I do
19 still have that concern, regardless of whether I can remove 20 my assets immediately. And also, what system does 21 Binance.US share with Binance.com? Because I think the 22 comingling of systems is not safe and secure. Whether 23 that's regarding my crypto assets or my personal
24 information.

25 THE COURT: Well, I'm not sure, you know, we're

212-267-6868

past the evidentiary stage. We're addressing objections that have actually been made. On this particular point, did you make an objection about this? How does this relate to one of the objections that's actually been made?

MS. DIRESTA: Just related to security issues, and that was being talked about right now.

THE COURT: And it's -- you want to know what contract arrangements Binance.com and Binance.US may have?

MS. DIRESTA: What systems do they share? Because it's -- let's say they share a system that then, you know, can make them get access to my crypto or my personal information, you know, even if it's not intentional or inadvertently. I just don't know how secure that is, if they might be sharing systems.

THE COURT: I'll give Binance a chance to give you a quick answer to that, but I think we've strayed -- we have so much to accomplish today in terms of the objections that have actually been filed, and I think that strays into new territory, to tell you the truth.

MR. GOLDBERG: Your Honor, Adam Goldberg of Latham & Watkins on behalf of Binance.US, again.

I think I would make a couple of points. One is, I'll refer to the officer's certificate, which has been filed with the Court that makes clear that the company, that is Binance.US's relationship with Binance.com, is limited to customers that elect to receive it in that manner.

212-267-6868

THE COURT: Okay.

MR. GOLDBERG: Thank you, Your Honor.

MS. DIRESTA: Your Honor, they just keep bringing up the whole crypto asset portion that I don't have to stay on the platform, but my personal information does stay with them, whether I want to open an account or not. So of course I had security concerns about -- and as you stated in the very beginning of the hearing, why can't they just simply have my email address if they want to market to me? Why do they have to have my bank account, my -- a copy of the photo of my driver's license, my biometric information, and all of those other things.

You know, I'm -- for me, I'm already uncomfortable for them having my email, but now they have all these other things, so they keep saying, well, you know, you can sign up and then immediately remove your assets. That's my asset. But you know what's more important to me is my personal identifying information, especially when identity fraud and hacking is very rampant nowadays. I value that more than thousands of dollars on a platform.

THE COURT: Okay. My understanding is they can't distribute the crypto to you unless you become a customer, and that you can't become a customer without them having to know your customer and other information about you.

the common ultimate beneficial owner and three commercial agreements that the company previously disclosed to the sellers' advisors. On a professionals' eyes only and confidential basis in connection with the sellers' diligence related to the purchase agreement.

Those matters are confidential, proprietary, and would be harmful to the market insecurity to be disclosed. I would believe that the Debtor's diligence, as well as the committee's diligence, have taken a deep dive on these issues. I think this has become extremely apparent from all of these proceedings. The level of diligence conducted on a buyer of assets in this proceeding has been extraordinary and well beyond the norm.

It is, from my experience, much more than would typically be conducted on a seller of assets. And so I would invite the Debtors and the creditors committee to express any concerns that they have about these issues. I understand their diligence continues to be ongoing, as they have testified, but that they are satisfied at present.

And finally, I would make the point, Your Honor, that if anyone individually feels uncomfortable, no one is required to sign up to Binance.com and have their assets on -- excuse me, Binance.US and have their assets on the Binance.US platform. We are merely making the platform available to achieve distributions of cryptocurrency to

I also understand from what they've said to day that any customer has the option of telling Binance at any time, not only to close an account but to delete all that customer's personal information.

I can't make it any better than that. I can't order or suggest to Binance that it make distributions to you without know your customer information and anti-money laundering information, because I would probably be directing Binance to do something that's illegal. I can't do that.

MS. DIRESTA: And I understand that. I just, like I said, don't understand why they -- if I do not want to open an account at all, why they can't just keep my email, but leave the rest. And I don't understand why I have to -- because earlier it was stated I would literally have to sign up for a Binance account --

THE COURT: That's an issue --

MS. DIRESTA: -- and then request them to delete it.

THE COURT: That's the same issue that I have raised as to why they need personal information of people who don't want to open accounts. And I think we're still waiting to hear a definitive answer on what we can do about that. Okay?

MS. DIRESTA: Okay. Thank you so much, Your Honor, for allowing me to speak.

THE COURT: Okay.

MR. EVANS: Your Honor, Joseph Evans from the committee.

Just one thing. There was a question as to inviting us to talk if we weren't satisfied with the diligence (indiscernible - 12:51:41). I want to make clear that the diligence process continues.

THE COURT: I understand. All right.

It's lunchtime. I think we're going to break until 1:40 for lunch. And then we'll continue the argument. Do we have any relief from the inflexible milestone, which is beginning to look like quite a burden on the Court because I not only have a lot of issues to rule on and a decision to prepare (indiscernible - 12:52:17) but also the extremely lengthy order to go through and mark up.

So do we have any relief from the proposed milestone that that all be done by today?

MR. GOLDBERG: Your Honor, Adam Goldberg of Latham & Watkins on behalf of Binance.US. That question has been asked of our client. We do not have an agreement on extension of the milestone at this time.

Time is of the essence on this transaction.

THE COURT: It may be of the essence, but you know you've got an old man as a judge who can only do so much so receive cash distributions on the same timeline as customers in the supported jurisdictions.

Your Honor, New York and Texas allege that the plan unfairly discriminates against account holders in their states by potentially delaying their recoveries relative to account holders in supported jurisdictions and by providing that they will receive their distributions in cash instead of crypto if Binance.US does not get the necessary regulatory approvals.

Your Honor, we took a look at the voting results to see what New York and Texas customers want. And 95.68 percent of Texas customers that voted, voted in favor of the plan and 96.28 percent of New York customers that voted, voted in favor of the plan.

We also confirmed that none of the customers that filed objections are located in New York or Texas based on our most recent contact information that the debtors have for them.

Your Honor, while we're hopeful that we will reach agreements with all the unsupported states, the plan as amended does not unfairly discriminate --

THE COURT: Did you say none of the objectors or none of the negative votes?

MS. OKIKE: None of the objectors based off of our books and records including the ones who had -- did not file quickly. So --

MR. GOLDBERG: We're grateful for your attention and efforts, Your Honor, and all the time you've made available for us. We'll be speaking to my client at lunch.

THE COURT: Okay. Please convey to them my strong urging that they extend that milestone until tomorrow.

MR. GOLDBERG: Thank you, Your Honor.

(Recessed at 12:53 p.m.; reconvened at 1:40 p.m.)

THE COURT: Please be seated.

MS. OKIKE: Good afternoon, Your Honor. Christine Okike of Kirkland and Ellis on behalf of the debtors.

Your Honor, we would propose to move next to the unfair discrimination arguments.

THE COURT: Okay.

MS. OKIKE: So, Your Honor, Binance.US and the debtors have had productive conversations with the unsupported jurisdictions to date. As we noted, we've reached a deal with Vermont which will allow customers in that state to receive in kind distributions. And we're committed to continuing to work with the other three states to try to come up with solutions that will allow customers in their states to also receive in kind distributions.

We have also made revisions to the plan to allow customers in unsupported jurisdictions who do not want to sign up for the Binance.US platform to elect not to and to objections, but have raised concerns during the hearing are located in New York and Texas. I do recall there was one --

THE COURT: There was somebody --

MS. OKIKE: -- woman --

THE COURT: -- who identified herself as --

MS. OKIKE: -- who identified --

THE COURT: -- from Texas.

MS. OKIKE: -- herself as Texas. We don't have her listed as Texas --

THE COURT: Okay.

MS. OKIKE: -- but she may have moved.

THE COURT: Okay.

MS. OKIKE: So, Your Honor, while we'll hope -- we are hopeful that we will reach agreements with all the unsupported states, we do not believe that the plan unfairly discriminates against account holders in unsupported jurisdictions.

THE COURT: How is that -- what is the deal you reached with Vermont and why is that not good enough for all of the states?

MS. OKIKE: Your Honor, we hope that that deal is good enough for all the states. It was reached very recently. I think we filed it the night before the confirmation hearing. My understanding is that Hawaii is likely to also sign onto that deal. But, unfortunately, New

1 York did not really engage with us on any constructive
2 solutions. We have had conversations with Texas that have 3 been productive, but I think they will require potentially a
4 more creative solution than Vermont given --

5 THE COURT: The Texas submission, I was a little 6 befuddled because the Texas submission said, I think, that 7 other than with respect to stablecoins they don't think you
8 need any licenses to do what you want to do and that even as 9 to stablecoins, if I remember right, they thought you could 10 make the initial distributions. It's just that Binance
11 couldn't continue to trade them without some --

12 MS. OKIKE: Correct, Your Honor.

13 THE COURT: -- further approvals.

14 MS. OKIKE: And my understanding is that 15 Binance.US's existing infrastructure does not allow them to 16 turn off trading for specific coins.

17 THE COURT: I see.

18 MS. OKIKE: So Texas, if -- to the extent we are 19 able to reach a resolution will require a more creative 20 solution.

21 MS. WALL: Judge Wiles, this is Jennifer Wall and I was 22 the one that spoke up last week. I am a resident of Texas.
23 I have been a resident of Texas for 43 years.

24 THE COURT: Okay. Thank you, Ms. Wall.

25 MS. WALL: Thank you.

1 permit you to do, isn't that what it is?

2 MS. OKIKE: That's correct, Your Honor. But they
3 can't have it both ways. They can't ask us to comply with 4 regulations that don't permit us to make in kind
5 distributions and also act -- ask for their customers to 6 receive in kind distributions.

7 THE COURT: Right. As I understand it, the -- now
8 that you've equalized the ability to get cash distributions,
9 essentially what you've said is people who want in kind can 10 get it from Binance and they can get it as soon as they are 11 able to become Binance customers in compliance with the laws
12 of the jurisdiction -- the state where they reside.

13 MS. OKIKE: Correct.

14 THE COURT: And in some states that's more of a 15 problem than in others.

16 MS. OKIKE: Correct.

17 THE COURT: Okay. Is somebody here representing 18 New York?

19 My --

20 MR. ST. JOHN: Good afternoon, Your Honor.

21 THE COURT: You know, my question for plan
22 purposes is whether the plan creates a discrimination, but 23 it sounds to me like the debtors and Binance would be more 24 than happy to distribute to New York customers exactly the 25 same way they do everywhere else, and that the only thing

212-267-6868

Veritext Legal Solutions
www.veritext.com

516-608-2400

1 THE COURT: Okay. Go ahead, Ms. Okike.

2 MS. OKIKE: So, Your Honor, our view is that all
3 account holders regardless of where they reside are going to 4 have their claims dollarized as of the petition date and are 5 going to receive the same pro rata recovery based on all
6 account holder claims.

7 Your Honor, we don't dispute that the ability of 8 customers in the unsupported jurisdictions to access their 9 recovery and the form of that recovery may be different from 10 customers in supported jurisdictions. But any difference in 11 the outcome for account holders in New York, Texas or any 12 other unsupported jurisdiction is of the unsupported
13 jurisdiction's own making.

14 The unsupported jurisdictions can, as the other 47
15 states have, provide a way for their constituents to receive 16 distributions in kind. And the fact that they have not does 17 not mean that the plan unfairly discriminates against 18 customers in those --

19 THE COURT: Well, that's --

20 MS. OKIKE: -- states.

21 THE COURT: -- putting it a little pejoratively,
22 isn't it? You make it sound like the jurisdictions are 23 acting out of spite or laziness or who knows what else.
24 It's really a question of they have different regulatory 25 requirements and you can only do what your existing licenses

212-267-6868

1 standing in the way of that is New York's regulations and 2 the status of licenses in New York state.

3 Why is that an impermissible discrimination by the 4 plan?

5 MR. ST. JOHN: Good afternoon, Your Honor. Jason
6 St. John for -- on behalf of the New York State Department
7 of Financial Services.

8 To answer your question, there are still two 9 differences between what a New Yorker today or frankly six 10 months post-closing is going to be able to achieve and the 11 same account holder in New Jersey or, you know, any of the 12 other 48 or the other states that are supported
13 jurisdictions.

14 One, there's still no possibility of, you know,
15 crypto in kind recovery and, two, to the timeline, the last 16 possible date for an account holder in the supported 17 jurisdictions to receive the dollarized value in cash of 18 their claim is three months post-closing. And for New York, 19 that date is still six months post-closing even under the 20 amended plan.

21 We want to note, of course, that, you know, the 22 amendments that, you know, Your Honor encouraged on Friday
23 and that the debtors of Binance --

24 THE COURT: It was only -- it's only six months if 25 there's a New York customer who would prefer to wait and see

212-267-6868

Veritext Legal Solutions
www.veritext.com

516-608-2400

1 if they can become a Binance customer, right?

2 MR. ST. JOHN: Yes, Your Honor. But part of the 3 basis of our objection is that the option of a in kind
4 recovery due to, you know, Binance licensure six months
5 post-closing isn't a realistic scenario. So the option
6 that's being given to those account holders isn't a
7 realistic one grounded in fact.

8 You know, we haven't heard anything other than a
9 -- you know, of statements in the reply memorandum of law
10 and statements in the plan that they will try for licensure
11 to show that that is actually a realistic possibility.

12 So the idea of holding off on recovery for New 13 Yorkers until, you know, possibly six months post-closing 14 for those who, you know, have perhaps failed to elect to 15 receive their recovery in cash still prevents an instance of 16 unfair discrimination in that point. It's not a realistic
17 option.

18 THE COURT: Well, there's a difference between 19 saying it's not a realistic option and that it's an unfair
20 discrimination. Nobody's -- no customer is forced to wait
21 the six months. They -- if they want their crypto in kind
22 and want to take their chances on being a Binance customer, 23 they can make that choice, take their chances whether 24 Binance gets the approvals or not.

25 But I don't -- I just don't see how this is -- you

212-267-6868

Veritext Legal Solutions
www.veritext.com

516-608-2400

1 Is there any other way to make it equal in the way
2 that you suggest?

3 MR. ST. JOHN: Well, one, I think, immediate and 4 relatively easy adjustment would be rather than three months
5 post-closing being the date by which New Yorkers may elect
6 to receive cash, as it is with the supported jurisdictions
7 simply have that be the date in which they will receive a
8 dollarized value of their claim.

9 THE COURT: Well, but your complaint is about 10 equal -- by the way, it's phrased as unfair discrimination
11 which I think as a bankruptcy matter is the wrong term 12 because I don't need a cram down as to this class. I have 13 an acceptance by this class. I think your real argument is 14 whether all members of the class are being treated the same.

15 MR. ST. JOHN: Yes, Your Honor. I apologize.

16 THE COURT: And even that standard is they have to 17 be treated the same unless they elect otherwise. So if a 18 New York customer elects not to cash out and to wait to see
19 if he or she can get crypto currency in kind from Binance,
20 how does that violate the requirements of the code?

21 MR. ST. JOHN: Right.

22 The difference in timeline is, you know, again, as 23 we've alleged unequal treatment within a class. The -- 24 while case law certainly does allow, as Your Honor's pointed 25 out and the debtors pointed out in their reply memorandum of

212-267-6868

1 know, they're trying to do what they can do consistent with 2 what the regulatory restrictions are. You know, in your 3 papers you said it's their own fault if they don't already 4 have the approvals. That doesn't mean that the plan is 5 creating a discrimination. Maybe it means that the past has 6 created a discrimination, but it doesn't mean that the plan
7 is -- we can only deal with the situation as it exists.

8 MR. ST. JOHN: Uh-huh.

9 THE COURT: And I think you would be the first one
10 to admit that they cannot do in New York right away what 11 they're proposing to do for Ohio customers.

12 MR. ST. JOHN: That's absolutely correct.

13 THE COURT: I presume you're not suggesting that 14 we should deny all residents of all other states the right
15 to get crypto currency distributions.

16 MR. ST. JOHN: Absolutely not, Your Honor. Our 17 objection is --

18 THE COURT: That's --

19 MR. ST. JOHN: -- focused on New Yorkers.

20 THE COURT: -- the only way I can think of to make 21 it equal. There's no other way to do it unless we make 22 everybody wait until whenever the regulatory process drags
23 out or unless we deny everybody in the country the 24 opportunity to get something just because New York customers
25 can't get it.

1 law, differences in either type of consideration or even
2 timeline on distribution for reasons, we would allege there
3 hasn't really been a reason here. The debtors have and 4 Binance have held out the hope of licensure or negotiation
5 within that six-month time frame. They -- you know, they 6 haven't really produced any evidence to show that the idea
7 or the, you know, perspective being --

8 THE COURT: But, you know, what if they had said
9 customers in New York have to wait a year and a half. That 10 would correspond to your regulatory timeline maybe, but it
11 seems to me that would be worse for New York customers

12 MR. ST. JOHN: We would be making the same
13 objection, Your Honor, of trying to, you know, get quicker
14 recovery for New York account holders. But perhaps I'm 15 missing your point.

16 THE COURT: So you don't want any New York
17 customers to have the right to wait to see if Binance can 18 get approval?

19 MR. ST. JOHN: Yes, Your Honor. That's one way of 20 putting it. We could also perhaps phrase it as, you know,
21 we don't think that the debtors and Binance have shown
22 through the plan or the supplemental materials that that's a 23 realistic option for New York account holders such that --

24 THE COURT: Why can't New York account holders
25 make that decision for themselves?

212-267-6868

Page 126

MR. ST. JOHN: Even if they were, Your Honor, it is still an extra three months away from the latest possible account holder in Ohio or New Jersey or a supporting jurisdiction.

THE COURT: But they can -- you know, it's only if they so elect, right?

MR. ST. JOHN: Yes, Your Honor. Although, if I may respond. You know, given the number of creditors who voted on the current plan, there may be reason to suspect that, you know, creditors may not -- may miss a -- you know, an election that's been given to them by the debtors to receive their cash, you know, value and then at that point their recovery would be delayed by --

THE COURT: All right. But it's not --

MR. ST. JOHN: -- three months.

THE COURT: -- unequal treatment under the plan if people pay no attention and fail to take advantage of the rights that they're given. There's only --

MR. ST. JOHN: it is.

THE COURT: There's only so much I can do. You know, when you have this many people involved, is somebody going to sleep on their rights, ignore things, fail to make claims. All kinds of things can happen. There's only so much I can do.

MR. ST. JOHN: Of course, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Why does this take so long?

MR. ST. JOHN: Your Honor, New York is a pretty strict virtual currency licensing regime.

THE COURT: That just tells me that it takes long.

(Laughter)

THE COURT: Why does it -- what does that mean? What has to be done and why does that take so long?

MR. ST. JOHN: Your Honor, there's a number of requirements that go into virtual, you know, currency licensing regime. You know, showing reserve requirements, of course meeting certain cyber security regulations and showings. You know, as Your Honor likely knows, you know, complying with regulatory requirements can certainly just take a while, which is sometimes at odds with the bankruptcy goal of returning accounts or, you know, or accounts or claims to creditors as quickly as possible.

And so in this case we do have a conflict here. But New York as the licensing entity can simply waive its licensing requirements to allow Binance to make that distribution.

THE COURT: And what about the Vermont solution, why doesn't that work for New York?

MR. ST. JOHN: Of course, Your Honor.

From my understanding, but I will defer to the debtors and to Binance if I misunderstand it, the Vermont

THE COURT: Right. And so if people have the right to cash out at exactly the same time, that's the feature that worried me because it did seem to be in the parties' control and it did seem to be a difference that I was having trouble thinking of a justification for.

But --

MR. ST. JOHN: And we appreciate the parties reaching, you know --

THE COURT: Yeah. But the --

MR. ST. JOHN: -- an amendment (sic) on that point.

THE COURT: -- ability to -- but they cannot do -- they cannot give crypto, so you're saying that equal treatment would mean cashing them out even if they don't want to be cashed out, even if they would prefer to wait to see if they might still get in kind distributions. How is that the same treatment?

MR. ST. JOHN: Your Honor, again, so we are the licensing entity. You know, as the debtors have pointed out, that's, you know, seemingly, you know, holding up this in kind distribution. And we're objecting on the grounds that we don't think that option or that -- to New Yorkers to wait to see if there will be in kind distributions is one that's grounded in fact or a realistic scenario even six months post-closing.

solution is a full trading account that limits staking and has a sunset date which is not -- that's essentially granting licensure to Binance for those New York account holders if it allows full trading. That's not a, from our view, a particularly limited account that would or a limited licensure that would be a possible negotiation for us.

Of course, I defer to the debtors and Binance if I've misstated that deal.

THE COURT: I'm sorry.

MR. ST. JOHN: I would defer to the debtors and Binance if I have misunderstood the deal with Vermont.

THE COURT: Well, I think any difference in treatment that results here is the result of regulatory constraints. And the particular differences that you complained about, which is the ability to get crypto currency, is that is -- that would not be solved by the solution that you suggested, which is just forcing everybody to get cashed out in three months whether they want to or not. It seems to me that forcing that decision on everybody actually would create more of a differentiation.

As long as Binance is trying to get licensed in New York, and so long as people in New York would prefer to take their chances and possibly get their crypto in kind, it seems to me that the debtor's proposal actually goes further in the way of kind of providing the same opportunities, as

1 least as far as they can in light of regulatory constraints.

2 And I don't think your proposed solution is really
3 an answer. I think your solution would make it worse.

4 MR. ST. JOHN: Okay. Yes, Your Honor. You know,
5 as our objection noted, you know, the objection was on two 6 points, both distribution of, you know, crypto in kind and 7 the timeline. It seems like Your Honor has already answered
8 the timeline point.

9 On crypto in kind, again, the distribution
10 couldn't -- you know, right now would not happen through 11 Binance for regulatory reasons. You know, obviously under 12 the toggle it would happen through Voyager. It seems as 13 though, you know, it is still possible for Voyager to 14 execute the toggle.

15 THE COURT: Well, but if they do the Binance deal,
16 they will have sold their platform. They won't be able to 17 do anything. They won't -- they couldn't transfer crypto
18 anymore than I could, I don't think.

19 MR. ST. JOHN: They would still be effecting
20 transfers to --

21 THE COURT: Well, probably they could do it better
22 than I could.

23 (Laughter)

24 THE COURT: I think anybody in the room could 25 probably do it better than I could, but.

1 The trading of the stablecoin, the ability to stake, those 2 things we can't agree to. But if Binance can find a way to 3 do a withdrawal only account, I think that's something that 4 we definitely could consider and we will move forward in 5 these discussions in hopes that we can come to an agreement.

6 THE COURT: Okay.

7 MS. WALL: I will say that from a Texas resident,
8 that is wonderful news for all the residents in Texas. So 9 thank you very much for (indiscernible) that.

10 MS. RYAN: Thank you. Absolutely.

11 And if you have any questions, Your Honor, I'm 12 happy to answer them.

13 THE COURT: No. It sounds like as long as we've 14 made the cash out option that you understand that there's 15 only so much that can be done in terms of making crypto
16 available in kind and that it's not really a bankruptcy
17 issue at that point.

18 And I -- to the extent you can work it out with 19 the parties, I encourage you to do so and hope you are able 20 to do so.

21 MS. RYAN: Thank you, Your Honor. Me, too.

22 THE COURT: All right. Is there anybody else that 23 wants to be heard on the, what I will call the unequal
24 treatment or unfair discrimination argument?

25 MR. NEWSOM: Your Honor, this is Dan Newsom, pro

1 MR. ST. JOHN: Yes, Your Honor.

2 They would still be effecting transfers to
3 Binance, of course, and we recognize that's a different
4 scenario than transferring to account holders themselves.

5 THE COURT: Yeah. Okay.

6 MR. ST. JOHN: Thank you, Your Honor.

7 THE COURT: Does Texas have anything in addition
8 that they want to add on this issue?

9 MS. RYAN: Yes, Your Honor. For the record this 10 is Abigail Ryan with the Office of the Texas Attorney
11 General on behalf of the State Securities Board and the 12 Texas Department of Banking.

13 I was happy to see the change that our citizens
14 can get a cash out option as early as three months to be 15 aligned with supported jurisdictions' account holders that 16 choose not to go to Binance. I think that makes it a more
17 fair plan in that regard.

18 And while we would love to see our citizens get 19 their crypto back, at this point due to the set up of our 20 regulatory (indiscernible) here in Texas, that's not an 21 option.

22 However, we have been in conversations with 23 Binance and the debtors and we are looking to do some sort 24 of an agreement like Vermont, but as Ms. Okike said, it will 25 have to be a little different based upon our rules here.

1 se creditor. I did file an objection as it relates to the 2 plan for VGX, specifically Section 1123(a)(4) in terms of 3 unequal treatment for VGX account holders.

4 THE COURT: Yeah. I saw your objection, but I was 5 having a little trouble understanding just what you think is 6 unequal about the treatment.

7 MR. NEWSOM: Well, I would be happy to expound on 8 that, Your Honor.

9 I believe -- first it's important to state that in 10 the event that the smart contract is not sold, it's 11 important for Your Honor to understand that VGX has no
12 underlying technology or utilities, and in the event that 13 it's not sold, even the treasury statement states that VGX
14 may decline in value and may have no value post confirmation
15 of the plan.

16 So as it relates to discriminatory treatment, I
17 bought VGX prior to petition date. I bought a crypto
18 currency that had utility, had value from the described 19 organization which by their accounts had a straight road
20 trajectory.

21 Following the petition, in the event that the 22 smart contract is not sold, I would be receiving something 23 in kind that is not what I bought prior to petition where 24 other creditors in the same class are going to get back
25 their pro rata share of crypto currency that not

Veritext Legal Solutions
www.veritext.com

516-608-2400

1 fundamentally changed.

2 So in terms of opportunity for recovery, I believe
3 that in the event that the smart contract is not sold, the 4 VGX account holders would be discriminated against unfairly.

5 THE COURT: What are the smart contracts and how 6 did they tie in with VGX, and would you say it's otherwise
7 -- otherwise there's no underlying contract?

8 Ms. Okike, can you explain all that to me in terms
9 a fourth grader would understand?

10 MS. OKIKE: Sure.

11 Your Honor, so my understanding is that the smart
12 contracts determine the utility of the token, so the value
13 of the token. And different entities could use the smart
14 contracts to generate utility for the token.

15 We are not selling the smart contracts (sic) in 16 connection with the Binance.US transaction. Binance.US has 17 agreed to submit VGX for listing, to go through the process
18 of listing the token on the exchange. It's not currently 19 listed. And we are actively marketing the smart contracts
20 that underlie the token.

21 Our hope is that we are able to sell the smart
22 contracts to a third party which will allow the token to 23 continue to have utility going forward.

24 Your Honor, in our view VGX is no different than 25 other tokens that don't have utility like Bitcoin or

212-267-6868

Veritext Legal Solutions
www.veritext.com

516-608-2400

1 token VGX is what's called an ERC20 token. That means that 2 it's traded on the Thorium blockchain, like many other
3 tokens, but it has its own smart contract that governs how 4 transactions will work and what the token can be used for.

5 There's a little bit of a difference between 6 utility and smart contract. Utility is what the token is 7 used for, meaning can I buy things with it, can I pay
8 transaction fees with it, can I use it to join a group, for 9 example.

10 But the smart contract is the technical software
11 that permits it to work. And so what's being marketed is 12 the sale of that smart contract so a third party can use,
13 possibly withdraw the smart contract and initiate a new one
14 to allow for other usages of VGX.

15 THE COURT: Okay. Thank you.

16 And if nobody buys the smart contract, how could 17 anybody use VGX?

18 MR. EVANS: Well, the smart contract is public.
19 It's out in the world. And so VGX can still be traded and 20 used. It's just -- there will be no entity behind it really 21 making improvements or trying to figure out how to use it in 22 a meaningful way.

23 And so I think what the concern is, is that
24 without any entity really using and promoting the VGX smart
25 contract, the value of VGX will decline and the amount of

1 Dogecoin, and the value will fluctuate depending on a number
2 of different factors. And from our perspective we don't
3 believe that there's unequal treatment with respect to VGX
4 because --

5 THE COURT: VGX is on a blockchain transfer of the 6 same kind of ways that either Bitcoin or other --

7 MS. OKIKE: Correct.

8 THE COURT: Okay. So it may not be as attractive
9 to people as Bitcoin, but it's just another coin in that 10 respect.

11 But these smart contracts that -- what exactly are 12 they and how do they support or generate value to VGX?

13 MS. OKIKE: Your Honor, I may need to ask Mr.
14 Tishner (phonetic) to help on the technical aspects with 15 respect to that.

16 MR. AZMAN: Your Honor, if you would like Mr.
17 Evans can probably provide us the technical information --

18 THE COURT: That's fine.

19 MR. AZMAN: -- rather than calling a witness.

20 MR. EVANS: Joseph Evans, McDermott Will & Emery
21 on behalf of the committee.

22 Your Honor, each token has a smart contract. That 23 smart contract dictates how a token will work. And so what 24 the token is worth, if there are any rewards for staking the 25 token, for example, but as a technical underpinning for each

1 entities actually using it for something other than 2 speculation would decline.

3 THE COURT: Do all crypto currencies have backing
4 of that kind and smart contracts of that kind?

5 MR. EVANS: Yes.

6 THE COURT: So Bitcoin, for example?

7 MR. EVANS: Well, Bitcoin is a separate
8 blockchain, so Bitcoin is a blockchain that only -- that the 9 Bitcoin token is on. Ethereum, for example, is another
10 blockchain and there are a variety of other tokens that are 11 offshoots of the Ethereum blockchain. Those are called 12 ERC20 compliant. Those each have their own smart contracts.

13 THE COURT: Okay. I'm pretty sure I would not 14 pass a test on this subject, but I think I understand.

15 (Laughter)

16 MR. EVANS: Thank you, Your Honor.

17 MR. AZMAN: Your Honor, I think what you're -- you
18 were getting at just now is that the risk of the VGX token
19 potentially not being worth anything is a risk that you
20 might have with any other token that's being distributed 21 such that if Bitcoin were to collapse tomorrow, you could 22 potentially make the same argument.

23 But I don't think that that is unfair or 24 discriminatory treatment.

25 THE COURT: Well, I think in fairness to the

212-267-6868

Veritext Legal Solutions
www.veritext.com

516-608-2400

objection, what he's saying is VGX may have a much higher chance of cratering than Bitcoin does.

Is that essentially what you're saying?

MR. NEWSOM: Thank you, Your Honor.

I would actually go further to state that VGX uniquely is singularly impacted by the actions or inactions of the debtors. And (indiscernible) that VGX has (indiscernible) utility in the event that its smart contract is not sold to an entity other than speculation is very misleading, Your Honor. No one's going to be able to sell VGX as -- or use it as a currency, use it in any way. It's literally just an ERC20 branch -- excuse me -- branch chain (sic).

What -- you can -- anybody can just create a chain off of the ERC20 token and the smart contract allows VGX to be (indiscernible) into infinity. That precipitates the drop in value even further.

So I -- there's really, really no value for VGX other than (indiscernible) speculation -- I'm sorry -- I said (indiscernible) in the court, Your Honor, but that's what this might become. And the chance that it has any value at all if the debtors do not smell the smart contract is nearly guaranteed.

THE COURT: And what is the solution that you suggest? Are you saying that --

THE COURT: Right.

Well, I'm not sure how as a practical matter it would be possible for the debtors to do the re-balancings and calculations that they would need to do if they were going to give people a sort of coin by coin decision-making opportunity as to whether as to that particular coin they wanted cash or the coin. I just -- what I do understand about this, it seems to me that the task would be just about impossible.

MR. NEWSOM: Your Honor, I do think that it would probably be an undue burden to a lot of the, you know, the individual choices or cryptos to be liquidated either in cash or in kind. That probably would become plus. However, Voyager is -- or the VGX token is unique in that Voyager actually has direct control over its stake. And in the event that it does not take the necessary steps (indiscernible) smart contract, they are in -- they are materially impacting the opportunity for recovery of VGX account holders.

Further complicating the matter, Your Honor, is that Voyager holds in my estimation somewhere in 35 million plus of their own VGX tokens. And if they go to liquidate that on the open market, that further drops the price of the token and therefore the opportunity of recovery for creditors.

MR. NEWSOM: The specific relief for -- I'm sorry. Go ahead.

THE COURT: Yeah. Are you saying the debtor shouldn't distribute VGX to people who had it?

MR. NEWSOM: I'm saying that in the event that they don't smell the smart contract, they've admitted that they remain hopeful that they can. However, I think that the FTC's unique statements from the last couple of days' hearings might add additional barriers to that.

But in the event that they don't smell the smart contract, that they allow VGX holders to -- or I guess rather they liquidate the VGX position and distribute it in UFC (sic) rather than giving it to them in kind so then have to work with (indiscernible) digital code and instead receive their pro rata share of UFC at the same algorithm that all the other second class creditors are receiving.

THE COURT: Of course, you and other holders of VGX, if you don't want VGX, have the right to just get cash for all your cryptocurrencies. You just don't have the right to kind of do that on a coin by coin basis, right?

MR. NEWSOM: That is correct. If I -- I had multiple positions, Your Honor, but I did have a large VGX position. And if I wanted to take all of those positions in cash, I would have to take all of them in cash, not just VGX.

There's a lot that Voyager can't control about the outcome of the recovery for creditor. And I think it is unique and deserves a special carveout in the disclosure statement and the plan in the event that they don't sell the smart contract. They have a responsibility to the creditors (indiscernible).

THE COURT: What's the debtor's response?

MS. OKIKE: Your Honor, from the debtor's perspective, I agree with -- and, apologies, I don't remember the gentleman's name. I agree that the debtor's --

THE COURT: It's Mr. Newsom.

MS. OKIKE: Mr. Newsom.

I agree with Mr. Newsom that the debtors do have more control with respect to VGX just given that it's a token obviously that is issued by Voyager. We have every intention of doing what we can to make sure that there is utility going forward. But the reality is, is that we are either consummating a sale transaction or a liquidating transaction and winding down.

And so while the plan provides for all account holders to receive the same recovery, same pro rata recovery based off of values of the tokens at a particular point in time, there is the risk of, you know, a material decrease in value of VGX to the extent that there is no utility going forward. And we acknowledge that. I'm not sure what the

1 solution is. I think from our perspective we do still 2 believe that creditors are being treated equally because 3 we're determining the value at a specific point in time.
4 Customers are receiving distributions. They're able to cash
5 them out immediately if they so choose.

6 THE COURT: When customers get in kind
7 distributions, if I had VGX in my account, am I going to get 8 more VGX than I ever held in the past or --

9 MS. OKIKE: No.

10 THE COURT: Okay. So it's not like my entire -- 11 I'm going to be a poor customer who gets an entire 12 distribution in the form of VGX or anything like that.

13 MS. OKIKE: No.

14 THE COURT: Okay. Unless V --

15 MS. OKIKE: And so what we are doing --

16 THE COURT: Unless VGX is the only thing that I
17 ever owned.

18 MS. OKIKE: Correct.

19 What we are doing in the rebalancing is making
20 sure that people get their pro rata recoveries in the same 21 form.

22 THE COURT: Does anybody have any idea of how 23 likely it is that VGX will continue to have value? I mean, 24 I -- somebody -- I asked somebody the other day what the 25 current value is and they told me and I forget, but it was

212-267-6868

1 MS. OKIKE: -- the same --

2 MR. NEWSOM: Excuse me.

3 MS. OKIKE: I'm sorry.

4 MR. NEWSOM: I'm sorry. Go ahead.

5 MS. OKIKE: No. No. go ahead.

6 MR. NEWSOM: I was just saying that I think we can 7 reasonably assume that it's risen in price because of the 8 speculative nature of in the event the smart contract sold.
9 Also, the elements that (indiscernible) more is locked up
10 and you can move the price easily and therefore manipulate
11 the market to make money off of (indiscernible) trading.

12 I think that those elements will not exist going 13 forward post-consummation of the deal and the failure to 14 sell the smart contract.

15 MR. AZMAN: Your Honor, Darren Azman for the 16 committee.

17 Just a practical thought. And I think what the 18 gentleman on the phone is suggesting that he would like to 19 have happen is for the estate to liquidate VGX and 20 distribute cash. I think that's what I'm hearing.

21 But if the estate were to do that, that in and of 22 itself would have the same effect on the price of VGX. It
23 would probably crater. So whether the VGX is liquidated in 24 the hands of customers immediately after they receive it or 25 whether it is liquidated today, it's --

212-267-6868

Veritext Legal Solutions
www.veritext.com

516-608-2400

1 relatively low.

2 MS. OKIKE: I think it was 30, 36 cents, 33 cents.
3 We can check. I believe it was in the 30 cents.

4 But, Your Honor --

5 MR. NEWSOM: Your Honor, it's currently 39 cents,
6 but I -- it is important to understand that the majority of 7 the (indiscernible) is locked up on the platform and that 8 number can be manipulated, I suppose, easily by market
9 forces.

10 Furthermore, my cost average was close to $2.00.
11 And so, I mean, I -- it's -- I mean, 39 cents is relative to 12 the average cost of VGX to take on a (indiscernible)
13 position, but I don't think that we can clearly state that 14 because VGX has increased in value since we filed the 15 petition that it will continue to do so. In fact, if we 16 remove the smart contract -- or don't sell the smart
17 contract, there's no value. It's (indiscernible) a 18 guarantee that it goes to zero and the opportunity for 19 recovery is essentially lost, zero.

20 MS. OKIKE: Your Honor, I think the reality is we 21 just don't know. Everyone knows Voyager is in bankruptcy
22 and VGX has been rising. So there's no real explanation for 23 why VGX is rising, but it has. And I don't think we know
24 how it will trade post-closing. And I think that's --

25 MR. NEWSOM: I think we can read --

212-267-6868

Veritext Legal Solutions
www.veritext.com

1 THE COURT: I think as I understand the objection
2 it's not that so much. It's that Mr. Newsom thinks that the 3 current market value for VGX is much more elusory than the 4 current market value for other coins, and that treating it
5 as an item that actually has a value of 39 cents as of the 6 date of distribution is unrealistic and has the effect of 7 reducing his recovery because there's, unlike other coins,
8 there's much greater risk that the real value of VGX is 9 zero.

10 I think that's -- does that correctly sum up your 11 objection, Mr. Newsom?

12 MR. NEWSOM: Yes, Your Honor. That's a pretty 13 fair characterization.

14 MR. AZMAN: I'm not sure how we fix that.

15 MS. OKIKE: Your Honor, but just to -- further
16 counterargument, I mean, if we are able to sell the utility,
17 the smart contracts underlying the token, and the value
18 rises, I mean --

19 THE COURT: He might get more.

20 MS. OKIKE: Exactly.

21 THE COURT: Right.

22 MR. NEWSOM: And to be clear, I'm not asking that 23 the debtors do not continue to pursue the sale of the smart
24 contract. I do think it is more unlikely since the FTC has 25 stated that some of their staff believe it has elements of

212-267-6868

Veritext Legal Solutions
www.veritext.com

516-608-2400

the security streams action.

However, I remain hopeful that the ultimate buyer would be a high quality buyer that intends to comply with all regulatory (indiscernible). But I think that's probably unlikely, and hope is not a strategy here and where we fail to do that we are materially impacted.

I would state that the difference between liquidating as part of the estate and distributing (indiscernible) pro rata share in cash to VGX account holders is different than giving them in kind VGX distributions and then allowing them to sell it on the open market. I do think that's -- it -- I think it's -- it needed to be pointed out to Mr. Azman's point that there is a difference in those two things.

THE COURT: But assuming we can't give customers the right to make a coin by coin election, because I just don't think that would be practical, what other solution do we have, Mr. Newsom? You most certainly, and everybody else, have the right to take cash instead of any cryptocurrencies. I'm not sure that there's any intermediate approach that is practical.

Do you -- what is it you see --

MR. NEWSOM: It would need -- I'm sorry.

THE COURT: Go ahead. What would you suggest?

MR. NEWSOM: Well, do we need a coin by coin you hold at the moment?

MR. SLADE: No.

THE COURT: Okay.

Is it fair to say it is a relatively small component of the total value that will be distributed?

MR. NEWSOM: Your Honor, I believe 30 percent of accounts held some amount of VGX. I believe it's the third largest holding on the platform.

THE COURT: Well, that's different in terms of, you know, measuring the value of what's being distributed.

MS. OKIKE: I would say it's relatively small compared to the overall value of the portfolio.

THE COURT: The problem, Mr. Newsom, is it seems to me you yourself would not want the debtors to just give up on VGX. You kind of want them to, I don't know what, wait, see if they can sell the smart contract before they distribute VGX. I'm not sure we have that option at the moment, to tell you the truth.

So what are we supposed to do?

MR. NEWSOM: I think that's part of the problem, Your Honor, is that we don't know the fate of VGX. We don't know that Binance.US is in (indiscernible). We don't know that they'll sell the smart contracts. We think -- I think personally that it's probably unlikely given the FTC's statements.

212-267-6868

Veritext Legal Solutions
www.veritext.com

516-608-2400

solution here or should we just specifically carve out these -- well, let me rephrase that.

Should we amend the disclosure statement and the plan which is already singled out for VGX. It would just be more thorough or thoughtful, rather, in the event that the smart contract is not sold and a plan as a result of that. VGX is already singled out in the plan and the disclosure statement. I'm just asking that we be a little bit more thorough and thoughtful about how that opportunity for recovery is more equal to those VGX account holders.

THE COURT: Given the amount of VGX the debtor holds at that current market price, what does that translate to in terms of value?

MR. NEWSOM: I believe it's between 10 and 20 million based off of Mr. Tishner's testimony and that's probably in line with what I believe they had in 35 million to 40 million tokens (indiscernible) in the estate. But I -- correct me if I'm wrong.

THE COURT: And we have some people scurrying around the room getting an answer to the question, so.

MR. SLADE: Your Honor, I apologize. Mike Slade for the debtors.

If we disclose the information it's going to move the market. That's the concern.

THE COURT: Oh, you -- it's not public how much

212-267-6868

Veritext Legal Solutions
www.veritext.com

516-608-2400

So I think in the event that the smart contract is not sold, since VGX already has its specific clause carved out for it and what happens to it, we amend that clause to ensure protection and (indiscernible) treatment for those VGX account holders.

If the value of the estate is relative -- if it's relatively small in terms of dollarized value to the estate, I don't think there's a large impact on the creditor body at large. It seems like a simple thing to ask and it would ensure protection while also allowing the debtors to continue to pursue the sale of the smart contract. I think -- it sounds simple to me, and if I'm wrong please correct me, but I think the ask is simple and the solution is simple.

THE COURT: I'm not sure the solution is that simple. You know, if the debtors hold VGX until they see if they sell the smart contract, the prices may change. The debtors will have allocated things to other customers. They won't necessarily have the ability to make up the difference. These are all calculations that have to be done at one time to make sure that the value is based on the date of calculation or at least equal. That's what the bankruptcy code commands.

So I'm not sure we can hold VGX aside without making it impossible to do the all -- do all of the

212-267-6868

Veritext Legal Solutions
www.veritext.com

516-608-2400

calculations.

MR. NEWSOM: That's a fair point, Your Honor. And I think that we should consider that we've had nine months to sell the smart contract and we have yet to do it, and I do think the FTC adds a wrinkle to it now. And so perhaps putting a time frame on which steps should be done, and in the event that it's not done say in the next three or four weeks, whenever the pro rata calculations are determined, we make the decision to liquidate VGX at the USD value pro rata share equal to (indiscernible) class creditors.

THE COURT: Is there any time frame for the sale of the smart contract?

MS. OKIKE: Your Honor, we have some parties that are interested. They've been meeting with the company and the creditors' committee as well. But we haven't made an actual determination as to a specific buyer.

THE COURT: Okay. But is it fair to say that it's not a hopeless prospect for VGX? There's some people who are at least indicating interest in buying the contract?

MS. OKIKE: That's correct, Your Honor.

We have some holders of VGX who are interested in providing utility for the token going forward and have offered various solutions.

THE COURT: I see.

Does that change your feeling, Mr. Newsom?

212-267-6868

Veritext Legal Solutions
www.veritext.com

516-608-2400

whether there is equal treatment as whether the calculations are skewed and, therefore, the recoveries are actually different because the VGX value might be elusory.

And I don't think anybody's suggesting that it actually is elusory, certainly not at its current value of 39 cents, or that it is necessarily going to be elusory, just that it might turn out to be elusory.

But the value is already fairly low. It seems to reflect the fact that people don't know just what utility it's going to have. And I don't think I have enough evidence in front of me to say that it is worthless to the point of being inappropriate to be taken into account as an item of distributive value.

And nor do I have enough reason to believe that it's so hopeless that I should kind of require it to just be excluded from the entire set of calculations. And I don't know how to do the kind of in between that you're suggesting without making the calculations of the plan impossible.

So unless somebody has a better mathematical solution for me than I'm thinking of, I just don't think what you want, Mr. Newsom, is something that I can grant.

MR. NEWSOM: Your Honor, I certainly respect your decision. But I will state that I think that if we were to ask the debtors or the professionals if they were to receive their salary in VGX based off the current plans or future --

212-267-6868

Veritext Legal Solutions
www.veritext.com

516-608-2400

MR. NEWSOM: I think it's the same simply because it -- we have no confirmation that that will indeed happen. And I would wonder if these individuals that are interested in purchasing the smart contract and providing utility for VGX, are they aware of the FTC statements in the last two days that VGX has elements of a securities transaction. I think that's a barrier there.

MS. OKIKE: I think, Your Honor, the only alternative would be to sell all of the VGX at the time that we do the distribution and, you know, have those dollars be distributed in exchange.

THE COURT: And how would all the other customers who at the moment aren't expecting that as part of the plan, how would they feel about that?

MS. OKIKE: That's why -- I mean, I don't think it's necessarily a viable solution. I don't know if we could do it on a customer by customer basis. It seems overly burdensome.

THE COURT: Okay. Is there anybody else who would like to be heard on this question?

Okay. Technically, as a matter of equal treatment, the VGX coin is being treated just like all the other coins and the amount that holders will receive is being calculated in exactly the same manner.

I think the real objection here is not so much likely future, they would all quickly refuse. I think that there's a high likelihood that this is elusory. It's not a guarantee.

THE COURT: Okay.

MR. MENDELL: Your Honor --

THE COURT: Yes.

MR. MENDELL: -- this is Marshall Mendell, pro se creditor. I just want to add that I am a very large VGX holder, maybe the largest, and so this is a position which is very important to me as it is to Mr. Newsom and many other creditors who I know personally who also have large stakes in VGX.

And I'm wondering if it's possible to please ask the debtor what is the hold up in securing the transaction if we've already had a couple of transactions with FTX and Binance that were kind of put together. But it appears that a utility for the VGX token is taking longer.

MS. OKIKE: Your Honor, I think at the time that we were negotiating the various transactions, there was a question as to, at least in the first transaction, whether FTX was going to acquire VGX. We did not want to proceed with selling obviously the smart contracts given that it might have been included in the sale.

With respect to Binance, again, we're hopeful that the token is withstood on the exchange.

212-267-6868

Veritext Legal Solutions
www.veritext.com

516-608-2400

1 That being said, until the sale transaction is 2 approved, we weren't really seeking to sell off piecemeal
3 assets. So, you know, we are working towards this, but I
4 will confess it hasn't been, you know, the primary focus
5 just given the larger transaction that we were, you know,
6 diligently trying to execute.

7 THE COURT: Historically, what did VGX trade at?

8 MS. OKIKE: So the all time high was $12.54.

9 (Pause)

10 MS. OKIKE: 24 cents as of the petition date.

11 THE COURT: Don't I have to assume that the 39
12 cent market value is the market's calculation of the 13 likelihoods here and the option value, I suppose, associated 14 with VGX?

15 You know, there are options that sell that based 16 on current market conditions are way out of the money, but 17 they have value. For heaven's sake, even companies that 18 have announced bankruptcy, sometimes their stock still sells 19 for a price when it's hard to see any realistic likelihood 20 that the stock will have any value, but it's option value.

21 And we distribute options sometimes in bankruptcy that 22 are way out of the money, but they're deemed to be items of 23 value precisely for that reason, because there's a chance
24 that they may come into value.

25 So I guess unless you have evidence that the 39

1 -- on our Voyager app we have a particular maximum recovery.

2 MS. OKIKE: I don't think it's the maximum
3 recovery. I think you're seeing your claim dollarized as of 4 the petition date based off of the price as of the petition
5 date.

6 MR. MENDELL: Yes. You're right. Thank you for 7 clarifying.

8 So can you please answer, is there a minimum
9 recovery for VGX holders on each token, please?

10 MS. OKIKE: No. There's not a minimum account --
11 sorry -- there's not a minimum amount. It will depend on a 12 number of factors, but we anticipate, you know, a 48 percent
13 to potentially in the 70 percent recovery on account of, you
14 know, the claims that you have against the company,
15 including VGX.

16 THE COURT: So the way the calculations work, the 17 dollar amount of your claim is based on the dollar value of 18 your account as of the petition date.

19 Everybody will get the same percentage of that 20 dollar amount in either cash or crypto currencies. But 21 people -- in terms of which crypto currencies they get, that 22 will -- there will be some effort to match that to what your 23 prior holdings were so that hopefully there will be fewer 24 tax consequences, though no guarantee that that will be the 25 case. So --

1 cents is not a fair calculation of the option value of the 2 VGX, I'm not really in a position to say that giving that 3 kind of value to VGX would be unfair to the people who are 4 going to receive VGX.

5 MR. MENDELL: Your Honor, I have a secondary
6 question.

7 Is 22 cents or whatever the buyout number, is that 8 a worst case scenario for our recovery on VGX, please?

9 THE COURT: 22 cents? I don't know what you meant
10 by 22 cents.

11 MR. MENDELL: I think that that might be the 12 number of the Chapter 11 date back to, what is it, June 5th
13 or July 1st, something like that --

14 THE COURT: Oh --

15 MR. MENDELL: -- the --

16 THE COURT: The testimony --

17 MR. MENDELL: -- (indiscernible) --

18 THE COURT: The testimony based on the current or 19 based on last Wednesday or Thursday's values, I thought that 20 the testimony was that the minimum recovery would be in the 21 40-something range with an upside up to maybe 73 or so if 22 things go right on various contingencies.

23 Did I remember that right?

24 MR. MENDELL: Your Honor, I think that's the -- I
25 think that may have to do with market value, but there is a

212-267-6868

Veritext Legal Solutions
www.veritext.com

516-608-2400

1 MR. MENDELL: And if that applies to VGX, that
2 would be somewhat satisfactory to me given all things
3 considered. So I think that would be good.

4 THE COURT: Yeah. What it would mean as to VGX
5 would be, you know, if you had a $10,000 allowed claim as of 6 the petition date and if the initial distribution was going
7 to be 40 cents, just to make the math easier in my head, you
8 would get a package of things that has a value as of the 9 calculation date of 40 cents. Some of that would be made up
10 of VGX based on whatever VGX's price was as of that date.
11 Some of that might be made up of other coins if you held 12 other coins.

13 Is that fair, Ms. Okike?

14 MS. OKIKE: Correct.

15 THE COURT: Okay.

16 MR. MENDELL: Thank you. Thank you very much,
17 Your Honor, for the clarification.

18 I have nothing --

19 MR. NEWSOM: Your Honor --

20 MR. MENDELL: -- further.

21 MR. NEWSOM: -- I'm sorry to spend so much time
22 here. I know we're all very busy. But I would like to go
23 back to your point with regards to proof to the elusory
24 value of VGX currently.

25 It is hard to state since the debtors have refused

212-267-6868

Veritext Legal Solutions
www.veritext.com

1 to reveal their position on VGX how much of VGX tokens are 2 currently locked up and what the remainder is available on 3 the open market.

4 But suffice it to say that it is a very low
5 percentage of the overall available tokens and, as such, the 6 trade -- the token can be manipulated easily. And we know
7 with several efforts from anonymous groups on social media
8 sites or otherwise that have attempted to pump the VGX
9 price. They've even pumped it up to 92 cents and there is 10 some residual value left as people have been sort of left in 11 the wake of the pump and dump scheme.

12 So I -- Your Honor, there's multiple factors here
13 that are currently holding the value of VGX and none of them
14 would remain in place in the event that the smart contract
15 is not sold.

16 THE COURT: What evidence do I have of that? See,
17 that's the problem. I don't have evidence. I have rumors
18 or suspicions, but I don't have evidence.

19 MR. NEWSOM: I have to admit, Your Honor, in my 20 lack of legal experience I did not frame the argument in 21 terms of the value being elusory, but instead equitable.
22 And I did not think it would be necessary to go down this 23 route because it seems to me that the debtors are aware,
24 given their disclosure statement, that the value of VGX may 25 have no value for its consummation if the smart contract is

www.veritext.com

1 received something other than what I originally bought in 2 return.

3 That is what's happening here, Your Honor. I am
4 not receiving back what I bought in return in the event that 5 the VGX smart contract is not sold. I believe that there
6 are elements of this plan that are discriminatory based on 7 opportunities for recovery, whereas -- and this is important
8 -- other coin type actual utility have the ability to be 9 traded, sold -- I'm sorry -- used as a currency. VGX will 10 have none of that. And all of the value that is ascribed to 11 it right now is speculative in nature.

12 And when we flood the market with the VGX tokens,
13 it will only go to zero. I don't believe there is any 14 chance whatsoever for the value of VGX to go up beyond what 15 it is at today in the event the smart contract is not sold
16 and the market is flooded with the number of coins held on 17 the Voyager platform.

18 THE COURT: Okay. All right.

19 Thank you, Mr. Newsom.

20 Is there anybody else who wants to be heard on 21 unequal treatment or unfair discrimination objections?

22 Okay.

23 MS. OKIKE: Okay, Your Honor. I think we'll move
24 to the liquidation analysis next.

25 THE COURT: Why don't we do the releases?

1 not sold.

2 That by itself seems like indiscriminatory
3 treatment --

4 THE COURT: It may --

5 MR. NEWSOM: -- in the event -- in terms of 6 (indiscernible) recovery.

7 THE COURT: It may have no value. We usually 8 think of things that have some reported market value as the 9 market reflecting what their value is. It's what willing 10 people are willing to transact at.

11 What you've now said to me is that based on 12 trading volumes or perhaps people's desire to manipulate the 13 price, maybe that market is not a true market, but is 14 manipulated. But that's something that I would need 15 evidence to reach that conclusion and I don't have any. So 16 much of this --

17 MR. NEWSOM: I would be happy to provide it, but I
18 don't know how much time we have. But --

19 THE COURT: Well, we've already closed the 20 evidentiary record.

21 MR. NEWSOM: I'll make one final plea, Your Honor, 22 and then defer to your good judgment.

23 In Mr. Tishner's testimony he stated this. He 24 said, if I were an eTrade customer and I bought shares in GE
25 and eTrade got into trouble, then I would be upset if I

1 MS. OKIKE: Releases?

2 THE COURT: While I have the energy for it.

3 MS. OKIKE: Sorry.

4 THE COURT: While I have the energy for it.

5 MS. OKIKE: Okay. Great.

6 (Laughter)

7 MS. OKIKE: Okay. So, Your Honor, we had a number
8 of objections to the third party release. As a threshold
9 matter, the plan does not propose a non-consensual third
10 party release. Any third party's direct claims against non-11 debtors, to the extent such direct claims exist, are not 12 released unless such third party affirmatively consents,
13 which would be reflected in opting into the third party
14 release that was included on the ballots and in the notices
15 of non-voting status.

16 Your Honor, holders of claims in interest could 17 also affirmatively elect to contribute their direct claims
18 against third parties unaffiliated with the debtors to the 19 extent they have any to the winddown debtor, and the 20 winddown debtor will be vested with authority to pursue
21 those claims.

22 Your Honor, we did have a number of parties who 23 chose to affirmatively consent to the third party release
24 and to contribute their direct claims to the winddown
25 debtor.

Veritext Legal Solutions
www.veritext.com

212-267-6868

516-608-2400

Specifically, 65 percent or 40,112 claimants in the voting classes opted into the third party release, and 85 percent or 726 of claimants in the non-voting classes opted into the third party release.

52 percent or 31,878 claimants in the voting classes chose to contribute their direct claims to the winddown debtor, and 90 percent or 765 credits in the non-voting classes contributed their claims to the winddown debtor.

Your Honor, courts routinely approve consensual third party releases to be included in a plan. Here, again, the release is entirely consensual. We have not imposed a release on holders of claims that voted in favor of the plan. And so we believe that the third party release, to the extent that a creditor affirmatively opted in should be approved.

THE COURT: All right. I -- it seemed to me from a lot of the objections that there was a misunderstanding of who the releasing parties would be and the extent to which creditors and regulatory bodies, governmental entities were having releases of their own claims hoisted (sic) on them, that certainly is an issue that is a hot issue in many bankruptcy cases. But it's not really one here. There are no non-consensual third party releases here.

So as to the releases being granted by non-debtors

212-267-6868

Veritext Legal Solutions
www.veritext.com

516-608-2400

The debtors have their own claims. We'll get to that in a minute because the debtors have proposed to release their claims, and that may be of concern to people who have derivative interests and the value of the debtor's claims. But in terms of claims that belong directly to third parties, nobody is being enforced to release anything. They're just volunteering. And there was disclosure as to who the people would be who would benefit from that release and a certain number of people have elected to go ahead and provide it.

MS. DAGNOLI: Okay. I'm sorry. Then I was going to speak on not having liability releases for the executors, and that's not what you're speaking about. So I'm sorry.

THE COURT: Yeah. Just to be clear, if a customer has elected to grant the proposed release, then that customer's claim against those executives has been voluntarily released.

But the theory of the Bankruptcy Code is, you know, that's something that was asked and granted consensually by that particular creditor. That creditor can make up his or her own mind as to whether to grant that release or not and elected to do it.

I, quite frankly, would have no authority to tell them no, that they can't. The case law in the Second Circuit is quite clear that creditors can consent to here, is there anybody who still has an objection that they need me to consider?

212-267-6868

MS. DAGNOLI: Judge --

THE COURT: Yes.

MS. DAGNOLI: This is Lisa Dagnoli. I just want to understand what you're saying.

Are you saying the third party releases include the executives of Voyager and the CEO or we're not speaking about that?

THE COURT: Well, you mean as beneficiaries of the releases?

MS. DAGNOLI: I don't really know the difference, I'm just going to be honest.

THE COURT: In any release, there is a person who grants the release and there's a person in whose favor the release is granted.

MS. DAGNOLI: So the important point here is that the only people granting releases, other than the debtors themselves of the debtor's own claims, the only people granting releases are people who have voluntarily agreed to do so. Nobody's being forced to do so.

So if you, for example, Ms. Dagnoli, owned a direct, personal claim against Mr. Ehrlich, there is nothing in what we're doing today that would purport to release that claim or terminate that claim.

212-267-6868

releases and, in fact, here the debtors are much more narrow than has been approved in other cases. In many other cases, simply voting in favor of the plan is deemed to be a consent to the releases.

We don't have that here. People who voted for the plan are not deemed to have consent to releases unless they separately and explicitly and affirmatively opted into them. So they are about as voluntary --

MS. DAGNOLI: Okay.

THE COURT: They're about as voluntary here as they could be.

MS. DAGNOLI: Okay. I just wanted to go on the record to say that I don't want to have any releases of liability for fraud or, you know, negligence or anything like that for the executives of Voyager or the CEO. And I don't know where that would be put in, but that's what I wanted to say.

Thank you, sir.

THE COURT: Okay. Well --

MR. NEWSOM: Your Honor, this is --

THE COURT: -- to the extent --

MR. NEWSOM: -- Dan Newsom, pro se --

THE COURT: -- to the extent --

MR. NEWSOM: -- creditor again --

THE COURT: -- to the extent, Ms. Dagnoli, that

212-267-6868

516-608-2400

1 you're objecting to somebody else giving up their direct
2 claim of fraud against Mr. Ehrlich, I'm not sure you have 3 standing to object to that. They've done it. They've 4 agreed to it. They made their own decision. It's not my 5 job or yours or anybody else's to tell them they shouldn't
6 have done it or that they can't do it. They've done it.

7 You certainly are entitled to be heard on whether 8 the debtors can or should release their own claims, but to 9 the extent, you know, somebody -- an account holder had a 10 claim or a shareholder had a claim of fraud and elected to 11 release it, well, that's what they're entitled to do. If 12 they don't want to pursue it, they don't have to. Okay.

13 MR. NEWSOM: Your Honor, this is Dan Newsom. This 14 is also in one of my specific requests for relief.

15 I would say -- and, again, I want to be brief out
16 of respect for time. I would say this, and I do understand 17 the difference between my direct claim as a creditor and 18 whether I opted in or not.

19 But as it relates to the releases of the estate,
20 they are overly broad. The investigation by the special
21 committee and the UCC's counsel were limited in scope.
22 They've admitted that they focused primarily around the 23 details of the (indiscernible). They did not investigate
24 the concerns raised by the FTC for, you know, misleading
25 fraudulent or (indiscernible) false claims, FDIC for

1 THE COURT: Yeah.

2 MS. DIRESTA: Yeah, Your Honor. It's Gina DiResta
3 again, pro se creditor.

4 One of the problems I have with the releases --
5 and I agree with you. I do not care how anybody votes on 6 the release. That is every individual's choice.

7 But what I do care about is that people understand what
8 they're voting on. And the verbiage in that third party
9 release is so confusing that even I, with my 15 years of 10 legal experience and drafting 70 documents and contracts,
11 when I first read that release, I literally was like, wait,
12 what, and I had to read it multiple times slowly to really
13 understand what I was doing.

14 And other people in -- within the Voyager investor
15 community, because I am very active online and having talked 16 with a lot of different people or reading a lot of comments
17 that are out there, so many people said they did not 18 understand what they read. They were confused. They didn't 19 know how to vote.

20 There are people who literally voted and then 21 would get in like Twitter spaces or would message on social 22 media and say, hey, I checked off that box, that means I'm 23 saying -- I'm agreeing to getting my claims, right, that 24 means I'm going to get my money back. Like they -- like so
25 many people have different interpretations of the verbiage

1 fraudulent claims. They did not investigate securities
2 fraud. They did not examine third parties that the estate
3 may have viable claims against that are currently being 4 released under the plan, such as (indiscernible), for 5 example, and out of an arrangement to produce an equities
6 platform that they did not follow through with. In fact, in 7 this own bankruptcy proceeding (indiscernible) platform was 8 in its infancy stage and Voyager routinely touted that as 9 something that was coming soon, as early as the first half
10 of 2022 or second half of 2022.

11 My point being they're releasing valuable claims
12 from the estate where we might have derivative claims, but 13 they could be more successfully pursued by the estate. And 14 I think they don't see any reason for it. It's not 15 necessary to effectuate the transaction, and we've been 16 given no consideration or the estate's been given no
17 consideration (indiscernible) creditors.

18 THE COURT: Okay.

19 MR. NEWSOM: I don't think they belong.

20 THE COURT: Just before we -- we'll come back to 21 that in a second, but I just want to see if there's anybody
22 else who wants to be heard on the releases by third parties
23 by people other than the debtors and the estate.

24 Is there anybody else who wants to be heard?

25 MS. DIRESTA: Hi, Your Honor.

Page 169

1 of that release that to say that all 65 percent of people
2 who voted for it obviously agree with it. There's a lot of 3 people who didn't even understand what they're voting for.

4 And I think that was like one of the biggest 5 issues that I found from people and it's -- I mean, they 6 were like, I don't know what I'm voting for. And then for 7 them to, well, accidentally (indiscernible), I checked the 8 box. I didn't know what I was doing.

9 The secondary problem is they did not even know
10 that they could change their vote. The UCC has never made 11 it clear to creditors that they actually had the option of 12 changing their votes by simply going through the voting
13 process all over again. So a lot of people felt stuck.
14 They're like, oops, oh, well, kind of an attitude. And they 15 literally like wrote that online or verbally said that in 16 these Twitter spaces.

17 So that's the thing that I would like to argue is 18 I feel like the verbiage was confusing and kind of 19 deceptive, and people really didn't understand what they 20 were voting for.

21 THE COURT: Well, under the bankruptcy rules when 22 a release is being sought, it's got to be highlighted. And 23 somebody remember me -- remind me what the rule number is.
24 I -- does it require that you quote the provision
25 specifically?

Veritext Legal Solutions
www.veritext.com

212-267-6868

516-608-2400

Page 170

MS. OKIKE: I think it has to be bolded and highlighted.

(Pause)

THE COURT: I think it's Rule 3016(c) as to injunctions, but isn't there a similar provision as to release?

Well, in any event, the ballots that were approved here and the description of the releases were the subject of motions that were considered in January. And they were approved by me after people had a chance to be heard as to whether they were sufficient or not. They are in line with the same kinds of information and same kinds of texts that we've given to people in other cases.

You know, there's a constant push and pull in bankruptcy between, on the one hand people will say it's not simple enough and in plain English I can't understand it, and then on the other hand if you try to do something in simple and plain English you get complaints that you haven't been clear enough as to the full details.

We can't do it both ways. And so we try to make sure that the full information is there so that people can see it. If anybody thought that they were doing anything other than granting a release, I'm not sure how they could have been confused unless they simply didn't read because it says, you're granting a release. It says you don't have to.

to what the independent committee had actually looked at. Rather, just the very terms of the release suggest that somebody sat down and tried to make it as indisputably broad and all encompassing as was humanly possible.

It would appear to cover preference claims, for example, so that customers who weren't employees would be subject to preference claims, but committee members and employees would not, even if they had made similar withdrawals from their accounts. And in terms of whether there's justification of that, I didn't hear a peep of evidence to support it.

So how can I, based on the record that I have, how can I support the breadth of the releases that you've proposed?

MS. OKIKE: Your Honor, may I confer with our co-counsel for one moment?

(Pause)

MR. GOLDBERG: Your Honor, pardon me for interrupting.

THE COURT: Yes.

MR. GOLDBERG: May I be excused to continue discussions with my client about the issues we've --

MR. GOLDBERG: Thank you.

THE COURT: -- go ahead.

You're doing it voluntarily, but you're granting a release.

So I'm not going to back and say that this whole process has to stop and is no good because of the way the releases were presented. I think they were presented fairly.

Okay. So I think we should move onto the releases by the debtors. And, you know, there's some validity to what Mr. Newsom has just said. You've proposed very broad releases and at least one specific settlement in the form of the deal with the -- Mr. Psaropoulos and Mr. Ehrlich.

But the testimony by Mr. Pohl was that his committee looked at potential claims against insiders, not even being very clear about who that was.

I know that the debtors in their statement of financial affairs defined insiders as people who had actual authority over the disposition of assets of the debtor, which means a relatively narrow group. And yet you've proposed very broad releases as to professional persons, all persons who were employed by the debtors during the course of the case. These are releases that would go beyond insiders as I read them. It would cover members of the creditors' committee who certainly are not debtor insiders as that term is used.

The description of the claims that are being released are -- I detected no effort to kind of confine it

THE COURT: We'll break for ten minutes while you have your discussions. Okay.

(Recessed at 3:06 p.m.; reconvened at 3:23 p.m.)

THE COURT: Okay. Are we ready to continue?

MR. KIRPALANI: Yes, Your Honor, thank you. For the record Susheel Kirpalani from Quinn Emmanuel Urquhart & Sullivan on behalf of the special committee of the debtors, Voyager LLC to be precise.

Judge, I want to tell you what we did do as well as what I understood Mr. Pohl's testimony to be about insiders. Mr. Pohl didn't equate his definition of insiders with anything in the statement of financial affairs definition that determine insiders under the Bankruptcy Code, which is how he meant it and used it, is directors and officers.

And I can tell you what we did do, and I can also give you some comfort on the direct -- on the scope of the released parties under Section 136 of the plan, definition 136 of the plan.

First just to get it out of the way, the reference to committee members being released from preference liability, that's not how the plan works. The defined term released parties means, and I'm quoting from it, collectively in each case in its capacity as such, and then

www.veritext.com

212-267-6868

516-608-2400

1 it refers to the committee and each of the members thereof.

2 So a member of a committee, his capacity as such 3 is incapable of receiving preference, because all of that 4 activity happened post-petition. So just to give customers
5 comfort, nobody who sat on the creditor's committee is in 6 the release of potential preference liability. If there was 7 any (indiscernible) committee.

8 We did not look at potential exposure of committee
9 members because we on behalf of the special committee we're 10 not releasing them. It's not true that the only focus of 11 the special committee's work was to look at the 3AC loan.
12 We did look at the statements that were made to the FDIC.
13 We did look at the statements that were made to customers
14 generally and press releases that were made generally and 15 Mr. Pohl did explain that in his testimony.

16 But those do not give rise to causes of action in 17 favor of the debtor. If the debtor had misled the 18 customers, in order to obtain more assets to grow the 19 business, that does not create a cause of action that the 20 debtor has against the officer or director for pursuing that 21 strategy.

22 It may give rise to a cause of action in favor of 23 a customer who received, for example, a text message from 24 Mr. Ehrlich or an equity holder who received a text message
25 or an e-mail from Mr. Ehrlich, of course, we're not

1 in the Bankruptcy Code does a look back period of one year,
2 not 90 days and we did look at withdrawals of crypto assets
3 off the platform beyond 90 days up to one year.

4 There were a handful of withdrawals beyond the 90
5 day period, but those same individuals also put more assets
6 on the platform during the 90 day period, did not give any - 7 - give rise to any suggestion of any impropriety or 8 favoritism or they knew something the market didn't.

9 At the time of those withdrawals the market
10 capitalization for Voyager was over $700 million. And so
11 the notion that the estate should expend funds to try to get 12 what would have amounted to $500,000 worth of transfers, to 13 try to prove insolvency during the period in the end of 14 March and early April, that is beyond the 90 day period with 15 that, but within the one year period just seems cost
16 prohibitive and not a wise use of resources. And so that's 17 the rationale why directors and officers --

18 THE COURT: Why can't the plan administrator make 19 that decision? What do you need a release for? If it's 20 just a question of whether a claim is worth pursuing and not 21 something you're getting any consideration for, why are you
22 granting the release?

23 MR. KIRPALANI: Well, it is the business judgment
24 of the special committee to grant the releases that were 25 proposed in the plan and --

212-267-6868

1 releasing that. That belongs to those individuals and we 2 take that very seriously.

3 With respect to the preferences that have been 4 mentioned on behalf of directors and officers we did look at 5 transfers made to directors and officers. They're detailed 6 in the statement of financial affairs. And we did note
7 there were two bonus payments. We looked into them, they 8 were not preferential, they were ordinary course of 9 business, but we still got a reversal of Mr. Ehrlich's bonus
10 as part of the consideration for the overall settlement.

11 THE COURT: But the schedules listing payments to 12 insiders only listed dollar payments and not account
13 withdrawals.

14 MR. KIRPALANI: Thank you, Your Honor, I'm coming 15 to that.

16 THE COURT: Whereas it seems quite clear from the 17 position the debtor has taken about who owned the property
18 that account withdrawals are preferences or might be 19 preferences anyway.

20 MR. KIRPALANI: That's true, Your Honor, and we 21 did look at potential preference liability of directors and 22 officers for withdrawing their crypto assets off the 23 platform. There were no such withdrawals within the 90 days
24 prior to bankruptcy.

25 Now, of course, we know that insiders as defined

212-267-6868

Veritext Legal Solutions
www.veritext.com

516-608-2400

Page 177

1 THE COURT: And my question is why.

2 MR. KIRPALANI: These individuals served post
3 bankruptcy, I want to be very clear about that, Your Honor.
4 There is no director or officer or employee, for that 5 matter, that's getting a release that didn't serve the 6 estates post bankruptcy.

7 There are directors and officers that were not
8 part of this organization on the commencement of Chapter 11,
9 they are not getting releases. They are not defined as a
10 released party.

11 And when this company filed part and parcel of 12 encouraging folks to stay aboard, work with the debtors,
13 maximize value for customers, was that releases were going 14 to be proposed and if they were appropriate, meaning that 15 there was no wrong doing or no viable causes of action
16 against them, then it would be set up for both by creditors
17 to see if that plan was confirmable and if it was approved.

18 THE COURT: I have no evidence of that.

19 MR. KIRPALANI: You don't have evidence that the 20 plan was sent up for --

21 THE COURT: No, I have no evidence that these 22 employees were told that releases would be sought in 23 exchange for their continued service. I have zero evidence 24 of that.

25 MR. KIRPALANI: Mr. Renzi (ph), I believe in his

212-267-6868

Veritext Legal Solutions
www.veritext.com

1 declaration --

2 THE COURT: I also don't have any disclosure to 3 anybody of just what potential claims are being given up in 4 exchange for that, just what withdrawals they might have 5 made. I have conclusory remarks about it today, I have 6 nothing. I have a suggestion that releasing them from 7 preference claims that have never been described were 8 somehow part of the deal about which I have no evidence.

9 MR. KIRPALANI: I believe Mr. Renzi (ph) testified
10 of the importance of the employee base for this organization
11 and for keeping this sale process together. And that is in 12 his declaration and it was part of his live testimony as 13 well.

14 I don't -- I think you're correct, Your Honor,
15 that there was no specific mention by Mr. Renzi or Mr. Pohl
16 or Mr. Tiffner (ph) that employee X was told, if you stick 17 around, you know, it'll be worth it because we'll be able to 18 obtain global peace from this bankruptcy in exchange for 19 your hard work and your efforts, but I think it is --

20 THE COURT: What about the scope of the release,
21 which seems, you know? The release has provisions in it
22 like anything that you ever did that has any bearing on any 23 claim that anybody ever had against the debtor you're 24 released from. Your investigation didn't go that far,
25 right?

1 judgment made here was, let's free the employees. I don't 2 see any investigation of the full amount of claims for which 3 people are supposed to be getting releases, it's just not 4 there.

5 MR. KIRPALANI: And we did look at the directors
6 and officers, Your Honor.

7 THE COURT: Yeah, I understand.

8 MR. KIRPALANI: Respectfully --

9 THE COURT: That's a different matter. You did
10 look at the directors and officers. I don't know that I can 11 free them from preference claims because I don't have any 12 information about that, but I know you did look at the 3AC
13 loans, but let's just stick with the other releases.

14 I just -- you know, if I'd had some evidence maybe
15 it would've come out differently, but I just don't have it.
16 I think we have to carve them back. That's not to say that 17 the plan administrator has to sue these people for 18 preferences, for example. The plan administrator can decide 19 whether it makes sense or not. But I certainly don't have 20 evidence that would allow me to say that it is so clearly 21 without sense, that it should just be released.

22 MR. KIRPALANI: I understand, Your Honor.

23 THE COURT: Okay.

24 MR. KIRPALANI: Do you want me to continue with my 25 argument about the directors and officers' releases?

1 MR. KIRPALANI: That's true, Your Honor.

2 THE COURT: So why give a release of that breadth?
3 Seems like a gift, a throwaway. Somebody decided we're
4 going to make this as broad as possible, kind of untethered
5 by any actual investigation or review that had been done.

6 MR. KIRPALANI: I can't stand here before you and 7 tell you that we looked at every employee and what they did
8 to everybody in every way, but over the course of --

9 THE COURT: That's literally, if you read through 10 the release, I mean, I'm not sure I've ever read a release
11 that has as many terms as this one, to kind of try to round
12 out the corners of just how the broad release is. And 13 there's no way, I don't care how broad your charter was, 14 there's no way you could have investigated all of those 15 things.

16 And certainly, in terms of evidence that these are 17 reasonable, that they're actual claims, or that there's been 18 actual consideration by the company of the risks and rewards
19 or pursuing claims on these things, no, there isn't.
20 There's just an effort to make the releases as broad as 21 possible, that's not enough.

22 I'm supposed to -- I may be required to some 23 extent to defer to the company's judgment as long as it's 24 reasonable, and so long as the other standards make sense,
25 but implies that a judgment has been made. And the only

1 THE COURT: Go ahead, yes.

2 MR. KIRPALANI: So as Your Honor just covered I
3 believe with Ms. Okike, there is no -- I want to talk for a 4 moment what's not being released, to try to alleviate any 5 kind of tension that may exist.

6 There are no non-consensual third party releases.
7 Customers, creditors and regulators will retain their rights
8 to sue under they have permanently opted in to releases of 9 their own. Their rights to sue people, if any, exist are 10 not impaired by the settlement and by the releases by the 11 estate on the plan.

12 And I wanted to emphasize that, because Mr. Pohl
13 last week was asked questions by customers that really 14 related to non-estate claims, including some of the things I
15 mentioned earlier about statements made to the market, 16 statements made to securities holders, statements made to 17 customers through e-mails, through text messages, through 18 press releases.

19 To the extent, anyone has a direct cause of action
20 and I'm not saying they do, to the extent that they do
21 against individuals, those claims are not released. To the 22 extent they have claims against the debtor, those claims are 23 not released except as part of the discharge and release
24 that will be receiving a dividend pursuant to the plan.

25 Second, the estate that I mentioned, is not releasing former officers, former directors, or former employees, who did not serve the Chapter 11 estate at all.

Third, the estate is not releasing Mr. Ehrlich or Mr. Psaropoulos from the breach of fiduciary duty of care claims relating to their decision to make the 3AC loans. The issue is one of recourse but not on releasing the claim itself.

As Mr. Pohl testified, the special committee determined after a comprehensive investigation that was done hand in hand with the statutory creditor's committee that these breach of fiduciary duty claims are colorable, cognizable and they should be released.

Fourth, the estate is not releasing Alameda or the insurance company that received millions of dollars on the eve of bankruptcy or any other third parties for anything. All of those claims are being retained pursuant to Section 1123(b)(3) of the Bankruptcy Code by the plan administrator and will be prosecuted or not based on that individual's cost benefit analysis.

So while we determined that the estate may have cognizable claims against Mr. Ehrlich and Mr. Psaropoulos, the special committee decided in their business judgment acting independent of any connection whatsoever with the board members, the officers being investigated, counsel for the debtors, to pursue a settlement with respect to these them have indemnity obligations from the company. All of them were exculpated and indemnified pursuant to the operating agreement of the company.

And the sea suite (ph) level managers even had separate indemnification agreements from the company that would become more general unsecured claims. As well as the fact that all of those individuals would also tap into the D&O insurance, which is what we desperately are trying to preserve.

And we're happy that today there's still the full $20 million of coverage available for the plan administrative to attempt to negotiate at least a decent settlement from, if not fully litigated against the carrier and the individuals, Mr. Psaropoulos and Mr. Ehrlich because they are the ones where the buck stopped. They were the ones who had potential liability.

THE COURT: Who was in the officer and director group that you looked at besides Mr. Ehrlich and Mr. Psaropoulos?

MR. KIRPALANI: All of them. The chairman, Mr. Philip Atan (ph), Ryan Wooley (ph), I remember because I remember he's specifically not a director or an officer, but he's a senior member of management, might be considered an insider.

Dave Brosgol, general counsel, Gerard Hanshe as individuals personally assets.

THE COURT: So as to Mr. Ehrlich and Mr. Psaropoulos, did I pronounce that correctly?

MR. KIRPALANI: Yep.

THE COURT: You've proposed an actual settlement that includes a release and I do understand if you want to settle claims against a party it's often part of the discussion that there be a release. But you've preserved certain claims as to the insurance and 3AC, but you've released all others against not only Mr. Ehrlich and Mr. Psaropoulos, but all other officers and directors, not as part of a settlement with them or any demonstrable or identified consideration from them, but just a release.

MR. KIRPALANI: The demonstrative -- the demonstrated consideration was to prevent dissipation of the potential distributions of other customers by having indemnification claims filed by those officers and directors for frivolous claims that would have been brought.

There was concerted effort and investigation into all of the directors and officers in connection not just with the 3AC loan, but in potential with all of the historical transactions, at least of a magnitude that requires spending time to look into them, as well as press releases, messaging by the company, et cetera, to see are there any claims against these individuals. Because all of well, just going off my memory. Let me take a closer look here. Ashwin Prithipaul, the chief financial officer, Marshall Jensen, Pam Kramer (ph), Stephen Ehrlich I mentioned already and Evan Psaropoulos I mentioned already.

Misha Milani (ph) -- one second, Your Honor. Yeah, Mr. Slater (ph) reminds me it were the individuals that were interviewed, the 12 individuals that were interviewed, who we interviewed for any potential wrongdoing and they were all disclosed in the disclosure statement by name.

THE COURT: Okay.

MR. KIRPALANI: So as I was saying, Your Honor, the special committee decided to pursue potential settlement discussions with Mr. Ehrlich and Mr. Psaropoulos in the hope that we could accomplish a few goals. First, get whatever personal assets are liquid and get it all from these individuals, that we can get consensually.

Assuming it was a sizeable chunk from what otherwise we could collect, it might be worth pursuing that. That was goal number one.

Goal number two, minimize or get the waiver of claims by those individuals against the estate because that's currency that they could trade, that they could get. And third, preserve the D&O coverage to the extent possible and specifically with respect to that bizarre eve of

bankruptcy side A policy, could we get them to agree not to look to that policy, until after the plan administrative has had its day in court or a conference room to negotiate with the D&O carriers, and we got that too, Your Honor.

So the -- all three of those goals were met by the special committee. Significant to Mr. Pohl's analysis was that there was no evidence of self dealing, in connection with making the loans to 3AC. These officers would have been entitled or would be entitled to business judgment -- the business judgment rule shield of liability.

Also, as Mr. Pohl mentioned, Voyager Digital's operating agreement gave these individuals broad exculpation and they enjoyed broad indemnification rights that were provided by separate contracts with the debtors.

Mr. Pohl testified in his rule book they didn't conduct sufficient due diligence on making the 3AC loans. But if the special committee pursued litigation, he explained that we would need to prove that the acts and omissions were not just negligent, but they were grossly negligent and there was no evidence of willful misconduct.

Could they have been grossly negligent? Potentially, yes, potentially. There is a gray area between willful misconduct -- I'm sorry, between gross negligence and negligence. But what we've determined and what Mr. Pohl testified is that both of these men had a keen interest in actually been weighed. You offered me the evidence and I understand what the company standards are and the limits of my authority as to what I can do as to that. And I really want to set that settlement aside and just make sure that the rest of the releases make sense.

As to the other members of the trove who you've interviewed, you said that the reason for the releases that it prevents a frivolous depletion by the assertion of claims that might be subject to indemnity. Well, but these are the debtor's claims. So who's going to make a frivolous assertion of claims on behalf of the debtors?

MR. KIRPALANI: Well, I mean the charge for the special committee was to determine whether there are any non-frivolous claims to be brought. So they made that determination and determined that there are no non-frivolous things that could be brought, and so therefore, the releases of those individuals is --

THE COURT: But I think we've also made clear that you did not and could not possibly have looked into claims relating to all of the kinds of things that are covered by that release.

MR. KIRPALANI: We looked at the -- obviously the 3AC loan was a primary focus as Mr. Pohl testified and it was. It is the reason this company wound up in bankruptcy. As for disclosure to customers, dealings with the FDIC, the success of Voyager. If Voyager did well, they did well. If Voyager failed, so too would their careers and their personal investments kept on the platform, as well as their equity investments.

Even if a plaintiff could prove that their acts and omissions were grossly negligent, the plaintiff would still need to prove that it's that gross negligence that caused the losses to the estate, when by all acts and by all indications and as Mr. Pohl testified, his view, the estate was defrauded by 3AC and its founders.

And even if the plaintiff could surpass those hurdles and obtain the judgment against those individuals, after undoubtedly incurring significant costs and expenses, Mr. Ehrlich and Mr. Psaropoulos simply did not have the personal assets that satisfied any significant judgment.

And Mr. Pohl testified that we did look at their (indiscernible) assets and the states in which they lived to see are these community property estates and they are not.

So after doing all that, we still weren't prepared to let them walk for nothing, so we decided --

THE COURT: No, I understand the case as to the settlement with Mr. Ehrlich and Mr. Psaropoulos and I understand that that's the one that's going to bother some of the customers the most, but I do understand that it has been looked at, it has actually been considered, it has dealings with regulators, we did look at all of those as well, as to whether the estate, the company would have a cause of action against its own officer, its own director under the terms of the operating agreement, there's no such claim for those types of conduct.

THE COURT: Okay. Let me say that as to the proposed settlement with Mr. Ehrlich and Mr. Psaropoulos, the standards that I am obligated to apply are for me to assess whether it is in the range of reasonableness, based on likelihood of success, possibility of recovery, et cetera, I do think that the evidence that you have given me which while the conclusion has been disagreed with, the actual evidence has not been controverted.

I think that supports the settlement and I'm sure that's going to be an enormous disappointment to many of the account holders on the phone, but I think that the evidence is going to compel me to that conclusion.

I'm much less convinced, the scope of the releases as to the other insiders and certainly not at all convinced as to the scope of the releases as to people who may not have even been the subject of your investigation. Let me hear from the U.S. Trustee because they had objections on this point.

MR. KIRPALANI: Thank you.

THE COURT: Thank you.

MR. MORRISSEY: Thank you, Your Honor, good afternoon. Richard Morrissey for the U.S. Trustee.

Just so it's clear, Your Honor is talking about debtor releases, they're all third party releases, they cover --

THE COURT: Third party releases were voluntary, they cover what they cover. I'm not undoing any of those.

MR. MORRISSEY: Okay. Your Honor, the releases in the Chapter 11 cases can be brought, but there's a limit as to how broad they can be. And the -- as Your Honor has stated here, it covers a lot of ground and too much ground. And there was not consideration given in exchange for some of those releases and I'm speaking specifically of retained professionals, for example, who are covered by the way by exculpation, which we'll be talking about later. And also all the employees of the debtor.

So I believe, Your Honor, that the releasees should be circumscribed as pretty much in line what Your Honor just said.

Your Honor, there's a lot of overlap between the exculpation provisions and the release provision. I can certainly wait to discuss the issues we have there. But, Your Honor, on the third party releases, just one point I wanted to make.

The debtors have agreed to leave something from

MS. OKIKE: No, Your Honor, we tried to be consistent with Aegean, but if we weren't successful in that we're happy to (indiscernible).

THE COURT: Okay. What I read in the plan seemed much broader than what I had done in Aegean.

MR. MORRISSEY: Your Honor, would you like me to allow Ms. Okike to respond?

THE COURT: To that question only, yeah, but stay where you are at the podium and I'll hear you.

MS. OKIKE: Your Honor, we tried to limit it to, you know, transactions and orders that Your Honor has approved in connection with, you know, various negotiating, executing, implementing transactions in connection with these Chapter 11 cases. That was our intention.

THE COURT: Okay. I don't know, maybe I'm remembering something wrong, but I thought when I looked at it that the exculpation language was significantly broader than what I had done in Aegean.

MR. MORRISSEY: Your Honor, we thought so too and as a matter of fact, we actually came to an agreement that debtor's counsel on certain parts of that exculpation provision.

THE COURT: Okay.

MR. MORRISSEY: And I think that should narrow the issue --

the third --

THE COURT: Okay.

MR. MORRISSEY: -- released party and that would be the wind down debtor, because we believe, Your Honor, that releases should not be applied prospectively. And we do believe that only the people who have been involved in the case between the petition date and the effective date --

THE COURT: Okay.

MR. MORRISSEY: -- should be covered.

So with that, Your Honor, I'll -- I guess I'll wait until exculpation.

THE COURT: Well, let's do it together, to the extent that you're complaining about releases of professionals, or I suppose, committee members. I do think the exculpation here, the provision was too broad as -- at least as set forth in what I've seen. I don't know, I haven't gotten through all the different iterations of the confirmation order that you've submitted, but you know what I did in the Aegean case, which was narrower and are you suggesting more than that here, and if so, why?

MR. MORRISSEY: The answer to that is, no, Your Honor. We -- as a matter of fact we --

THE COURT: I'm sorry, I was asking them.

MR. MORRISSEY: Oh.

THE COURT: That's all right.

212-267-6868

THE COURT: Very good.

MR. MORRISSEY: -- before Your Honor.

THE COURT: So is there any remaining issue on the exculpation?

MR. MORRISSEY: There is some.

THE COURT: Okay.

MR. MORRISSEY: Not nearly as much as there was originally.

THE COURT: All right.

MR. MORRISSEY: (indiscernible) that, Your Honor. Your Honor, I already mentioned the professionals being on the list of both released parties and exculpated parties.

THE COURT: Yeah.

MR. MORRISSEY: We don't have a problem with them being on the list of exculpated parties. I just wanted to make that clear. The plan also provided for not only prospective releases to entities that didn't exist or individuals, but also the exculpation provision does the same thing.

The -- we had an issue that we did resolve, Your Honor, regarding the special committee since Mr. Kirpalani just spoke, I figured I'd raise that first.

The special committee itself was actually -- I'm sorry, not committee, the special committee investigation

212-267-6868

A-1318

1 itself was among the exculpated parties. And in response to
2 the U.S. concern about that, debtors proposed that the Court
3 -- if the Court approves the settlement or transaction, to 4 use Your Honor's language, the parties to that settlement or 5 transaction so that the investigation itself can be part of 6 the exculpation provision.

7 So I think we have an agreement on that, Your 8 Honor, as long as its tied to the Aegean standard of the 9 Court approved settlement or transaction.

10 THE COURT: Okay.

11 MR. MORRISSEY: The debtors have also agreed that 12 to add a provision that nothing in the plan shall limit the 13 liability of professionals to their clients, pursuant to New 14 York comp codes and regulations, Rule 1.8(h). It's 15 basically the idea --

16 THE COURT: I'm familiar with that --

17 MR. MORRISSEY: -- (indiscernible) professionals.

18 THE COURT: I understand it.

19 MR. MORRISSEY: So the -- one issue we have 20 regarding exculpation is that we still have, is that the 21 distribution agent which is the same finance, is listed
22 among the exculpated parties. This we believe is an 23 improper perspective release and effectively shields the 24 distribution agent from future, which is to sale post sale,
25 post effective date conduct.

1 with Mr. Morrissey? Is there a continued objection to it?

2 MS. OKIKE: I think this -- I don't want to speak
3 for Mr. Morrissey, but I think he categorically opposes an 4 entity that doesn't come into effect until after the 5 effective date from receiving an exculpation. And I think 6 we just have a disagreement given the rule that the 7 distribution agent will play, in addition prior to the 8 effective date and getting ready to actually effectuate the 9 transactions.

10 MR. MORRISSEY: Your Honor, Richard Morrissey
11 again for the U.S. Trustee. To be candid, Your Honor, I
12 don't remember exactly what the language of the Fairway
13 provision was, because (indiscernible) in fact provided to 14 us a while ago.

15 All I can go by, Your Honor, what I'm reading here
16 in the (indiscernible) as far as whether it's being 17 exculpated and who is exculpated. This is not an estate
18 fiduciary that's being exculpated here, the distribution
19 agent. We do recognize as Ms. Okike said, there's certain 20 things that the -- that finance or the distribution which it
21 has to do in order to carry out the plan. But the --

22 THE COURT: Yes, they do it --

23 MR. MORRISSEY: -- exculpation goes beyond that.

24 THE COURT: They do it -- well, in what way are 25 they not a fiduciary under my order, they receive these

1 And we would ask that the distribution agent be
2 stricken unless the Court wants to apply the Aegean standard
3 to narrow that release for the distribution agent, related
4 to carrying out the Court's orders.

5 I can -- I was going to go on to other issues but 6 I can stop now and allow counsel to respond.

7 THE COURT: Well, I'll hear from the debtor's
8 counsel on the proposed exculpation or releases as to the 9 distribution agent.

10 MS. OKIKE: Your Honor, with respect to the 11 distribution agent, the distribution agent is going to be 12 taking certain actions in connection with effectuating the 13 transactions that Your Honor is approving under the plan.
14 And we think particularly in this case, you know, dealing 15 with some of the comments by the governmental entities they 16 should be protected as, you know, in the capacity when 17 they're acting as a distribution agent under the plan. It
18 essentially (indiscernible) that Your Honor has approved.

19 We know that you approved something similar in the 20 Fairway case and we tried to model that in the plan as well.
21 We think it's appropriate in this case, given that the 22 distribution agent is a fiduciary acting on behalf of the 23 debtors, in connection with consummating the transactions
24 under the plan.

25 THE COURT: Okay. Have you shared that language

1 assets in trust and they distribute them in trust, so how 2 are they not a fiduciary?

3 MR. MORRISSEY: Well, Your Honor, they're
4 (indiscernible) to the extent that they are fiduciaries
5 (indiscernible) where the exculpation is not.

6 THE COURT: Well, I don't have the problem if you
7 want to -- yeah, I'm not going to give him exculpations for 8 anything that they do, right. For heaven sakes, if they 9 steal assets, I'm not exculpating them from that. But in 10 performance of the tasks that I have approved and the 11 faithful performance of the duties or of the agreements that 12 I have approved, why should they be liable? And the same
13 thing I said this morning, you know, they're going to have - 14 - once I order them to do these things, they're going to 15 have a statutory obligation to do them, right?

16 MR. MORRISSEY: Yes, Your Honor, but not 17 everything that they do is going to be within the Court's 18 purview. So if there's signed agreements, for example,
19 things like that --

20 THE COURT: Surely you can come up with language
21 that makes clear that all we're really doing is saying
22 they're exculpated to the extent that they faithfully
23 perform and execute the transactions that I have approved and 24 the duties that I have assigned to them, right? If that's 25 not the perfect language, you should surely can come up with

1 some.

2 MR. MORRISSEY: We will do that. Thank you, Your
3 Honor.

4 Your Honor, the next issue --

5 THE COURT: Before we go to the next issue, just 6 hang on one second. Just one second.

7 Before we go to the next issue, where do we stand
8 on the one that is nearest and dearest to my heart, which is 9 whether I have to do a confirmation order by this evening?

10 MR. GOLDBERG: Your Honor, I think we have someone 11 --

12 THE COURT: Just wait, please.

13 MR. GOLDBERG: We had some ongoing discussions
14 that we had with the debtor and the committee regarding Your 15 Honor's request on that point as well. And so the next 16 break I'll speak with them and hopefully (indiscernible).

17 THE COURT: Okay. Whoever was speaking on the 18 line. Who was it?

19 MR. BARNEA: Sorry, this is J.D. Barnea from the 20 U.S. Attorney's Office. I spoke earlier this morning about 21 the exculpation clause.

22 THE COURT: Right.

23 MR. BARNEA: I just wanted to note for the record
24 our continued objection to this entire enterprise and to 25 note that in the initial proposed order that would have

212-267-6868

Veritext Legal Solutions

1 appellate rights if necessary to the perspective exculpation
2 of debtors and non-debtors as to many tasks that may or may 3 not violate all sorts of obligations they may have to the 4 government and others.

5 And so we just wanted to put that on the record.
6 We understand, Your Honor, that the Court has already spoken
7 a little bit to that this morning, but we really would like
8 the opportunity to submit our arguments in writing, before
9 the Court enters any final order.

10 We also don't -- haven't seen any final order yet.
11 We understand that they're going to be working on that, so 12 we'd like the opportunity to see that language before it's 13 approved by the Court and to submit our written objections
14 to it.

15 THE COURT: Okay.

16 MR. MORRISSEY: Your Honor, just to add what 17 counsel had just said. I thought it would be helpful to 18 point out to Your Honor where the new language appears,
19 because it's not actually with the exculpation language
20 itself. It's separate. And I hesitate to say the most 21 recent version of the plan, I think this is. It's Article
22 6, provisions governing distributions, Subsection B, which 23 is called power -- rights and powers of distribution agent.

24 And then Subparagraph 1, powers of the 25 distribution agent, the debtors added a paragraph and I

212-267-6868

Veritext Legal Solutions

1 approved the plan in this case, it would have carved out the 2 government from the exculpation provision, it was only the 3 revised proposed order that was proposed for the first time
4 on the morning, on Thursday morning at the beginning of the 5 confirmation hearing that purported to undo the appropriate
6 carve out for the government from the exculpation clause.

7 That is why we objected that same day and the 8 letter that I sent. And that's why in our letter we asked 9 for an opportunity to fully brief the issue of whether 10 exculpation is appropriate in this case as against the 11 government.

12 We understand, Your Honor, that you've decided the 13 Aegean case, a decision that we don't necessarily agree with 14 on the government's side, but we wanted an opportunity to 15 submit fully our arguments as to why an exculpation as 16 against the government is inconsistent with any number of 17 constitutional provisions that's been consistent with the 18 Bankruptcy Code, it's been consistent with the District
19 Court's decision in the Perdue case and in many other 20 provisions that we could explain if we were permitted to 21 submit a full brief.

22 Again, time prevented us from doing so, although 23 we're working on as we speak and are prepared to submit one 24 perhaps even this afternoon or tomorrow, but we didn't want 25 to lose the opportunity to object and to preserve our

212-267-6868

Veritext Legal Solutions
www.veritext.com

1 believe that's what Mr. Barnea was referring to.

2 THE COURT: Okay.

3 MR. MORRISSEY: Your Honor, I was going to 4 continue. I didn't know if anyone else wanted to comment on 5 the exculpation regarding the distribution agent.

6 THE COURT: Go ahead.

7 MR. UPTEGROVE: Your Honor, William Uptegrove on
8 behalf of the United States Securities & Exchange
9 Commission, if I may.

10 THE COURT: Yes.

11 MR. UPTEGROVE: Your Honor, I don't have any 12 further argument on the issue of exculpation per se, but did 13 want to clarify a couple of points, I think including the 14 provision of the plan that the U.S. Trustee was just 15 mentioning.

16 So I understand that the Court wants to 17 (indiscernible) the exculpation language consistent with its 18 standard language particularly used in the Aegean case. We 19 just wanted to confirm that the portions of the three 20 paragraphs in our objection filed this morning will be 21 stricken as inconsistent with, you know, the Aegean standard
22 and will be applicable law that Your Honor discussed this 23 morning.

24 THE COURT: I don't have --

25 UNIDENTIFIED: Your Honor --

212-267-6868

Veritext Legal Solutions
www.veritext.com

516-608-2400

THE COURT: I don't have all that language in front of me, but I think that's right.

MR. UPTEGROVE: And I think -- I don't have the full plan in front of me, but I think the U.S. Trustee, I think that it's -- we're talking about the same provision. I see it here as page 69 and 70 of the PDF of 158 of Docket No. 1138. There's a -- there's similar language to what we've been (indiscernible) confirmation. It's a little different, so I don't know if that's the same provision but it reads something to the effect and extent that any cryptocurrency is deemed to be a security of the SEC or any governmental unit.

And then it goes on to talk about good faith and no liability for any -- various acts, including distribution of cryptocurrency. That in addition to the Aegean language that Your Honor talked about, so I just wanted to make sure that that would be something that wouldn't be, you know, included and applied in the order, it's over and above (indiscernible) of the Aegean standard.

MR. BARNEA: Your Honor, this is J.D. Barnea again from the U.S. Attorney's Office. I just wanted to read to the Court the specifics, most problematic language that's in paragraph 142 and 143 of the proposed -- the latest version of the proposed confirmation order, which in our view, goes well beyond even what this Court allowed in Aegean, and is well beyond Aegean even to the extent that Aegean is the appropriate standard here --

THE COURT: I'm not going to do -- I'm not going to do anything of that scope. On the other hand, as I said earlier, whatever I approve and confirm, there are individuals who will have a statutory obligation to do it. The regulators have had the chance, but have declined the chance to suggest or to show me that any of these transactions are illegal or should not go forward. It just suggested that there might be issues, but have not taken an official position.

To me you ought to be and will be estopped through the exculpation provision from contending that the individuals who carry out their statutory obligations to implement the deal that I approve are personally liable in any way for doing so. That doesn't mean that you can't go after them if they violate tax laws. It doesn't mean you can't go after them if they act unfaithfully, et cetera.

It does mean to be a hundred percent clear that I am not going to sit here and say that you can say nothing to me, deliberately remain silent as to whether this is a problem and actually is a problem in your view, only to come back after I direct debtors, for example, to distribute VGX and say that the people who did so violated the securities laws and may be criminally or civilly punished individually totally improper in many respects.

It says, provided further that the United States, the state, and their agencies may not and will not allege that the restructuring transactions are a violation of any rules or regulations enforced by the United States, the state, or any of their agencies, nor will they bring a claim against any person, extremely broadly defined, on account of their -- on account of or relating to the restructuring transactions.

This language, if approved in the final order, could potentially make it so that if someone incurs a tax liability in the restructuring transaction, the IRS cannot assess that tax. If someone commits a crime in implementing the restructuring transaction, they can't be prosecuted for it.

If they commit a fraud, they can't be prosecuted or civilly charged with that. If they violated the securities rules, or if they violate an environmental rule, or any other possible governmental action that relates in any way to the restructuring transactions of which no one even knows what those things might be, this language would enjoin and tie the hands of the United States and the states and all of their agencies from ever claiming so, simply because, you know, they relate in some way to transactions contemplated by a plan of reorganization, not -- that goes for having done so.

That to me is something I will not tolerate and will not allow. You've had your chance if that's what you think to make that argument. And I won't subject individuals under the compulsion of my own order, my own confirmation order to do things that will subject them to potential liabilities. It's just not appropriate in the slightest. Okay?

MR. BARNEA: So it's the Court's position and we respectfully request the opportunity to submit a brief setting forth our argument in more detail before the Court enters any confirmation.

THE COURT: Go ahead, but hurry up.

MR. GOLDBERG: Your Honor, I just wanted to clarify for the record. We refer individuals, we don't mean just (indiscernible) persons but also legal entities in their roles (indiscernible).

THE COURT: Correct. And I'm just saying, you know, I'm not saying that they can't be stopped, that people can't preserve their injunctive rights. That's fine. But, you know, to kind of purposefully stay on the sidelines and take no position on the issue and then come in and say that what people are under court order to do, they're now personally or they're not subject to penalties for, that's just doesn't make any sense to me, not in the slightest.

MR. UPTEGROVE: Your Honor, William Uptegrove for the SEC. Just to go back to our point, we understand your position. We just for the purpose of clarity to make sure that the final order reflects what I think you've said, paragraph -- again paragraphs -- the U.S. Attorney's Office just talked about two of the three paragraphs that are cited in our objections, so 142 and 143 are the paragraphs the U.S. Attorney's Office mentioned and those are two of the three in our objection.

The third one is SEC specific injunction. And so I think those were the problematic language Your Honor talked about this morning, that you weren't going to be -- you weren't going to enter. So we just wanted to confirm so that when we talk to the debtors afterwards, we're all on the same page about what the language is and isn't.

I think that language should be stricken. I think that's what Your Honor said earlier. I just wanted to make sure that we're all talking about the same thing, one. And then two, there is some sort of I would think similar language in the plan I mentioned about good faith and things of that that go above and beyond Aegean, and just want to make sure that things like that, you know, finding no liability per se isn't what Your Honor has in mind.

THE COURT: I guess --

MS. RYAN: Your Honor, this is Ms. Ryan --

212-267-6868

Veritext Legal Solutions

Additionally, paragraph 143 of the proposed order I think the newest version is Docket 1140. It contains language that references back to paragraph 97 and 99 of the proposed order. And those paragraphs are very broad releases for the purchaser. And again, we find that broad release objectionable. Once the purchaser purchases the property, they're going to have to comply with law, just as, you know, any purchaser, buyer or even debtor in possession would have to. And so we also object to that addition, in addition to what you've already heard.

THE COURT: Which paragraphs in particular of which?

MS. RYAN: In particular, it's 97 and 99, Your Honor. And 99 particularly the breath of it is concerning to me.

THE COURT: Which version --

MS. RYAN: 97 --

THE COURT: Which version of the confirmation order to make sure I look at the right paragraphs?

MS. RYAN: At Docket 1140, Your Honor.

THE COURT: 1140?

MS. RYAN: Yes, sir.

THE COURT: Okay. I don't have that right in front of me, but we'll -- I think the best thing to do on all of these provisions is to see what language we come up

212-267-6868

Veritext Legal Solutions

516-608-2400

THE COURT: -- until we see the final language we don't know, but I think -- I hope the concept is clear. Let's just see if we can get the wordsmithing down.

MR. JONES: Your Honor, Seth Jones, pro se.

THE COURT: Yeah.

MR. JONES: A quick question. The SEC has taken a stance that (indiscernible) XRP is a security, that's currently in the middle of a trial. Is that not violating security laws (indiscernible) XRP on the (indiscernible) platform?

THE COURT: Well, there's no ruling at trial, right?

MR. JONES: Okay. But you keep talking about taking a stance on (indiscernible), they took a stance on XLT (ph), right, I just want to clarify that.

THE COURT: I don't think the SEC has even suggested that what Voyager's going to be doing with XRP is a violation of the securities laws, although that's just something they haven't revealed. They haven't said that.

MR. JONES: All right. Thank you, sir.

MS. RYAN: Your Honor, this is Ms. Ryan from the State of Texas. If I may be heard regarding the releases?

THE COURT: Sure.

MS. RYAN: Thank you, Your Honor. The State has objected and agrees on the same grounds that you've heard.

with and then see if there are further objections. Okay?

MS. RYAN: Yes, Your Honor.

MS. OKIKE: Your Honor, I will just say we have been negotiating back and forth with the various governmental entities on these various provisions. And the proviso which appears in all of the paragraphs was what we added to try to get at what Your Honor said in terms of the exculpated parties not being personally liable, in terms of taking actions that Your Honor approves or may approve under the plan.

I totally understand we probably could have done that a little bit better, but that is what we're trying to get at. The second thing we're trying to get at is that we don't believe any language in here should somehow preclude the governmental agencies from having complied with the bar date order.

So, for instance, the SEC did not file a claim against the debtors. And we don't think that there should be anything in this order that somehow insinuates that they're now entitled to file (indiscernible) proof of claim.

THE COURT: I haven't heard anything being said that would entitle them to do that, but.

MS. OKIKE: But we have a specific proviso here, Your Honor, that they're objecting to that says nothing in this confirmation order or the plan shall modify in any

1 respect the relief previously granted in the bar date order.
2 And they're explicitly objecting to that proviso and they
3 did not file a proof of claim.

4 THE COURT: I think --

5 MR. UPTEGROVE: Your Honor --

6 THE COURT: I thought they were objecting to -- I
7 thought the objection was a different proviso. What's the 8 objection to that one?

9 MR. UPTEGROVE: Your Honor, William Uptegrove on
10 behalf of the United States Securities & Exchange
11 Commission. There's room on filing a proof of claim and 12 untimely proofs of claims. I don't think there needs to be 13 a provision in the confirmation order specifically singling
14 out, you know, the government bar date and our proving 15 claim, one.

16 And two, there's additional language in here that,
17 let me just find it. So it says -- so I think this is -- I 18 think it's the second to last or maybe to last version of 19 the confirmation order, paragraph 142 in our objection.
20 It's quoted, provided however that nothing in this
21 confirmation order or the plan shall modify in any respects
22 the relief previously granted in the bar date order, just to 23 point out that parenthetically that don't need another order
24 to say what's already in a prior order.

25 But, no person or entity including the United

1 fact that we have a bar date order and the SEC did not file
2 a proof of claim.

3 THE COURT: All right. I will --

4 MR. UPTEGROVE: Your Honor, it's a liquidating
5 debtor, it doesn't get a discharge.

6 THE COURT: I will --

7 MS. OKIKE: It's not a discharge.

8 THE COURT: I will look at the proviso and modify
9 it appropriately. If I can't do so, I shouldn't have this 10 job, but we don't need any further argument about that.

11 MR. GOLDBERG: Your Honor, Adam Goldberg on Latham
12 & Watkins on behalf of Finance U.S. Just very quickly to 13 the frame issue raised by the State of Texas on paragraphs 14 97 and 99.

15 From our perspective, that language is intended to 16 implement the free and clear nature of the asset sales and 17 to protect the purchaser and the acquired assets from claims
18 and interests that could be brought against those assets and 19 the debtor's -- in the hands of the debtor's estate.

20 THE COURT: Right.

21 MR. GOLDBERG: Thank you, Your Honor.

22 THE COURT: That just means you're not liable,
23 taking on liability for liabilities of the debtor.

24 MR. GOLDBERG: Correct.

25 THE COURT: It doesn't mean that you're freed from

1 States, the state, or any other agencies can seek or receive
2 a direct or indirect distribution of any property of the 3 debtor's estate unless they filed a proof of claim prior to 4 the government bar date.

5 Again, there's already rules in the Code and the 6 bankruptcy rules for this. And a big problem with it is the 7 language, the indirect language. Your Honor, I have 8 absolutely no idea what that means. And it could mean all
9 types of things in hindsight, and it's just an unmuted
10 provision that potentially does enjoin something that we 11 otherwise could do by saying we can't indirectly
12 (indiscernible) that language, indirect, you know, seek 13 (indiscernible) a direct or indirect distribution of 14 property of the debtor's estate. It's -- in our view, it's 15 not a needed provision. It has ambiguous language that 16 could be read at some point could somehow impair our police
17 and regulatory powers and we think that's improper.

18 MS. OKIKE: Your Honor, the reason we have the 19 proviso is because the provision that they requested that we 20 add, says nothing in this confirmation order or the plan
21 shall (indiscernible) release by the United States of any 22 claim arising under, and all these different things, or 23 enjoin them from bringing a claim against the released
24 parties, which includes the debtors.

25 And so we think you need a proviso in light of the 1 any of your own liabilities.

2 MR. GOLDBERG: That's exactly right, Your Honor.

3 THE COURT: Yeah.

4 MR. GOLDBERG: And we (indiscernible) to protect 5 the purchaser of liability is protect against action against 6 the acquired assets. Thank you.

7 THE COURT: Okay.

8 MS. RYAN: Your Honor, this is Ms. Ryan. I think 9 that's the spirit of those two paragraphs. I do think that 10 they're overly broad, but I'm happy to work with counsel to 11 find wording that we can all live with.

12 THE COURT: Okay.

13 MR. MORRISSEY: Your Honor, Richard Morrissey for 14 the U.S. Trustee, shall I continue?

15 THE COURT: Go ahead.

16 MR. MORRISSEY: Okay. Your Honor, the next issue
17 on the subject of exculpation covers certain definitive 18 documents. That is a defined term. It's paragraph 60 of 19 the plan. We have no objection, Your Honor, to the 20 inclusion of certain of these documents listed, in the 21 context of exculpation such as the disclosure statement and 22 the plan and confirmation order, for example.

23 But we did raise objections to the inclusion of 24 certain other documents. And, Your Honor, the debtors have 25 agreed to take out a couple of those exceptions from the

212-267-6868

exculpation provision.

THE COURT: Right.

MR. MORRISSEY: One is listed in the declaration as subsection G as in George. The management transition plan which is something that's going to be happening later on. And also subsection H which is any new material employment consulting or similar agreements entered to between the (indiscernible) any of the debtor's employees if any.

So those we agreed to. There's one thing that we didn't quite come up with an agreement on, but I believe we can agree right here and now, as a matter of fact counsel and I discussed this before Your Honor took the bench this morning.

Subsection K of that definition has a catch all to basically account for anything that is missed in the prior subparagraphs. And it covers all kinds of documents, deeds, agreements by filing notification to pleadings, certificates, orders, letters, instruments and the list goes on and on.

Your Honor, the catch all provision we believe should be expressly limited post petition, pre-effective date, that time period. And the U.S. Trustee would also go along with this language provided that all of the definitive documents in the catch all paragraph are within the Court's

The amended plan provided that all proofs of claim were to be considered objective and disputed without further action --

THE COURT: Right, that's changed. I saw that change. I saw the change to delete the requirement that only -- the provision that said that only the plan administrator could object.

MR. MORRISSEY: Correct.

THE COURT: And I saw that they addressed your concern about how late claims would be treated and made clear that they're not automatically gone. They're gone subject to my approval that they're gone.

MR. MORRISSEY: Yes, and Your Honor has officially stolen my thunder. And therefore, I have nothing further. Thank you, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Okay. All right.

MR. KIRPALANI: Your Honor, if I may?

THE COURT: Yeah.

MR. KIRPALANI: Susheel Kirpalani from Quinn Emmanuel. I just wanted to come back to you on the issue of the releases, the insiders, the justification for why insiders who aren't actually paying anything should be getting a release. And the individuals as we mentioned and as Mr. Pohl testified with whom the buck stopped were the CEO and COO, Mr. Ehrlich and Mr. Psaropoulos. In all of the purview.

In other words, we don't object to the language so long as the Court will (indiscernible) those documents. Now then counsel can tell me if I have that correct.

MS. OKIKE: Yes, I think subject to the agreement on language.

THE COURT: Okay.

MR. MORRISSEY: Okay. Your Honor, while I'm here, I resolved a couple of other issues unrelated to exculpation. I can certainly let the Court know later or now, it's not that long, it's up to the Court.

THE COURT: Let's get the good news now.

MR. MORRISSEY: Okay. And, Your Honor, I should say also that the parties have been very cooperative throughout this process in striving to reach certain understanding.

The amended disclosure statement, Your Honor, does disclose both the management transition plan and an employee transition plan, but it --

THE COURT: You resolved it by saying I'm not specifically approving them, yes.

MR. MORRISSEY: Correct.

THE COURT: Okay.

MR. MORRISSEY: Thank you, Your Honor. The debtor has agreed to that.

negotiations with them, it was always the understanding that this is a package D&O settlement for the insiders and it's for a reason.

Every one of those subordinate officers would otherwise be pointing the finger and potential cross claim against those two, because those are the individuals with whom the buck stops.

And so I think it is -- it's not going to be a faithful implementation of the settlement, the so-called D&O settlement if individuals who could then claim --

THE COURT: That explains why you want to release them of liability as to the 3AC problem.

MR. KIRPALANI: Well, if I may, Your Honor, on that point I anticipated you asking me that. In paragraph 10 of Mr. Pohl's declaration it's clear what the investigation entailed. It's more than just the loans of 3AC. It was Voyage -- all of Voyager's loans to third parties, the diligence performed in connection with all of those loans, the formation and function of the risk committee, Voyager's staking of customer cryptocurrency assets, Voyager's regulatory compliance, Voyager's communications with the public, Voyager's prepetition payments to insiders and certain third parties, and other aspects that's referring to the insurance company, Your Honor, and other aspects of Voyager LLC's business.

1 While I understand we didn't take on a wholesale
2 investigation of what payments might have been paid to 3 employees generally. I will come to that in a moment.
4 Certainly with respect to the insiders, I think if the 5 releases could have least tracked the language of the 6 testimony that we had of what was investigated, I think that 7 would be acceptable.

8 THE COURT: Read that language to me again,
9 please.

10 MR. KIRPALANI: Yes, Your Honor. Voyager's loans
11 to third parties, with a particular focus on the couple of 12 loans to 3AC, the diligence performed in connection with 13 those loans, the formation and function of Voyager LLC's
14 risk committee, Voyager LLC's staking of customer
15 cryptocurrency assets, Voyager LLC's regulatory compliance,
16 Voyager LLC's communications with the public, Voyager LLC's
17 prepetition payments to insiders and certain third parties
18 and other aspects of Voyager LLC's business, the last one,
19 you know, I think is probably too vague to be meaningful.

20 The specific individuals were also listed in 21 paragraph 13 of Mr. Pohl's declaration. I did miss a couple
22 when I was trying to do it from memory.

23 And with respect to the employees broadly, Your 24 Honor, although it wasn't the focus of the special committee
25 or of Mr. Pohl's work and his testimony, it was the focus of 1 feasibility of the plan, that these folks are necessary in 2 either direction, whether we sell (indiscernible) and 3 frankly particularly if we do the (indiscernible)

4 liquidation. The feasibility of that is tied to the -- 5 these individuals continuing to perform their services.

6 THE COURT: Okay. What else do we have, Ms.
7 Okike?

8 MS. OKIKE: Your Honor, there were some objections
9 that we are impermissibly seeking a discharge, who obviously 10 are not entitled a discharge, and we included a provision in 11 the confirmation order to that effect.

12 I believe we need to consult with counsel Debias
13 (ph) on the customer data, so that we can come back on that 14 point.

15 Your Honor, we also had an objection, I believe,
16 with respect to dollarization. This was by Mr. Schupato
17 (ph) who argued that customers were entitled to the return
18 of cryptocurrency on the debtor's platform and that their 19 claim should not be (indiscernible) as of the petition date.

20 We continue to take the position that 21 cryptocurrency on the platform is property of the estate and 22 dollarization is required under Section 502(b) of the 23 Bankruptcy Code.

24 Your Honor, with respect to the liquidation
25 analysis, I think Mr. Renzi's testimony made clear that

1 Mr. Renzi's testimony in paragraphs 114 and 115 of his 2 declaration, which is at Docket 1119. Mr. Slade pointed 3 that out to me.

4 THE COURT: His declaration was admitted only to 5 the extent that it dealt with uncontroverted aspects of the 6 Bankruptcy Code.

7 MR. SLADE: That's correct, Your Honor. He did
8 testify on those particular points, I think that's what you
9 directed us to do on -- and I think what Mr. Kirpalani
10 (indiscernible) it.

11 MR. KIRPALANI: In his testimony, Your Honor, he 12 did specify that the debtor's releases of potential debtor
13 claims for the individuals who searched faithfully during 14 the post petition process, including all of the employees
15 which are defined as the Voyager released employees, that 16 those releases were critical to keeping the band together,
17 to ensuring maximum value for the estate and the customers,
18 this has not been (indiscernible) of these people. And 19 there is record evidence on that. And so we would continue
20 to urge the releases of those employees.

21 THE COURT: I'll go back to my notes and look for 22 that.

23 MR. KIRPALANI: Thank you.

24 MR. SLADE: Your Honor, I would add that Mr.
25 Renzi's testimony on that point was in the context of the

1 under either the sale transaction or the liquidation
2 transaction, creditors will receive at least as equal if not 3 greater recoveries. We believe that he testified that the 4 impact of a forced liquidation would result in materially 5 lower recovery values for cryptocurrency in a Chapter 7. We 6 believe we've satisfied the best interest tests. And there
7 was a handful of objections on that which we're happy to 8 address.

9 THE COURT: I don't think I need any further
10 argument on that, I understand the evidence. You know --

11 MS. OKIKE: Oh, sorry.

12 THE COURT: -- one thing that troubles me, you're 13 supposed to identify the people who will serve as directors.

14 MS. OKIKE: Oh, correct, Your Honor, I --

15 THE COURT: The original plan said that well, 16 you're just going to have a trustee, you're not going to 17 have directors so you don't have to do it. But you've 18 modified your plan now to say that there will be independent
19 directors who will be pursuing the intercompany issues.
20 Don't you have to say who they are? Doesn't the Code
21 require that?

22 MS. OKIKE: Yes, Your Honor, we agree that we do
23 need to disclose who those parties are. We would like to be 24 able to work with the plan administrator with respect to 25 that.

1 Ideally I think in the debtor's view it would be
2 the independent directors that are currently serving, but I
3 think there was a desire to have a conversation with the 4 plan administrator, as to who would continue to serve in 5 those roles.

6 We do agree that we need an independent director
7 at all three entities, given the complex within the entities
8 with respect to intercompany claims. And we would identify 9 those persons, you know, prior to the plan going effective.
10 I guess we could provide an opportunity for --

11 THE COURT: See that's the problem I think people
12 may not have been paying attention to, but 1129(a)(5)(A)(i) 13 says you have to disclosed it as a condition to 14 confirmation.

15 MS. OKIKE: Understood, Your Honor.

16 THE COURT: I didn't write that, but I'm required
17 to abide by it, so I think you have to come up with the 18 names.

19 MS. OKIKE: Your Honor, if we could confer with 20 the committee during the break on that. We understand that 21 we do need to disclose the identities and we'd just like to 22 have a conversation with them.

23 THE COURT: Okay. Two relatively minor points
24 that I noticed. There may be others in the proposed order, 25 but in the plan and disclosure statement, you say that

1 debtors to honor, keep in place, not change any of their
2 insurance policies. I don't understand how that's 3 consistent with potentially going after this $10 million
4 insurance policy that was bought shortly before the filing
5 of the case. It seems like it would directly order you not 6 to do so and to keep that policy in place. You need to look
7 at that language.

8 MS. OKIKE: Will do.

9 THE COURT: It's probably just form language you
10 took from something else, but it doesn't match what you're 11 trying to do in this case.

12 MS. OKIKE: Understood, thank you, Your Honor.

13 THE COURT: Is there any argument as to the 14 confirmation of the plan of reorganization?

15 MS. MOYNIHAN: Your Honor?

16 THE COURT: Yes, who is that?

17 MS. MOYNIHAN: Kelly Moynihan, Kilpatrick Townsend
18 & Stockton, counsel for the ad hoc group of equity interest
19 holders of Voyager Digital Limited.

20 We did want to be heard briefly related to an 21 issue that you just addressed about the post effective
22 dates, independent directors and the plan administrator. I
23 can do them now or whenever else you would prefer.

24 THE COURT: Well, there's no time like the 25 present.

1 professional fees will be subject to review through the
2 confirmation date, it's kind of a specific distinction
3 between the confirmation date and the effective date in that 4 regard. I think I'm required to approve the reasonableness
5 of all fees through the effective date of the plan. So you
6 need to change that.

7 MS. OKIKE: Understood, Your Honor.

8 THE COURT: There are provisions in the plan
9 administrator agreement and in the plan that effectively say
10 that if you get a letter or a communication or a
11 distribution that's returned to some undeliverable that you
12 don't have to do anything to try to find that customer.
13 Almost every plan I see has that provision, and so far as I
14 know I've never approved it. So --

15 MS. OKIKE: Okay.

16 THE COURT: -- I'm sure you can see whatever
17 language in prior cases you've had with me, that I require 18 you make reasonable efforts to find people. I don't think 19 it's right --

20 MS. OKIKE: Yes, Your Honor.

21 THE COURT: -- just because one letter is returned
22 that they forfeit their distributions.

23 And then look at the various insurance provisions
24 of your proposed order, because the -- a number of them,
25 there are five or six of them that essentially require the

1 MS. MOYNIHAN: Thank you, Your Honor. As Mr.
2 Posner from my firm noted on Friday while we've resolved our 3 filed objections to the plan, subsequent to those 4 resolutions, there have been certain developments that are 5 concerning to our client on -- as I'll explain it, I think
6 the confirmed can be equally resolved.

7 As the Court is aware Voyager Digital Limited,
8 commonly referred to TopCo and (indiscernible) a publicly 9 traded on the Toronto stock exchange, the ad hoc group is 10 comprised of shareholders who are parties to a class action
11 of defrauded equity holders and common stock holders.

12 Our clients have asserted that there are 13 approximately $230 million of intercompany claims due from 14 OpCo and SoldCo to TopCo that are dollars in allowable
15 claims, which should result in a distribution to TopCo
16 equity interest holders.

17 Late last year, we commenced an adversary
18 proceeding for declaration of the intercompany claims are 19 valid and allowable, based upon among other things, the 20 debtor's own statements and schedules, which listed those 21 intercompany claims as allowable and did not mark them as 22 disputed, unliquidated or contingent.

23 On the eve of this confirmation hearing that 24 changed a little bit, which I will explain. As the Court's 25 aware the debtors have asserted in the various iterations of the disclosure statement that the intercompany claims should be subordinated, and then ultimately substantially all of the intercompany claims should be recharacterized.

After engaging in expensive dialogue with debtor's counsel, as well as document discovery, approximately two or so months ago the debtor's counsel advised that they had determined that the debtors couldn't resolve the intercompany claims, but rather than independent directors of each of the debtors would investigate and analyze the intercompany claims and engaged in negotiation to resolve those claims and determine to what extent, if any, they should be recharacterized.

Over the last six weeks the ad hoc group has had several meetings with TopCo's independent director counsel Katten Muchin. The ad hoc group believes that the Katten independent director Mr. Ray has been thoughtfully, carefully and robustly advocating on behalf of creditors and interest holders at TopCo with respect to the intercompany claims issue.

Despite what the debtors and other parties had hoped, the issues surrounding the intercompany claims have not been resolved prior to this hearing. And as a result, all of the parties' rights including the ad hoc groups have been preserved under the plan and the intercompany issues we've resolved post confirmation part of the winddown debtor would be subordinated to customer claims.

Having the committee appoint the plan administrator and have the oversight committee be made up of solely creditor committee members means that there's real no advocate for the interest of creditors and interest holders at TopCo post (indiscernible) date, allowing members of the committee to appoint the new confirmation independent -- post confirmation independent director at TopCo should be problematic.

The committee's goals in this case has been clear and obvious, that's to maximize values to the claims of the customers at OpCo which comes with a cost to TopCo as interest holders. This has been evidenced in a number of ways.

First, the debtor's stipulation with Alameda and the committee we think is very telling. The stipulation allows -- provides that FTX will waive its $75 million claim against the debtors or assign its claims to OpCo at the debtor's option.

The ad hoc group certainly questions (indiscernible) object to assigning the loan claims to OpCo (indiscernible) have tried to assert the guarantee claims for the 75 million against TopCo.

Further, in the event that the particular tactic doesn't work and there is value for TopCo's equity interest activities.

We understand as of this hearing that TopCo and OpCo are still engaged in the dialogue over the intercompany claims and that no resolution has been reached yet.

There's been some very recent developments in the case, we believe that there should be a separate plan administrator appointed for TopCo. For example, the FTX stipulation which I'll discuss in a minute was filed just now before confirmation objections were due. The government security stipulation was filed on February 27th. The debtors filed the amended plan, which included a number of changes, including that the current independent director would be discharged upon the effective date, or we one wind down debtor with one plan administrator appointed by the committee for all of the debtor entities.

The oversight committee will be comprised solely of members from the creditor's committee and the plan administrator will direct new independent directors of each debtor entity.

Last Wednesday HoldCo amended its schedule to reflect the intercompany claims are now disputed, contingent and unliquidated. And last Wednesday evening finance circulated an e-mail to customers that stated among other things, that their recoveries assumed -- intercompany claims would be recharacterized and that the (indiscernible) claims holders, the stipulation further allows FTX to assign any recoveries received from its TopCo equity interest to OpCo at the debtor's option.

Second, as I previously noted, the $230 million in intercompany claims have not been resolved yet. While there are current independent directors appointed at each debtor that are attempting to negotiate a resolution of those claims --

THE COURT: Can I interrupt?

MS. MOYNIHAN: -- upon the effective date --

THE COURT: Can I interrupt you?

MS. MOYNIHAN: Sure.

THE COURT: Can I interrupt you?

MS. MOYNIHAN: Uh-huh, yes.

THE COURT: You're not telling me anything new, with very few exceptions, you're not telling me anything I didn't already know. But I thought your issues had been resolved. I'm --

MS. MOYNIHAN: I'm --

THE COURT: -- very unclear as to what has happened to unresolve them.

MS. MOYNIHAN: I think the changes to the plan in the last week were concerning. Our concern is that there isn't going to be an independent party who zealously advocated for what's best at TopCo.

1 We understand as Mr. Hague (ph) testified that if 2 there is a conflict that arises, whether we will, or 3 position conflict a member of the oversight committee will 4 presume the plan administrator's duties with respect to that 5 conflict. Our position is that the plan administrator is 6 being appointed by the creditor's committee. The oversight
7 committee is being appointed by the creditor's committee.
8 The creditor's committee has made its goals in this case
9 pretty apparent and our concern is that there won't be some 10 independent director appointed by TopCo that really truly
11 represents TopCo's interest. It's being chosen by the plan
12 administrator or essentially the creditor's committee.

13 We would like a truly independent person to be 14 appointed to represent TopCo post effective date, who can 15 hire their own counsel. The ad hoc group is certainly 16 willing to select an independent plan administrator to act
17 for TopCo and would be willing to consult with that plan
18 administrator.

19 Alternatively, Your Honor, given how diligently 20 and deliberately and apparently aggressively Mr. Ray has 21 been in discharging his duties as independent director of 22 TopCo, the ad hoc group would be satisfied with Mr. Ray 23 continuing in that position post-effective date and 24 continuing to retain his counsel Katten on his behalf. And 25 we would like for him to be granted with authority to handle

1 plan administrator. So I would object to this objection
2 just as untimely, but more substantively just to address the 3 concerns that were raised by Mr. Bosner and the ad hoc
4 equity group. We agree that until the intercompany claims
5 are resolved, there will be an independent director in 6 place. That's an independent director who will hold 7 fiduciary duties to that entity. That is exactly the 8 current system that's in place right now at the company and 9 it's a system that we are carrying forward through post
10 confirmation.

11 I think the odd part about this request --

12 THE COURT: Will it be the same director or no?

13 MR. ASMAN: Well, that's a subject for discussion
14 that we want to talk about outside. It's not something
15 we've thought about, to be quite frank. We've been focused 16 on confirmation. The plan administrator agreement gives the 17 plan administrator the authority to put independent
18 directors in. Somebody has to have the authority to remove 19 them, they just can't be in there in perpetuity and that 20 again is the system that's in place right now. The 21 independent directors could be removed today.

22 THE COURT: Why is the authority limited to the 23 intercompany issues, as opposed to more generally issues
24 where there are conflicts between the debtors? For example,
25 that provision in the Alameda loan clearly there's a

212-267-6868

1 the matters that are issue here, including intercompany
2 claims, the Alameda guarantee claim and the government
3 claims asserted against TopCo.

4 THE COURT: What were the matters you wanted --
5 the intercompany claims and what other matters?

6 MS. MOYNIHAN: The Alameda guarantee --

7 THE COURT: Alameda.

8 MS. MOYNIHAN: -- claim. We ask in the event
9 under the FTX Alameda stipulation that OpCo retains those 10 claims to (indiscernible) against TopCo, as well as the 11 government claims that have been filed against TopCo.

12 The ad hoc group did not believe those are valid
13 claims against TopCo and does intend to object to those 14 claims. So we would like to have authority to address those 15 as well on behalf of TopCo because -- they're certainly at 16 issue between our clients and any recovery.

17 MR. ASMAN: Your Honor, Darren Asman from 18 (indiscernible) for the committee.

19 Your Honor asked what has changed since the 20 objection deadline of the plan, and there's nothing that has 21 changed. In fact, the only thing that's changed is that 22 protections have been added in response to some of the 23 concerns raised by equity.

24 This is the first time this -- even outside of 25 this court that we're hearing of a request for a separate

212-267-6868

Veritext Legal Solutions
www.veritext.com

516-608-2400

1 conflict between the different debtors.

2 MR. ASMAN: Your Honor, again, this is the first
3 we're hearing this from the ad hoc group. I don't have a
4 good answer on the spot right now, it was just raised a few
5 minutes ago and it's something we can certainly consider.

6 THE COURT: Yeah, but surely it had to be obvious
7 to you that that's a matter -- that's a provision about 8 which the different entities would have to produce.

9 MR. ASMAN: Maybe. I think it depends on --

10 THE COURT: Maybe? I think there have been prior 11 objections to your suggestion that it would work that way if 12 I remember right. You were suggesting something similar to 13 that at the time of the FTX deal and you got an explicit 14 objection.

15 MR. ASMAN: Correct. But I think if the 16 intercompany claim is resolved in a way such that there's 17 nothing (indiscernible) up to TopCo it's resolved. I guess
18 what you're suggesting Your Honor is if at least until that 19 is resolved, or if it is resolved in a way where 20 (indiscernible). I hear your point, I'm not saying it's not 21 an issue. I'm just saying we haven't considered it.

22 But one thing I want to make really clear, the odd 23 part about this request is it's not really equity that 24 should even have a say in this. It's creditors at TopCo.
25 Equity here has a nearly insurmountable obstacle to getting

212-267-6868

Veritext Legal Solutions
www.veritext.com

516-608-2400

1 a recovery in this case and it's for good reason, because 2 they're equity.

3 The first, Your Honor, they have to somehow
4 convince this Court and more than $200 million of capital
5 contributions from one affiliate to another are somehow not 6 equity, that's step one. Second --

7 THE COURT: They were a focused debt, weren't 8 they?

9 MR. ASMAN: Correct, Your Honor.

10 THE COURT: Okay.

11 MR. ASMAN: I will not stray too far afield from 12 why that's not the debt, but understood. Second, they have 13 to knock out the $75 million Alameda claim that comes ahead
14 of equity. Third, they have to knock out more than $40
15 million of claims by governmental entities against TopCo.
16 And then fourth, and probably most importantly, even after 17 all of that, there's around $10 million of general unsecured
18 claims at TopCo, non-government claims, not Alameda claims,
19 just unsecured claims. And there's 2 and a half million
20 dollars at HoldCo.

21 I don't see why it would be -- there's been no
22 demonstration yet that there's going to be sufficient flow
23 of cash that's going to satisfy any of those claims at all,
24 let alone in full.

25 THE COURT: Well, whether we're doing this for

1 THE COURT: That's correct.

2 MR. UPTGROVE: Thank you, Your Honor.

3 MR. HENDERSHOTT: Your Honor, this is Tracy
4 Hendershott, pro se, creditor.

5 THE COURT: Yes, Mr. Hendershott.

6 MR. HENDERSHOTT: You're saying any other
7 objections? Does that include our request for a trustee for 8 creditor request to invoke our rights under Code 1112(a) and 9 (b) as well as Bankruptcy Code 1104(a)(1) for the findings
10 of or at least the evaluation of -- for the findings of 11 fraud, dishonesty, incompetence, gross management?

12 THE COURT: We can move to that unless there are 13 other points that people want to make on the confirmation
14 issue itself.

15 MS. OKIKE: Your Honor --

16 MR. HENDERSHOTT: Very good.

17 MS. OKIKE: -- the last point we just wanted to 18 note there were some objections to the plan administrator.
19 We believe he's (indiscernible) serving the role, he's an 20 experienced bankruptcy professional who's intimately
21 familiar with the debtors and their estates.

22 He testified that he doesn't believe that his 23 prior representation of the committees here would impede his 24 ability to serve as plan administrator and that he would 25 recuse himself in the benefit of any conflicts. And the

1 equity or creditors there obviously has to be an independent
2 party at TopCo to handle issues as to which TopCo's
3 interests differ from the interests of other debtors.

4 MR. ASMAN: I agree with that, Your Honor. That's 5 the role of the independent director.

6 THE COURT: So let's make sure it isn't so
7 explicitly cabined to the intercompany issues and it's more
8 broad as to issues where there's a conflict.

9 MR. ASMAN: Understood.

10 THE COURT: And then let's disclose who it is and 11 hopefully that'll make everybody happy and we won't have a 12 further issue.

13 MR. ASMAN: Thank you, Your Honor.

14 THE COURT: Okay. Any other objections or 15 arguments as to confirmation of the plan?

16 MR. UPTGROVE: Your Honor, William Uptegrove for 17 the SEC. Just not an argument, but a further clarification
18 from this morning is the Section 1145 I believe is being 19 dropped from the plan if I heard it correctly on the phone.
20 So I just wanted to make sure we no longer needed to put in 21 our submission tomorrow.

22 THE COURT: I understand the debtor is not seeking 23 anything -- any specific findings one way or the other about 24 it, 1145; is that right?

25 MS. OKIKE: Correct.

1 plan administrator agreement provides for the same. So we
2 believe he should be appointed.

3 THE COURT: Okay.

4 MR. HENDERSHOTT: Your Honor, Tracy Hendershott
5 again. I offered to submit that change from yesterday, you
6 know, it's well intended and certainly does have credentials
7 in the space. Mr. Hague has not a single day of experience
8 as administrator. In addition Mr. Hague was providing 9 counsel to the UCC chairman, you know, approving these, you
10 know, very extensive, broad reaching, overreaching
11 discharges, you know, that you called out yourself, this 12 gives us great concern that we are going to have the maximum 13 potential of -- for recovery due to the winddown activity
14 afterwards.

15 You know, the creditors, Your Honor, are looking 16 for a mystery (indiscernible), you know, a shark that can 17 try to increase the 24 percent return that we're talking
18 about now closer, you know, as high as possible.

19 We need an individual that is experienced,
20 aggressive, and is, you know, knowing the (indiscernible) of 21 Mr. Ray that's assigned to the FTX case. We have seen none
22 of that behavior yet exhibited by Mr. Hague in his guidance
23 or (indiscernible) UCC and, you know, we stand with our 24 objections from yesterday. Thank you.

25 THE COURT: Anybody else want to be heard about

Mr. Hague's appointment?

MR. NEWSOM: Your Honor?

THE COURT: Go ahead.

MR. NEWSOM: Your Honor, this is Dan Newsom for (indiscernible) as well. I will second Mr. Hendershott's arguments and state that my position hasn't changed as well and no offense to Mr. Hague, it seems like he has a lot of experience in estates and (indiscernible) is even desirable. However, I would note that the debtors spared no expense as it relates to hiring their counsel and now we're being asked to do I guess pinch our pennies when it comes to appointing the plan administrator.

And, Your Honor, frankly, you know, while the conflict of interests aren't as strong as, you know, we might have led to believe or might have believed ourselves, it is the matter of effectiveness. And in terms of the ability of the Court to appoint an independent plan administrator, creditors would receive maximum confidence that their best interests are heart, versus what we've seen so far in terms of effectiveness from the UCC and by extension Mr. Hague.

THE COURT: Anybody else?

UNIDENTIFIED: Your Honor (indiscernible). Sorry. Ladies first.

MS. DIRESTA: Go ahead, Seth.

212-267-6868

Veritext Legal Solutions
www.veritext.com

agree with the UCC judgment, because what we found most of the time in this entire case is I think the UCC has only objected to like maybe two things, but otherwise, they have pretty much just gone along to get along with the debtors.

And so we feel that we need an independent party, so it's just not the credentials of Mr. Hague and not having the experience and us wanting a more experience who's really going to fight for us, but someone who has to know fresh eyes, no conflict of interest, who can really come in and fight for us. Like I said, the UCC we feel has not done a good job in representing us and in fighting for us.

I mean, even if you just look at the list of objections, the (indiscernible) objections with, you know, the court documents has only been, you know -- that's it, you know, like go along to get along.

So having someone independent, having someone with proper credentials to really fight for us is what we need, Your Honor. And you're really our last hope when it comes to this, so I hope that you will help us in some way. Thank you.

MR. ASMAN: Your Honor, again Darren Asman from McDermott Wilhelm for the committee. Your Honor, Mr. Hague is going to be tasked with an important role that we expect is going to last through the years. Specifically he's going to be responsible for pursuing a number of bad actors,

212-267-6868

Veritext Legal Solutions
www.veritext.com

516-608-2400

UNIDENTIFIED: Your Honor, the plan administrator is ultimately the most important role for creditors in this bankruptcy. As you know, they can decide if they want to go after someone or not. Why are we now penny pinching (indiscernible) law firm from Detroit, Michigan only because his clients was elected as a chairperson on the UCC when a dozen other professional agencies that have been hired in this case are all (indiscernible) recognized (indiscernible) firms.

Creditors don't want (indiscernible) as Mr. Hague said was his goal. We want to be made whole. We've suffered enough. This is not the time for on the job training. Creditors (indiscernible) the best recovery possible. We deserve a (indiscernible) or a (indiscernible) ticker type plan administrator that has zero connections of Voyager, zero (indiscernible) interest and is only looking to bring the hammer down. Thank you, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Okay. Mr. Asman?

MR. ASMAN: Your Honor --

MS. DIRESTA: Hi, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Oh, who was that?

MS. DIRESTA: Oh, this is Gina DiResta, Your Honor. And I agree with my fellow creditors. We are against having Mr. Hague be the plan administrator. The UCC voted to have him be the plan administrator and we don't

212-267-6868

Veritext Legal Solutions
www.veritext.com

516-608-2400

investigating potential claims, and ultimately I hope recovering a lot more for creditors to bring them closer to whole.

Mr. Hague, will also, of course, be responsible for a number of administrative functions that are typical of post confirmation trust tax returns affecting future distributions and objecting to claims among others.

Your Honor, the committee was given discretion to select a plan administrator in consultation with the debtors. This is common in Chapter 11 cases, as you know, particularly in a case like this, where the only real constituents are unsecured creditors.

The committee took this process seriously at the recommendation of professionals. They interviewed three different candidates for the role, including Mr. Hague. The committee voted for Mr. Hague to serve in this role, and again, this is a committee of seven creditors of whom -- all whom lost their personal assets on Voyager's platform and there are seven creditors who the U.S. Trustee felt could best adequately represent the entire creditor body at their significant (indiscernible) a process that we were not a part of, of course.

The plan and disclosure statement made clear to creditors that the committee would be sluffing if its plan administrator. And on February 15th, the debtors filed a

212-267-6868

Veritext Legal Solutions
www.veritext.com

516-608-2400

second plan supplement, it's Docket No. 1006 which identifies Mr. Hague as the plan administrator.

Importantly as Your Honor's order required, this identification was made one week prior to the voting deadline which was on February 22nd. The purpose of this disclosure, of course, was to ensure that creditors are aware of not only the process for selecting a plan administrator, but ultimately who that plan administrator would be when casting a vote on the plan.

More than 60,000 creditors voted on the plan with an aggregate dollar value of more than $550 million. Your Honor, one of the creditors asked the witness on Friday, Thursday, I'm losing track of the days now, whether it was unusual that only 60,000 creditors voted. I wasn't on the stand at the time, but I thought about that question quite a bit on the weekend, and my answer is that actually the number is really high. 60,000 people took time to fill out a ballot and then while it may not be a high percentage in number, it's still a big number and it suggests a lot of creditors are watching this case closely and fully understand what's going on.

Your Honor already knows this, but just as a reminder, the creditors who voted, 97 percent in number accepted, 98 percent in dollar amount, for $541,000 in dollars, voted to accept the plan. And again, that is all requirement under 1129. That's not.

THE COURT: Not in so many words anyway.

MR. ASMAN: Your Honor, unless you have any questions, I'll stop there, thank you.

THE COURT: Okay. Does the U.S. Trustee have a position about Mr. Hague's appointment?

MR. MORRISSEY: Your Honor, Richard Morrissey for the U.S. Trustee. The U.S. Trustee raised no objection about it, as the U.S. Trustee has no position on the committee's choice of Mr. Hague. Unless the Court has any questions for me.

THE COURT: No, that's fine. I just wanted to know.

MR. MORRISSEY: Thank you, Your Honor.

THE COURT: All right. I'll take those points under advisement. What else do we need to -- we need to cover the trustee motion. Is there anything else on confirmation that we need to cover?

MS. OKIKE: I don't believe so, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Okay. I have a host of rulings to make on the objections. And a host of open points that still need to be addressed. And a 78-page confirmation order that I have many changes to make to. None of that is going to happen tonight. It's already 5:10. I can't see myself finishing all that.

with the understanding that the committee would be selecting a plan administrator and later that it would be Mr. Hague.

You have objections in front of you from a few creditors to the selection of Mr. Hague as the plan administrator. The aggregate claims of those creditors is around $500,000. Your Honor, we submit that the objections are without merit and simply represent the preference by a few creditors that someone other than Mr. Hague serve as the plan administrator.

And out of 60,000 creditors who voted on the plan, it's not all that surprising that we have objections to many different aspects of the plan, including this one.

Your Honor, in its simplest terms, the objection rests on a notion that Mr. Resnick, the chair of the committee is too friendly with Mr. Ehrlich or was too friendly and has acted as a committee member in a manner that is somehow contrary to creditor interests --

THE COURT: That's what the written objections were, but what I've heard today is that they don't think Mr. Hague is as -- I'll put it this way, as much out for blood as they would like.

MR. ASMAN: I don't think there's anything in evidence that says he's not up for blood or that he doesn't have the experience to do that. No questions were asked about that. And I don't know that that's a confirmation

MR. GOLDBERG: Thank you, Your Honor, (indiscernible) this. We're very grateful for all the time you've given us, Your Honor, completely understand the situation. We have been working throughout the day in an effort to resolve Your Honor's requests and customer data point and just as we months ago sent a proposal to the debtors and perhaps we could have a recess to go over that and all have the opportunity to speak to and the committee and then come back to you.

THE COURT: Yeah, is my health and schedule contingent on that? You're not going to give me a break from your milestone until you work that out?

MR. GOLDBERG: My client, Your Honor, you know, is putting a tremendous amount of resources to this case. We've been the subject of a wide array of accusations without any evidence brought to bear and we are very focused on bringing these proceedings to a successful conclusion as quickly as possible.

We would very much like to resolve the customer data issue as part of the extension of (indiscernible) with Your Honor's permission.

THE COURT: Certainly I'll let you talk to them. Mr. Hendershott, on your trustee motion, if I confirm a plan, a trustee is sort of pointless, isn't it?

MR. HENDERSHOTT: Yes, sir, that's why we're hoping to have your consideration to (indiscernible) before you confirm the plan. We understand that under Bankruptcy Code 1112 there is a lot of leeway that Congress has given for you (indiscernible). But, you know, admittedly it's limited our understanding, we're not experts, but we believe that (indiscernible) Congress' intent for 1104(a)(1), there really is no leeway. It doesn't say and, or, should, could, it says the trustee shall be appointed if any of the for cause criteria is found. And those are fraud, dishonesty, incompetence, or gross mismanagement.

THE COURT: Well, if you -- actually you've got that slightly wrong. What the case law says is that --

MR. HENDERSHOTT: Okay.

THE COURT: -- I should appoint a trustee for cause which may include various things. The case law does not say that I must appoint a trustee no matter what the other circumstances are in any instance where I think there was any kind of fraud. The case law is actually to the opposite. It actually says that I have considerable discretion in deciding what constitutes cause, and whether allegations of particular kinds in the context of an individual case constitute cause.

And one of the factors it seems to me here as to whether it's cause for a trustee is, by the time we got a trustee in place, we'll already have a plan administrator in a motion, and -- but I do want the Court to understand we were told by the chairman of the UCC to write you letters. And that was false advice until you clarified that for us, that we had to try to put it in a motion, then that's the next step that we did.

Then other creditors have done that as well. They were pushed off until this late stage for discussion. So while the timeliness is not perfect, I think Congress specifically said that any point before confirmation intentionally. I don't think that was an accident.

THE COURT: I -- certainly --

MR. HENDERSHOTT: (indiscernible)

THE COURT: The Code would permit me to do it, but I still have to decide whether there's cause to do it. And I just --

MR. HENDERSHOTT: Right.

THE COURT: It just seems inconsistent to me with where we are on the confirmation hearing. Maybe not inconsistent if we don't confirm a plan, but if I do confirm a plan it just doesn't seem to me to make much sense, right.

MR. HENDERSHOTT: Well, if there truly is fraud, Your Honor, then there is significant benefit to the creditors. And again, this is why this would've been beneficial to have it actually addressed a long time ago.

You know, we're all guaranteed to take a

212-267-6868

Veritext Legal Solutions
www.veritext.com

place. We're on the verge of confirmation. It doesn't really -- if I confirm the plan, it doesn't make any sense. Now if I don't confirm the plan, then I have to consider it. But it seems to me I have trouble thinking of anything that would constitute cause at this stage of game to appoint a trustee when we're right on the verge of plan confirmation.

MR. HENDERSHOTT: Well, I appreciate your interpretation of that, you know, and I read the Court shall order the appointment of a trustee, I didn't really see the flexibility. But I do know Congress has given you, the bankruptcy court (indiscernible) the judge, the jury and, you know, the executioner. So I don't profess to be an expert.

What I do know, sir, is that this was brought up -- you know, this would've made more sense. This would've made more sense back in August to have this discussion. This would've made more sense back in October of last year when Nexus (indiscernible) you know, brought this up.

Unfortunately during that time period is I (indiscernible) for me personally, I was in a Category 5 hurricane. I lost September, October, November to the end of December for any type of communication, but as soon as I was able to reconnect on January 9th, 10th I think was my initial letter that I brought this up at that point.

And that was a letter, and I understand it wasn't significant financial hit. And we are limited to a $3,000 you know year write off for the tens or hundreds of thousands, whatever the case may be. You know, if someone has $100,000 loss, this is going to take, you know, end of their natural lifetime. And if there's a case of fraud, if you find that there clearly is a foundation of fraud, that changes for the creditors --

212-267-6868

THE COURT: What do you think --

MR. HENDERSHOTT: -- (indiscernible) financial damages that --

THE COURT: What is it you think would happen if right now I said, I want a trustee. What is it do you think would be the consequence? What would result?

MR. HENDERSHOTT: I believe we would be classified at the federal level as victims of fraud, given a significant abilities to take this damages earlier and not parse (indiscernible) amount for the next 30, 40 years (indiscernible) of 3,000.

THE COURT: Well, you know what --

MR. HENDERSHOTT: (indiscernible)

THE COURT: -- let me just disabuse you of that notion. You know, treating you victims of a fraud just makes you a creditor. It doesn't give you any different status or any different kind of claim than the ones you have just by virtue of being an account holder.

212-267-6868

Veritext Legal Solutions
www.veritext.com

516-608-2400

Page 250

MR. HENDERSHOTT: No, not for claims, for IRS purposes, it's (indiscernible). I apologize for not clarifying that.

THE COURT: Okay.

MR. HENDERSHOTT: Right now, we can't even write off the damages that have been caused by the actions of their debtors in possession.

THE COURT: But the appointment of a trustee -- I don't think the appointment of a trustee automatically gives you any right to claim that you're a fraud victim.

MR. HENDERSHOTT: No, you wouldn't appoint a trustee, Your Honor, unless you found fraud. If you found cause, one of them being fraud, then you would appoint the trustee and we would also get the benefit to actually be able to have some tax, significant tax consequences for the financial harm that's been occurred to us.

We understand. You said numerous times, Your Honor, the path of the (indiscernible), we know we're not going to go back, you know, over the last nine months and change any rulings, but again, 1104(a)(1) states, any time before confirmation. They specifically open it up from this very point in time to have justice served and an evaluation performed, and the defraud, dishonesty, incompetence, or gross mismanagement has occurred. We've never been given that opportunity throughout this last nine months to have it tax losses. Because frauds come in many different forms and they have many different victims and I would expect that it -- you wouldn't get a tax benefit unless if I were to find that there was something about your whole course of dealing, your individual courses of dealing with Voyager was a fraud that you were induced to buy cryptocurrencies that you didn't want to buy that, I don't know, all kinds of things that I don't even have allegations to that effect.

MR. HENDERSHOTT: Sir, Tracy Hendershott again. Specifically it's IRS Revenue ruling 2009-9 that allows us to be able to take a credit for fraud, financial fraud, but it has to be declared, it just can't be self-proclaimed. And I think it exists in this case and that's what we're asking for you to rule on.

THE COURT: Okay. But then here's my problem. I have no evidence. I have a lot of allegations and letters of fraud, but I have no evidence.

MR. HENDERSHOTT: It's about 20 pages that we submitted on Document 1061, Your Honor.

THE COURT: There's no --

MR. HENDERSHOTT: There's been a mountain of paperwork.

THE COURT: But --

MR. HENDERSHOTT: Sorry?

THE COURT: But unless it -- unless I have really made on that.

At least the creditors that submitted this, that's what we're asking for. We want you to evaluate the motion that we submitted with all of the different events and evidence that we submitted. Our impression, Your Honor, is that cause occurred, fraud occurred, dishonesty occurred, incompetence and gross mismanagement occurred, but no one cares what we think. We've elected you to give us your ruling if you agree with that or not.

THE COURT: Okay. Who else wants to be heard?

MS. PROVINO: Your Honor?

THE COURT: Yes.

MS. PROVINO: This is Lisa Provino, pro se creditor. Is there another option for that tax credit that Tracy Hendershott has discussed? Because if not, then I would be supportive of that particular motion that he's talking about at the moment, unless you could talk about something else that we would be able to do a write off.

THE COURT: I don't have --

MS. PROVINO: I probably would (indiscernible).

THE COURT: I don't know about this tax write off or what it is that you would need to show to tell you the truth but it seems to me I would be very dubious about the idea that anything that could be labeled as fraud would automatically give you rise to claim all of your losses as testimony from people as to what they actually did, right, you know, just kind of hearsay reports or complaints about specific things without a hearing from the witnesses to tell me whether it actually happened, and why it actually happened, and what the intent was behind it, I don't have a record on which I could find fraud.

You understand in order to find fraud I have to actually find that somebody had an intent to commit fraud, right.

MR. HENDERSHOTT: Well, I don't know if I agree with that, you know, civil laws the burden of proof is much less than the criminal law. We don't have to find beyond a reasonable doubt. And civil law is more likely than not; isn't that correct?

THE COURT: Well, that part is true as to what the burden of proof is but -- or the level of proof but the element of fraud, one of the elements of fraud is intent. Something -- and actually in many states, fraud requires proof by clear and convincing evidence, not by a preponderance of the evidence, which is a standard in between the criminal standard and the ordinary civil standard. I'm still waiting for somebody to be precise enough to tell me where exactly in between, but I guess we know it when we see it.

But fraud is definitely -- you know, intent is an

212-267-6868

1 element of a fraud claim. So I don't -- nobody's taken
2 testimony of Mr. Ehrlich on these points. Nobody's asked
3 him. I really don't have an evidentiary record from which I
4 could find fraud.

5 You know, I'm concerned by the things you've 6 raised, I don't want to make you think that I'm sweeping
7 them under the rug and I really haven't had -- nobody's
8 really even addressed half of them in response. So I don't 9 want you to think that I'm by any means giving anybody a 10 pass on anything that's happened in this case or with 11 Voyager in general. I am not.

12 I am concerned by the things that you've 13 mentioned, but sitting here right today, I can only make 14 rulings based on evidence. And to the extent you would like 15 me today to rule that people at Voyager committed fraud, I
16 would require evidence of their actual intent and I don't 17 have it. I just don't have it.

18 MS. PROVINO: Your Honor, Lisa Provino, pro se,
19 I'm sorry, Tracy, were you going to talk?

20 MR. HENDERSHOTT: Yes, just one second, Lisa.

21 MS. PROVINO: You're welcome.

22 MR. HENDERSHOTT: So, Your Honor, you make a good
23 point and this goes back to our earlier conversation. You
24 know, you said despite -- or no one has submitted evidence.
25 This is our concern with the representation that we received

1 the IRS, yes. Is my recollection, but I'm not an expert on 2 IRS Code, but I do think it's specifically for fraud.

3 But talking about fraud, Your Honor, if I may.
4 Again, we're not experts, so again, what is fraud,
5 especially in a civil case versus a criminal case. I go to 6 Black Law Dictionary, I don't need to insult you, sir, but 7 I'd like to read it. It says nothing about intent. Not in 8 a court of equity Lex Law states probably includes all acts, 9 omissions, concealment which involve a breach of legal or 10 equitable duty, (indiscernible) or competence and are 11 injurious to another or by which an undue and unconscious
12 advantage is taken of another. There's not one word about 13 intent in there. It's about fraudulently committing acts
14 that causes damage to another.

15 THE COURT: Well, fraud means fraudulently doing
16 something that's kind of a tautology there. I will tell you 17 that fraud in almost every context I know requires proof of 18 intent. If any of the lawyers in the room think I'm wrong
19 about that, speak up please. But nobody is doing so. It's 20 kind of -- it's a basic. What can I say.

21 MR. HENDERSHOTT: Okay. So Black's Law is not 22 correct.

23 THE COURT: I'm sorry?

24 MR. HENDERSHOTT: So the definition in Black Law
25 for a court of equity is not correct.

1 from the UCC. And the recent (indiscernible) selecting Mr.
2 Hague going forward. We have been frustrated with the lack 3 of what we consider obvious. We don't know the legal 4 procedures. I -- we thought that the documents that we 5 submitted, we worked so hard on finding all of the financial 6 reports, I mean literally a week's worth of effort that 7 weren't even into the court record was evidence submission.

8 Now, you're saying it's not. You know, our UCC
9 should have been doing this. But they didn't. And now they 10 pick the business partner of the brother of the chairman of 11 the UCC who, Your Honor, we feel the next step after Mr.
12 Hague is selected, he's going to then pick Jason Resnick's
13 brother to be his personal legal representation. I mean, 14 the conflict of interest just never ends and the lack of 15 representation that we've had as creditors has been almost 16 as frustrating as the loss of the financial (indiscernible).

17 Your Honor, my understanding is fraud, it's not 18 the only one for cause, it's dishonesty, simpler than fraud.
19 It's incompetence, it's gross mismanagement, any of these 20 quality as for cause.

21 THE COURT: But none of those --

22 MR. HENDERSHOTT: And during --

23 THE COURT: But none of those get what you wanted
24 under your revenue ruling, right?

25 MR. HENDERSHOTT: I think it's just fraud under

Page 257

1 THE COURT: I don't know what the context was, I'm
2 just telling you fraud, in my understanding, requires proof
3 of intent. That's been something I've understood my entire 4 legal career. Every time I've litigated a fraud claim, any 5 time I've ruled on a fraud claim, intent has been element of 6 the offense.

7 I am not aware of -- I'm aware of some things like
8 fraudulent transfers, where people use the word, and it
9 really isn't fraud, it's kind of a misnomer, but when you're 10 talking about actual fraud of the kind that's addressed in 11 Section 1104 that requires intent.

12 Let me hear from --

13 MR. HENDERSHOTT: Okay. So are you making your 14 ruling now, no fraud, no dishonesty, no incompetence, no
15 risk management, or is this the discussion and your ruling
16 comes later?

17 THE COURT: Well I'm going to hear from the debtor
18 first.

19 MR. HENDERSHOTT: Okay. Thank you, sir.

20 THE CLERK: Your Honor, we're coming on the four 21 hour mark.

22 THE COURT: Okay. Why doesn't everybody relog in 23 on the telephone and then we'll finish, okay.

24 (Recessed at 5:28 p.m.; reconvened at 5:44 p.m.)

25 THE CLERK: Your Honor, would you like me to --

1 THE COURT: Yeah. Why don't you go get them.

2 MR. GOLDBERG: Good afternoon, Your Honor. Adam
3 Goldberg for the record on behalf of Binance.US. We're 4 having some just ongoing dialog about the issues in an
5 effort to resolve things for Your Honor. I think if you
6 could give us another 15 minutes, we should be able to 7 report back.

8 THE COURT: Well, I've lost patience with my 9 request that you agree to change the milestone, and I don't
10 appreciate you holding that up while you try to resolve 11 other issues. It is 100 percent clear, including based on 12 the exculpation that you and others would want, that we're 13 not going to get there today because I have to give the 14 Government a chance to file its response either this 15 afternoon or tomorrow.

16 It's 100 percent clear, since it is already quarter
17 to 6:00 that I cannot organize my thoughts, issue a ruling
18 on the disputed points, and go through the 78-page
19 confirmation order to get something done by midnight. So
20 tell me that you either extend it, or we'll stop. And I'm 21 tired of being toyed with on that point. Okay? I want an 22 answer.

23 MR. GOLDBERG: Very well, Your Honor. May I have 24 five minutes to call my client?

25 THE COURT: Yes.

1 proposed resolution in the morning, if not tonight.

2 THE COURT: Okay. All right. Let's get back to 3 the trustee motion then. There was a creditor on the phone
4 who wished to be heard?

5 MS. PROVINO: Yes, sir. Myself, Lisa Provino, and 6 my husband is here as well, Scott Provino.

7 So what -- we have a few questions for you, Your 8 Honor, please. So we did, just while we were waiting, we 9 looked up the IRS Ruling 2009-9 and 2009-14, both of which 10 do say that we need -- we definitely need it to be declared
11 either a Ponzi, or a criminally fraudulent investment of 12 some sort in order for us to be able to write off these 13 significant losses that --

14 THE COURT: Yeah. I was curious about --

15 MS. PROVINO: -- most of the --

16 THE COURT: I was curious about moving 2009-9, and 17 I looked it up, and it deals with Ponzi schemes.

18 A Ponzi scheme is quite different from what 19 anything that's been alleged here. You know, in a Ponzi
20 scheme, people are lied to about what their money is being 21 used for. I don't think anybody here has alleged that they 22 weren't actually submitting money for the purposes of 23 investing in cryptocurrencies, or that Voyager wasn't
24 actually buying cryptocurrencies, or that their account
25 statements were fictitious, or any of the kinds of things

1 MR. GOLDBERG: Thank you.

2 MS. PROVINO: Your Honor?

3 THE COURT: Yeah.

4 MS. PROVINO: This is Lisa Provino. May I speak,
5 or I'm not allowed to speak yet?

6 THE COURT: I think we should wait for the, in 7 fairness the Binance lawyer who's gone out to call his 8 client. Let's wait for him to come back, okay? He has a --

9 MS. PROVINO: I appreciate that, sir.

10 THE COURT: He has a right to hear what you --

11 MS. PROVINO: No. That's fine. I just don't want
12 you to forget me. Thank you.

13 THE COURT: How could I do that?

14 MS. PROVINO: I would hope that you won't.

15 (Pause)

16 THE COURT: Yes?

17 MR. GOLDBERG: For the record, Adam Goldberg from 18 Lantham and Watkins on behalf of Binance,US.

19 Thank you for bearing with us, Your Honor. This 20 has been a long process, and we appreciate everyone's 21 efforts towards it. Binance.US consents to an extension of 22 the milestone for entry of the confirmation order due 23 tomorrow at 5:00 p.m., and we expect to be working with the 24 Debtors and the committee to respond to Your Honor on the 25 customer data point in the meantime, and hope to have a

Page 261

1 that would be characteristic of a Ponzi scheme.

2 And the reason for that particular ruling was that 3 you have to show that your loss is essentially a theft, that 4 the Ponzi scheme perpetrator has stolen, not just that you
5 didn't get all of your recoveries and that things went bad.
6 I didn't get a chance to look at the other ruling, but I
7 can't imagine anything that's been alleged, let alone any 8 evidence that I've offered, that would support a Ponzi
9 scheme finding in this case. Mind you --

10 MS. PROVINO: Well, that's my next --

11 THE COURT: -- there are some people who allege 12 that cryptocurrencies, themselves, are Ponzi schemes because 13 they don't believe that cryptocurrencies are real, but 14 nobody here has asked me to rule that.

15 MS. PROVINO: Correct, Your Honor. So well, I 16 guess where we -- at least where we particularly stand, as 17 we have received phone calls all weekend here. There have 18 been calls from people that said that even their money got 19 stolen through the Voyager platform, some Nigerian -- and 20 I'm not exactly sure how, but I was trying to understand the 21 details.

22 But my question to you, Your Honor, is going back
23 to those five points of criminal intent where it says -- I'm 24 just going to say they're points, 2, 3, and 4, which we 25 looked up on the internet, the defendant possesses

212-267-6868

Veritext Legal Solutions

knowledge, the statement is untrue, false statement intended to deceive the intended victims, intended victim justifiably relies in the statement, and that is what I have received phone calls for this past weekend.

So my question to you, Your Honor, is because I don't know if a pro seer can actually subpoena somebody. If there is a way, please tell me. I will -- we will do that. I guess it's a little late, but we just need to know if we can.

And secondly, if we have an opportunity to prove off the fraud and possibly put some witnesses on the stand. Again, I know we're pro se, but please take this into consideration because we have had significant losses, and I honestly am begging you right now to please be openminded to this.

THE COURT: Yeah. Did any of you who want to do, did you file proofs of claim alleging that you were victims of fraud?

MS. PROVINO: I'm sorry, sir. Could you explain specifically what you're asking now?

THE COURT: Yeah.

MS. PROVINO: You mean, the claim that they didn't allow me to -- for voting purposes claims, and then I had to fight for that? Which claim are you speaking of, sir?

THE COURT: Well, you know, the Debtor filed

212-267-6868

Veritext Legal Solutions
www.veritext.com

516-608-2400

are procedures in the Code for subpoenaing people. Usually, if you want to subpoena somebody in connection with a motion that's actually pending, you have to issue the subpoena in accordance with requirements in the rules and have it served on the recipient, and if there isn't a particular proceeding pending for which the testimony is sought, you'd need permission to issue a subpoena under Rule 2004. That's about as much as I, as the judge, should be giving you advice about, okay?

MS. PROVINO: That's fair. I appreciate that. I'll go back to the (indiscernible - 5:58:25) rules, bankruptcy sections. I've looked over, just it's a lot to digest. So I'll go back to that section. You said Rule 2004, right, 2-0-0-4?

THE COURT: That's the Rule if you don't have something -- a motion pending to which the testimony really relates. If you have a contested matter or an adversary proceeding where it's relevant, then the Bankruptcy Rule is -- hang on one second. Rule 9016, which simply incorporates Rule 45 of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure.

MS. PROVINO: And I will review that. Thank you, sir.

THE COURT: Okay.

MS. PROVINO: The only other question I have -- and

212-267-6868

Veritext Legal Solutions
www.veritext.com

516-608-2400

schedules of people that thought that had -- you know, accountholders, who would have thought their claims were. Anybody who thought they had other claims should have filed a proof of claim form. So if you thought you were a fraud victim, not just that you were an accountholder who just happened to be owed money, but a fraud victim, you should have filed a proof of claim saying that you believed you were a fraud victim.

So to the extent that you did that, then you can get a litigation. You can get a ruling and a litigation of your claim as to whether you were a fraud victim. But if you didn't, then being on the eve of confirmation, I don't know how you're going to get that, at least in this particular context, at least from me. You would have to sue the perpetrators of the fraud, who you think defrauded you, and get a ruling in that context.

MS. PROVINO: Well, lesson's learned. These are life lessons. Is there a way, though, Your Honor, for pro seers to subpoena someone? Could you answer that for me, please?

THE COURT: Well --

MS. PROVINO: Or do we need a (indiscernible - 5:57:37) for that.

THE COURT: Yeah. I'm not supposed to give you legal advice. I'm just supposed to rule on things. There

212-267-6868

Veritext Legal Solutions
www.veritext.com

I'm sorry for the multiple questions here -- but in terms of the for cause, if you will, if the Debtors are removed and all the releases are voided, does that mean that we can't still go on the Ponzi scheme issue?

THE COURT: If the --

MS. PROVINO: Or is that, like you said, you have to sue them for fraud?

THE COURT: I missed a part of your question. If what happens?

MS. PROVINO: Oh, I'm sorry. If the Debtors are removed and their releases are voided, would that be a for cause for the Ponzi scheme or it basically goes back to what you had said before?

THE COURT: I'm not sure I understand the question. If the Debtors are what and the releases are voided?

MS. PROVINO: If the Debtors are removed from the releases. You know how we've been talking all afternoon about the releases? So if they're just voided out, does that mean we can't go after them for cause for the fraud, for the Ponzi scheme? I mean, we're concerned about tax consequences.

THE COURT: Well, when you say them, if you want to go after individuals and you believe you have a fraud claim, there's nothing in what we're doing here that would stop you from doing that. If you want to make a fraud claim against

212-267-6868

1 the Debtors, it should have been in a proof of claim, and if 2 it was not --

3 MS. PROVINO: And when would that have been done,
4 by 10/3, or is that a different date, sir?

5 THE COURT: I think that was -- I'm getting a lot
6 of headshakes, yes, back last October. So if it's not in a
7 proof claim --

8 MS. PROVINO: But --

9 THE COURT: If it was not in a proof of claim, you
10 would need to amend a claim that you filed or get permission
11 to file a late claim, and there are rules that govern that,
12 too. I don't know what else to say.

13 MR. AZMAN: Your Honor?

14 THE COURT: Mr. Azman.

15 MR. AZMAN: Darren Azman for the Committee. If I
16 could just speak to Ms. Provino?

17 Ms. Provino, if there are things that we can do to 18 mitigate tax consequences or tax liabilities for what is 19 really going to be the bulk of the creditor body, that's 20 certainly something that either the committee or when the 21 plan goes effective, the plan administrator is happy to 22 consider. I think what I would suggest is that it's not 23 necessarily something that needs to be decided today.

24 Certainly, somebody can come back to the Court and 25 file a motion seeking some type of declaratory judgment

Veritext Legal Solutions
www.veritext.com

212-267-6868

516-608-2400

Page 268

1 THE COURT: That's true, but I would have expected
2 a little more explanation. It seemed odd to me to just have 3 none.

4 MS. SMITH: I mean, I think we -- you know, we have 5 the special report out, we've done extensive disclosures and 6 conversations about the special committee's investigation.
7 I think from our view, they were unfounded statements that 8 didn't necessarily warrant giving any weight to.

9 THE COURT: Okay.

10 MS. SMITH: I did want to reiterate that the 11 Debtor's position has not changed. There is no cause to 12 appoint a trustee under 1104(a)(1), and despite statements
13 that the movants say otherwise, any appointment to do so 14 would not be in the best interest of creditors, particularly 15 at this stage of the cases. We're on day three of a 16 confirmation hearing, seeking authority to proceed with 17 implementation of the plan. The plan overwhelmingly is 18 supported by voting creditors, and proceed with 19 distributions to customers.

20 These cases have obviously been difficult, and I do
21 understand the frustrations of customers, but no party has 22 offered any actual evidence of finding of fraud, and to 23 appoint a trustee at this point in time would essentially 24 put parties back at day one rather than accomplishing what 25 we understand customers' role is to be, the efficient return

1 relief to contend that whatever this was it was. And 2 whether it satisfies that tax provision, I don't know, but 3 that's certainly something that if it benefits the entire 4 creditor body, I'm sure that the plan administrator would 5 certainly want to consider.

6 MS. PROVINO: Mr. Azman, I want to truly appreciate
7 you mentioning that. I feel that that is what we need to 8 do, and I won't belabor this, but at the moment, I just 9 wanted to say thank you for that. And thank you, Your 10 Honor, for allowing me to speak on this matter because it
11 does significantly affect us.

12 THE COURT: Okay.

13 MS. PROVINO: Thank you so much.

14 THE COURT: Okay. Let me hear from the Debtor on 15 this issue then.

16 MS. SMITH: Thank you, Your Honor. Allyson Smith,
17 Kirkland & Ellis, on behalf of the Debtors.

18 I'm sure you saw we did file an objection to these 19 motions. That objection raised a number of the same points
20 that Your Honor has already --

21 THE COURT: It didn't really address the charges.
22 It sort of gave them the back of your hand.

23 MS. SMITH: Well, there's really no evidence or 24 anything other than just kind of assumptions and conclusory
25 statements.

2 And lastly, but importantly, I did want to 3 highlight that also appointment of a trustee or conversion
4 to a Chapter 7 is an APA termination event.

5 THE COURT: Okay. All right. Is there anything
6 else? Any other motions or any other issues that we need to 7 address today?

8 MS. SMITH: No, Your Honor.

9 MS. DIRESTA: Your Honor?

10 THE COURT: Yeah.

11 MS. DIRESTA: Your Honor, this is a pro se
12 creditor. I have a question.

13 THE COURT: Yes. What is your name?

14 MS. DIRESTA: My name is Gina DiResta.

15 THE COURT: Okay.

16 MS. DIRESTA: And I was not at the hearing when a
17 fee examiner was requested, but I heard through fellow
18 creditors that it was approved. And so I wanted to confirm 19 with you that was indeed approved because I was also told 20 that there was no orders filed if that was approved.

21 THE COURT: What I ruled at the time was while I'm 22 not a giant fan of fee examiners, and I did not want
23 somebody who was going to redo work that the U.S. Trustee
24 had already done or do what unfortunately my past experience
25 has been in the case of some fee examiners, which is simply

1 try to blackmail fee reductions from Debtors. And I asked
2 if the Debtors and the U.S. Trustee and the committee could 3 discuss and see if they could agree on something that would 4 work within that parameter, and I think they've been 5 discussing it. Nobody has gotten back to me to say that 6 they can't reach an agreement, but it does seem to be taking 7 some time.

8 MS. DIRESTA: Okay. Thank you for the 9 clarification, Your Honor.

10 THE COURT: I was in private practice once and 11 actually had a fee examiner say to us after raising a few
12 issues that look, all I want is five percent. I don't care 13 how. And I will never appoint anybody who does that.
14 That's just wrong.

15 MR. MORRISSEY: Your Honor, Richard Morrissey for 16 the U.S. Trustee.

17 Actually, to add one party to the conversation in 18 addition to the committee and the Debtors, counsel, we also 19 circulated names to Mr. Kirpalani, if he's still here, but 20 because he had objected to the fee examiner as well. So we 21 did pick someone, and I think I advised Your Honor at the 22 hearing on the Paul Hastings retention application that Lori
23 Lapin Jones was the person that had been --

24 THE COURT: That's right. You know, I forgot
25 entirely that you had said that. I apologize.

2 MS. DIVITA: Your Honor, I'm sorry. I was
3 struggling to get off mute, but this is Michelle DiVita.
4 I'm a pro se creditor, and I also filed a motion in regards
5 to appointing a trustee.

6 THE COURT: Yes?

7 MS. DIVITA: I just wanted to make maybe a few
8 quick clarifying statements, but I think this plan as it's 9 contemplated today does give the Debtors -- still, they 10 retain a great deal of business judgment, particularly in 11 regards to risk management and things of that nature. I
12 will say that I was maybe surprised earlier when there was a 13 discussion surrounding the confirmation order and exactly 14 what conduct the special committee investigated. It was my 15 understanding that that was a very limited investigation and 16 only pertained to the (indiscernible - 6:10:23).

17 And so I was surprised to hear that it also 18 included things such as wagers, communications to the 19 public, and then also decisions to extend loans beyond
20 (indiscernible - 6:10:32), particularly in regard to those 21 transactions that occurred shortly before bankruptcy and the 22 filing thereafter.

23 I just kind of maybe wanted to provide some context
24 in terms of why I filed a trustee motion.

25 Really, if the Court (indiscernible - 6:10:52) in

1 MR. MORRISSEY: But the creditor on the phone is 2 correct, we have not yet submitted a proposed order. Quite 3 frankly, Your Honor, the confirmation hearing has been all-
4 consuming, but as soon as --

5 THE COURT: That's something you don't have to tell
6 me.

7 MR. MORRISSEY: -- possible after it's over -- yes.
8 Thank you, Your Honor.

9 THE COURT: All right. Any other issues for today?

10 MR. WARREN: Your Honor, this is pro se creditor
11 Jon Warren. Can you hear me?

12 THE COURT: I can.

13 MR. WARREN: All right. I had one quick question
14 to you, is there a way that we can request the transaction
15 history, including withdrawals of Voyager insiders and board
16 of directors?

17 THE COURT: You would have had to make a discovery
18 request for that information, and Voyager would have had the 19 opportunity to object if it thought it was improper. It
20 would be -- I can't say anymore than that. I can't tell you
21 how to do it. I can't give rulings and things that aren't 22 in front of me. It's just not something I'm allowed to do
23 as the judge, okay?

24 MR. WARREN: Thank you for the information.

25 THE COURT: All right. Anything else? All

1 the sense that it seeks to give creditors their money back
2 as quickly as possible, and that was really kind of the 3 premise of the FTX transaction.

4 I, you know, kind of bit my tongue back in October.
5 I think that I maybe I'm a little more risk-averse than 6 other people on the phone, and that's why my claim is much
7 lower just because I chose to diversify my cryptocurrency
8 holding.

9 But I will just say that I was a little surprised,
10 maybe back when the UTC filed one of their first objections
11 to say that really no wrongdoing outside of this 3AC loan
12 had occurred, and really my frustration stems from things I
13 found in the financial statements and just kind of this 14 general sense from the Debtors that, you know, these were 15 very experienced finance professionals, and, you know, they 16 had fees beyond cryptocurrency and asset management and 17 things of that nature. And so kind of having to rely on 18 this very limited investigative report, just thinking, let's
19 get to plan to confirmation.

20 Now, today, it seems like we've had more time.
21 There is more that could be investigated, and it hasn't 22 been. So really an examiner motion wasn't appropriate, but 23 I think that between the conduct leading up to the 24 bankruptcy, combined with, you know, this assurance that the 25 FTX transaction will be great, all in light of the fact

1 that -- you know, Alameda was an insider shortly before the 2 filing of bankruptcy petition, not to mention, I think that 3 under United States law, they're still technically 4 considered an insider. It's just really this combination of 5 factors that really made me to distrust the debtors, and I
6 know a lot of the creditors on the phone maybe agree with 7 that assertion as well.

8 And so I certainly don't want to -- I do not envy
9 the position that you are in, whatsoever. I certainly do
10 not have admissible evidence to any of these factors. I,
11 personally, have spent a lot of time on this matter, and I
12 don't have a ton of time to dedicate to it in the future,
13 but really just trying to rely on the deference of the 14 bankruptcy professionals, and you, yourself, Your Honor, to 15 make a decision, and as we confirm this plan, with maybe
16 that context in mind.

17 And I think as you've heard from these pro se
18 creditors, we aren't bankruptcy professionals. We're not 19 experts here, and we don't know I think the procedural part 20 of things I've seen has at least, for me, personally, have 21 one of the biggest learning curves.

22 THE COURT: Right.

23 MS. DIVITA: These are just things that I really -- 24 the purpose of my motion was to just kind of paint that in a
25 context of distrust and their kind of (indiscernible -

1 frustrated because neither the debtors, nor the special
2 committed, nor the unsecured creditors committee championed
3 your cause on allegations about, for example, whether 4 Voyager was on the brink of bankruptcy, but that's not 5 really their job. I know you may have assumed it's their 6 job, but it's not.

7 Those are claims that belong to you individually
8 that if you believe you have them, you need to pursue. And 9 they're not being released. Nobody is purporting to release
10 them, nobody is purporting to express any view about whether 11 they're right wrong, but I just -- I hope -- I've tried many 12 times throughout the hearing here -- and it's resulted in 13 extending the hearing quite a bit -- to give you, all of 14 you, a lot of leeway as to the questions you can ask and to 15 try to explain things because I think it's important that 16 people understand and feel that their questions have been 17 heard and that the process is open and that they understand
18 it as much as possible, but I still think that on that 19 particular point, there's still some confusion, okay?

20 MS. DIVITA: Yes. And I'm sorry, Your Honor. I
21 was referring to the creditor committee's findings. I don't 22 think that that changes your statements by any means, but 23 just to clarify that point, and say subsequently, had it 24 been asked to customers to contribute their direct claims to 25 a wind-down or to the trust that would then prosecute those

1 6:13:42) today or what actions that have led us to where we
2 are today. That's all I have to say, Your Honor. Thank 3 you.

4 THE COURT: Okay. In terms of just to correct one
5 thing you said --

6 MS. DIVITA: Yes.

7 THE COURT: When you said you were frustrated that 8 the committee found that there was nothing wrong, other than 9 the 3AC loan, I need to make clear, the special committee's 10 job really was to figure out what claims belonging to the 11 Debtor and the estate could be pursued, okay?

12 You mentioned specifically financial statements.
13 I, personally, have no idea if there was anything wrong with 14 the financial statements or not or whether there was any 15 fraud and whether that injured anybody. But if a customer
16 or a shareholder was injured by a misstatement of financial 17 condition, that's not a claim that would belong to the 18 debtors. That's a claim that would belong to the customers.
19 Okay?

20 And the debtors have no ability or right, let alone
21 ability, to pursue it for customers, nor does the committee.
22 The committee's job is to pursue creditors' interest not 23 with respect to individual claims, but as to the conduct of 24 the case, how the business will be handled, et cetera.

25 So I know probably many of you think that you're

1 claims so.

2 There were direct claims at least contemplating in 3 the beginning, and I think that the unsecured creditors
4 committee also previously referenced --

5 THE COURT: Okay.

6 MS. DIVITA: -- but only 60,000 people here have 7 voted. So that's maybe a clarifying point. And I think 8 that we're relying on these professionals to meet those 9 assertions in regard to those direct claims and/or other 10 claims.

11 THE COURT: Okay.

12 MS. DIVITA: That's all. Thank you, Your Honor.

13 THE COURT: All right. Is there anybody else who 14 wants to be heard? Okay.

15 I'm going to close the argument record then. I'll 16 reserve decision. I have a lot of homework and prep to do
17 to make rulings on these motions and to review the proposed 18 order. It sounds like people are still reviewing, and I'm 19 trying to decide on certain provisions.

20 Whatever is the version of the order that was sent 21 to us this afternoon, I am going to work on. So if you make 22 changes, make sure you are very clear as to which specific 23 provisions they relate to so I don't get lost in looking at 24 them tomorrow. But I will be working and making my own 25 adjustments to kind of editorial provisions, and I may have other questions for you as I review the full scope of the extended order.

And perhaps we should resume at 2 o'clock tomorrow, at which point, I will read my rulings into the record and ask any remaining questions that I have about the order. Okay. Does that work?

MR. SLADE: Very good, Your Honor, thank you.

THE COURT: Okay.

MR. GOLDBERG: Your Honor, would you like us in person or by phone?

THE COURT: Let's do it by person for sure as to the Debtors, Binance, and the committee. Anybody else who want to be over here in person can be here in person, but has permission to be on the phone. Okay? I think the rest of you, it's useful to have you in one place if an issue comes up because you're already here, you can discuss it, and we can resolve it more quickly. When you're on the phone, it takes forever. Okay?

UNIDENTIFIED SPEAKER: Thank you, Your Honor.

(Whereupon, the proceedings were concluded at 6:19 p.m.)

selfies uploaded, identifications, or bank statements, and bank account information. Any opted-out information would not be acquired by the purchaser in the transaction, and that notice will be provided by the Debtors at the Debtors' expense. The expense reimbursement start date for the Debtors, which was to begin on March 18, 2000 --

THE COURT: Wait a minute. Selfies? I couldn't write fast enough.

MS. OKIKE: Selfies, uploaded IDs. So driver's licenses, passports, other forms of identification.

THE COURT: Okay.

MS. OKIKE: Bank statements, and bank account information.

THE COURT: Okay.

MS. OKIKE: The expense reimbursement provision for the Debtor --

THE COURT: Social Security numbers?

MAN 1: Your Honor, that would be required (indiscernible).

THE COURT: Why? Just help me.

MAN 1: That is, along with names and addresses, an important part of identifying and establishing the basis for new customer chats should anyone elect to join the platform in the future.

THE COURT: But I cannot imagine a piece of

PROCEEDINGS

THE COURT: All right. We're here for the resumption and hopefully completion of our confirmation hearing in the Voyager case. There were a few open issues. Number one, I see that the names of the independent directors have been filed and disclosed.

MS. OKIKE: Correct, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Is the representative of the Ad Hoc Equity Committee on the phone?

MS. MOYNIHAN: Yes, Your Honor. Kelly Moynihan from Patrick Townsend.

THE COURT: Are you pleased with the selection? Do you have any further objection to the people who've been selected and named?

MS. MOYNIHAN: No, Your Honor. No further objection. Thank you.

THE COURT: Very good. We had also left open a question of just how we were going to treat customer data and the transfers of data, particularly for customers who hadn't yet and may not ever become finance customers. Have we reached any agreements or resolutions of that point?

MS. OKIKE: Yes, Your Honor. Christine Okike of Kirkland and Ellis on behalf of the Debtors. I will read into the record the proposed resolution. So there will be a two-week period for customers to opt out of transferring information more quickly and easily given to you if a customer wants to do that than their Social Security number. Why you need that in advance I'm having trouble understanding.

MAN 1: There's a couple of reasons, Your Honor. You know, I think -- and really this, if I may explain all of these issues?

THE COURT: Yeah.

MAN 1: I think there's -- the customer data, just to set the context, Your Honor, is really at the heart of the transaction for Binance.US. When we agreed to pay the $20 million purchase price, we didn't know how many customers would agree to join the Binance.US platform. And so the value of each individual customer's future actions on the platform are as unknown. The only known commodity that Voyager has to sell is the data, and that was at the heart of the deal.

So the information has, I think, three main value sources to Binance.US as a technology company that fundamentally depends upon data. One is the ability to simply reach out to a customer and market to them. Second, the information is valuable because whenever a customer onboards to the Binance.US platform -- and they may not do that today. They may do that well down the road. The cryptocurrency markets are extremely volatile, as we all

212-267-6868

Veritext Legal Solutions
www.veritext.com

516-608-2400

1 know. There's bear markets like we're in now, and there's 2 bull markets. And when there's a bull market, many people
3 join the platform that may not have had any intention to do
4 so in the bear market.

5 Having the KYC information mitigates the actual
6 monetary cost that Binance.US would have to pay
7 affirmatively to conduct the KYC each time someone joins.
8 And so having the Social Security number and other
9 information that is not part of this excluded information
10 that Ms. Okike mentioned would be valuable to avoid that 11 actual cash expense to Binance.US.

12 Third, as a technology company that uses data to 13 enable and empower its operations, even if someone doesn't 14 join the platform, the data that Voyager has about their 15 past activities is very valuable in enabling Binance.US to 16 market and conduct and enhance its operations going forward.
17 So that is the source of the value for the transaction --

18 THE COURT: What does somebody's Social Security
19 number have to do with that third point you just mentioned?

20 MAN 1: Well, it enables part of the modern 21 marketing process, right? That -- as Your Honor knows,
22 right, we've received tons of emails, tons of direct mail.
23 That's -- we throw it all out. We delete it. But when 24 there's more targeted marketing that can go someone based on 25 knowledge of their circumstances and past transaction

1 have suggested that the KYC information that you've gotten 2 from the Debtors would somehow not be very good without the 3 Social Security number. Or are you saying you're actually 4 going to do -- use the Social Security numbers in advance to 5 do KYC checks on everybody who might in the future become a 6 customer?

7 MAN 1: Your Honor, my understanding from 8 discussions with my client, and obviously there's a number
9 of technical details here, is that, you know, Voyager's
10 already done KYC checks on all of their customers of course, 11 right? And so part of this transaction is to acquire that 12 information and have the KYC platform for all of these 13 customers in place, and that's a very valuable part of the 14 transaction alone.

15 THE COURT: Okay. So whatever this information
16 is, Voyager gives it to you. Can it be given to you without 17 the Social Security number? Because it seems to me if 18 somebody wants to be a customer -- if somebody elects not to 19 let you have the Social Security number and then changes 20 their mind, all you do is plug that into what you have. Or 21 if, as you say, you want to go out and hire somebody to do
22 an additional check, you would have -- you're certainly not 23 going to be put at any great delay because somebody can give 24 you the Social Security number in an instant.

25 MAN 1: Well, Your Honor, if I may actually

1 history, that maximizes the ability to get someone in the 2 door for a retail operation.

3 THE COURT: If somebody has already opted out of 4 selfies, uploaded IDs, bank statements, and bank account,
5 you would need that information if they later wanted to open
6 an account, right?

7 MAN 1: Not necessarily, Your Honor. The first
8 level of KYC that applies to most customers does not require 9 that information.

10 THE COURT: You don't require that information
11 yourself before the account can actually be up and 12 functioning?

13 MAN 1: My understanding is that not all of that 14 information is required in all cases. The --

15 THE COURT: And why is -- you know, if Voyager
16 sent other information to you, why does the absence of a 17 Social Security number disable the -- you know, your 18 customer data in the way you've kind of suggested to me? I 19 don't understand that.

20 MAN 1: Well, my understanding is that when a new 21 customer joins, they would be providing their Social 22 Security number at that time. And then Binance.US has to 23 pay a third party provider to conduct the KYC in order to 24 run the check on that person.

25 THE COURT: Okay, but -- so -- but you seem to

Page 13

1 express my personal experience, about a year ago when crypto
2 markets were pretty hot before all of this, I actually tried
3 to open an account. And I started doing it, and then I got 4 busy and gave up because it took time and effort to go
5 through. And I think part of the benefit of having this 6 information in place at Binance.US is that it allows
7 instantaneous KYC checks that have already been, you know,
8 pre-done by Voyager and can be relied upon to some extent as 9 well as avoiding the cost of a third-party service. And so 10 --

11 THE COURT: But what I'm not understanding and 12 you're not helping me with is you can have everything all 13 set up, customer name, address, all that information that 14 Voyager gives you. But the only thing if somebody elects
15 within your two-week period not to let you have the Social 16 Security number, all they would have to do is plug that 17 remaining bit of information into the stuff that you have.
18 I absolutely fail to understand why you need that 19 information in advance.

20 MAN 1: Well --

21 THE COURT: It's information that a lot of people
22 regard as very sensitive.

23 MAN 1: The -- that -- in completing the KYC check
24 would come at cash expense to Binance.US. In addition, the 25 delay that it takes and requirement for someone to go ahead

212-267-6868

Veritext Legal Solutions
www.veritext.com

516-608-2400

1 and enter their Social Security number and then run that
2 check, even if it's done relatively quickly, that delay,
3 that extra step could leave to slippage and breakage in a
4 colloquial sense and lose a customer.

5 THE COURT: Let me try it this way. If somebody
6 has not given you this other information and you have their 7 Social Security number, then they decide they want to be a
8 customer, and they tell you that, do you have an additional 9 know-your-customer check that you have to do at that time?

10 MAN 1: My understanding is that if we acquired
11 all of the information with the exclusion of the information
12 we've agreed to leave behind, we would have the KYC
13 information in place for Voyager customers.

14 THE COURT: So you'd have it in place. So if you
15 get all of that same information except for the Social 16 Security number, and then somebody wants to be a customer,
17 why do you have to do anything other than plug in the Social 18 Security number? You keep telling me you have to do a new 19 know-your-customer check. I don't understand that. If you
20 have all the other information just not the Social Security
21 number, what's the big deal?

22 MAN 1: I don't know if that would require a new 23 expense. It would certainly involve requiring additional 24 information from the customer, an additional step in the 25 process, and that could lose customers. And that's part of 1 loud, that's nothing. That's absolutely nothing, right?

2 And if what you're saying is, well, that's going to chase
3 away people who have already in the first instance decided 4 they don't want Binance to have their information but have 5 later changed their minds, that seems preposterous to me.

6 MAN 1: The third category of information, Your 7 Honor, is the data analytics part. And whether or not 8 someone joins the platform, the data that Voyager has about 9 their transaction history, and I know Social Security number
10 would be relevant to that, will empower Binance.US' data
11 analytics programs to enhance its own operations and 12 maximize its own profitability.

13 THE COURT: How? Help me with that. What does 14 having the Social Security number allow you to do in terms
15 of that kind of data marketing that you couldn't do without 16 the number if you have all the other information about the 17 customer's name and past history, etcetera?

18 MAN 1: I think that specific question, Your 19 Honor, to be fair, is a level of detail I'd have to speak to 20 my client about.

21 THE COURT: Okay. I think -- I'm not convinced
22 that you need the Social Security numbers, and you're going 23 to have to convince me. Because we are here, based on your 24 proposal, only talking about whoever would affirmatively opt
25 out of these arrangements. And I -- as I said yesterday, I

1 the value for the Binance of the ease of getting people in 2 the door in this transaction.

3 THE COURT: Adding their Social Security number
4 would chase them away. I remind you that, you know, I'm 5 mindful these are people who only are the people who have 6 opted out of letting you have that information in the first
7 place and who might've changed their minds and come back.
8 Do you think they're going to be scared away because they 9 have to enter a Social Security number? That seems 10 ridiculous. Doesn't it? I'm trying to understand, but I'm 11 not. You want the information, but I am absolutely at a 12 loss as to why you need it and why it would involve any 13 other expense to you. Please help me because maybe I'm just 14 not understanding --

15 MAN 1: I think --

16 THE COURT: -- how this works. But what you're 17 telling me doesn't help me at all.

18 MAN 1: Well, my understanding is it is relevant 19 to the second category of expenses, the ease of bringing 20 someone onto the system. In addition to that, it is 21 relevant to the third category of value.

22 THE COURT: But in terms of the ease, if you have 23 all the other information, the difference in ease is whether 24 somebody's Social Security number is already there or 25 whether they have to type in nine digits. For crying out

1 understand that there are some legitimate reasons why you
2 want to have some information, and certainly some contact
3 information, etcetera. But that doesn't necessarily mean
4 there is good reason for you to have every bit of sensitive
5 information about a customer at once, particularly if a
6 customer objects and may not want to be a Binance customer.
7 And so I am trying to balance those two. And I understand
8 you push back on some of this information, but as to the 9 Social Security numbers, what you've told me so far is 10 pretty unconvincing. Okay.

11 MAN 1: Okay. Well, what I'd suggest, Your Honor, 12 is we can proceed to address the other issues and I'll --

13 THE COURT: Okay.

14 MAN 1: -- confer with my client. Thank you.

15 THE COURT: Very good. Is it too much to hope
16 that you might have had discussions with the governmental 17 authorities on the exculpation disputes and resolved them?
18 MS. OKIKE: Your Honor, that is too much to hope.
19 We have had discussions.

20 THE COURT: Hope springs eternal.

21 MS. OKIKE: Your Honor, I would like to read the 22 rest of the agreement with respect to the customer
23 information just --

24 THE COURT: I'm sorry. Go ahead.

25 MS. OKIKE: -- on the record because it does change certain provisions in the APA. But then I'm happy to address the exculpation. So the expense reimbursement start date for the seller will be moved back from March 18, 2023 to April 1, 2023. If --

THE COURT: Okay.

MS. OKIKE: -- the purchaser is ready to close by April 1, 2023, assuming the closing conditions are satisfied or waived by them, and Voyager is not, including because Voyager declines to waive any closing conditions other than breaches or defaults by the purchaser, then Voyager will cease to have the expense reimbursement protection.

THE COURT: Okay.

MS. OKIKE: And the last point is that both parties acknowledge that the closing condition relating to entry and finalization of the APA order, so the prior order of Your Honor authorizing entry into the APA has been satisfied. And to its knowledge, there is no breach of the APA by the other party as of the date of the confirmation order.

THE COURT: Okay.

MS. OKIKE: So Your Honor, with respect to the exculpation, we have provided language to the various governmental entities. Honestly, I'm not sure where the various entities stand. I believe Texas may be okay with the proviso that we are proposing with respect to the propose, the plan contemplates certain rebalancing transactions and the completion of distributions of cryptocurrencies to Creditors. The exculpated parties shall have no liability for and are exculpated from any claim for fines, penalties, or damages based on their execution and completion of the rebalancing transactions and the distributions of cryptocurrencies to Creditors in the manner provided in the plan. For the avoidance of doubt, the foregoing paragraph reflects the fact that confirmation of the plan requires the exculpated parties to engage in certain conduct, and the fact that no regulatory authority has taken the position during the confirmation hearing that such conduct would violate applicable laws or regulations.

212-267-6868

Nothing in this provision shall limit in any way the powers of any governmental unit to contend that any rebalancing transaction should be stopped or prevented, or that any other action contemplated by the plan should be enjoined or prevented from proceeding further. Nor does anything in this provision limit the enforcement of any future regulatory or court order that requires that such activities either cease or be modified or limit the penalties that may be applicable if such a future regulatory or court order is issued.

Similarly, nothing herein shall limit the authority of the Committee on foreign investment of the

212-267-6868

Veritext Legal Solutions
www.veritext.com

516-608-2400

provisions in the confirmation order related to the governmental entities. And that proviso basically says provided further, and it goes through all the things that the order is not doing in terms of enjoining governmental entities. And then says provided further that nothing in this paragraph shall limit the exculpation of the exculpated parties set forth in -- and then we put the exculpation into the confirmation order. So it's as set forth in Paragraphs 61 to 62 of this order.

THE COURT: Let me read for you and for the government my own proposal, all right? I have to note I believe is narrower than the original plan proposed to which none of these governmental entities objected. I propose to say the following. To the fullest extent permissible under applicable law, and without affecting or limiting either the Debtor release or the third-party releases, and except as otherwise specified in the plan, no exculpated parties shall have or incur, and each exculpated party is hereby exculpated from any liability for damages based on the negotiation, execution, and implementation of any transactions approved by the Court. That's the standard language we have that essentially says Creditors, shareholders, you can't sue saying somebody did something stupid when I've already made a decision that they haven't.

In addition, this is back to the language I

212-267-6868

Veritext Legal Solutions
www.veritext.com

United States to bar any of the contemplated transactions. Nor does anything in this provision alter the terms of the plan regarding the compliance of the purchaser with the applicable laws in the unsupported jurisdictions before distributions of cryptocurrencies occur in those unsupported jurisdictions.

I think the language that I have just read is fairly narrow. And what it essentially says is, you know, I've got a plan in front of me. One of the things I'm supposed to consider is whether it's proposed in a means that is in compliance with law. I have a bunch of people, governmental authorities, who've done nothing except hint that maybe there's some issue, but nothing else. Nobody else made any other opposition.

And if and when I confirm the plan, people will be obligated to do what the plan says. They won't have a choice. And I think for a variety of reasons that I can say and that I can go into, they're entitled to the protection that I've just said and entitled to know that when they do what I compel them to do in between the time I do so and up until the time somebody else tells them they can't, they aren't going to be subject to some ex-post facto argument that, hey, we didn't tell you at the time even though we could've.

We didn't even make up our minds at the time, but

1 guess what? You're liable for penalties, and that court
2 order wasn't just approval of a plan. It was a sentence
3 that you, with -- under no volition of your own, would have 4 to do something that was going to subject you to some 5 liability. I think that would be an absurd situation for 6 anybody to be in, and I think that language is perfectly
7 appropriate under the applicable authorities.

8 Do the governmental authorities on the phone
9 object to the language I just read?

10 WOMAN 1: Your Honor, this *(Indiscernible) from 11 the State of Texas. I think that language is excellent.
12 And subject to the deletion that's in paragraphs where we 13 tried to craft such eloquent wording but didn't, I am fine
14 with that wording. Thank you.

15 THE COURT: Okay.

16 MR. BARNEA: Your Honor, this is J.D. Barnea from 17 the U.S. Attorney's Office. We were not able to get all of 18 that language down. There may still be some concerns we 19 have with it, but it's certainly an improvement over what 20 we've seen, especially if it's combined with deleting the 21 injunctive language that was in the proposed order
22 previously. However, we still may have some concerns about 23 it. I think we would need to see it written. If there's 24 any way to send it around in writing, we'd appreciate the 25 opportunity to take a look -- a closer look.

1 be imposed. I assume what you meant is if there's a future
2 decision by the government that tells -- gives us rules --

3 THE COURT: Yeah, and if there's a --

4 MR. SLADE: -- and if we violate those rules --

5 THE COURT: If there's an order saying stop doing
6 this and you violate that order, I'm not exculpating you
7 from that.

8 MR. SLADE: That's right, but they can impose
9 penalties for the work that we did in reliance on the order
10 before they --

11 THE COURT: Exactly.

12 MR. SLADE: -- made their decision.

13 THE COURT: Exactly.

14 MR. SLADE: Okay. We're on the same page. Thank 15 you, Your Honor.

16 MR. AZMAN: Your Honor, Darren Azman for the 17 Committee. I just have three minor comments. I don't mean
18 nick the language. I just wanted to clarify something --

19 THE COURT: Well --

20 MR. AZMAN: -- given the importance of the issues.

21 THE COURT: -- we don't -- you know, everybody
22 wants to look at (indiscernible) so let me just say that's 23 what -- I proposed something along those lines recognizing 24 that there may be little tweaks. But I think that 25 everybody's got the substance of it.

Page 23

1 MS. CORDRY: And Your Honor, this is Karen Cordry.
2 I represent a number of other states. We did not formally
3 speak up yesterday because it seemed like the issues were 4 being raised by other folks. I think the language you have 5 there seems very appropriate. And I would note that this 6 all came up with a proviso that was only introduced on March 7 3rd before the -- on March 2nd before the SEC said anything.
8 So we think what you have there does go a very long way
9 towards dealing with our concerns while also protecting the 10 (indiscernible) efforts of the people on the -- you know,
11 who can try to put this plan together.

12 I don't think any of us meant to try to bring 13 those kind of damages and so forth. So if those assurances 14 are helpful, I think that's -- I think the language seems 15 fine. Again, sort of like the United States, I look --
16 didn't actually get every bit of it down, but it sounded
17 appropriate as I was listening to it.

18 THE COURT: All right.

19 MR. SLADE: Your Honor, I have one thing.

20 THE COURT: Go ahead.

21 MR. SLADE: I apologize. Mike Slade for the 22 Debtors.

23 THE COURT: Yep.

24 MR. SLADE: There was one sentence towards the end
25 there where you said nothing limits the penalties that can

Page 25

1 MR. AZMAN: I'll keep my comment to just one point
2 then --

3 THE COURT: Okay.

4 MR. AZMAN: -- just to make sure it's clear. So
5 you mentioned that the exculpated parties could not be 6 liable for fines, penalties, or damages. I think it needs
7 to be more broader. It needs to be any civil or criminal
8 liability. I don't think fines, penalties, or damages
9 necessarily includes somebody going to jail over it.

10 THE COURT: Okay.

11 MR. BARNEA: Your Honor, this is J.D. Barnea
12 again. It would certainly not be appropriate for this Court 13 to enjoin a criminal prosecution of any person for any 14 reason.

15 THE COURT: Well, if what you're saying is that 16 having sat on the sidelines and said nothing to me to 17 indicate that there's anything illegal about what these 18 people are going to do, that you want to reserve the right
19 to put somebody in jail for doing a rebalancing transaction
20 that they will have no choice but to do under the order that 21 I entered, then I disagree with you. I think the very 22 suggestion offends me to no end. I can't believe that you 23 would even take the position in front of me that you should 24 have that right. It's preposterous. It's absolutely 25 preposterous. If you think something's that illegal, speak up, but don't dare tell me that you kind of want to reserve that right to do that to somebody. Go ahead, Mr. Azman.

MR. AZMAN: Your Honor, this is not about hiding in the wings and hoping to arrest someone upon them taking some action. This is about the authority of a bankruptcy court to tell a criminal prosecutor that he's not allowed to do his job. We are not -- there is no intention here to ensnare people. We're not aware of anything specific that would be in that direction. It's simply that it's not appropriate for any court or any bankruptcy court to declare that someone is free from criminal prosecution.

If they commit a crime, they shall get prosecuted for it. If they have a defense that they were acting in reliance on a court order, that may well be an excellent defense, and perhaps that would be a reason not to prosecute them. But there's no authority that this court has to order a criminal prosecutor not to prosecute someone.

THE COURT: It's a defense to the extent that I say it's a defense, and that's what I'm doing. You know, I read the Government's paper, which essentially acknowledges that courts have held that people are entitled to qualified immunity for doing what they're approved to do, and especially what they're ordered to do under a court order. But to suggest that I should allow --

MR. AZMAN: Absolutely as an affirmative defense

can't do this are belied completely by the fact that there are literally thousands, thousands of confirmed bankruptcy plans that have done exactly this with no objection by you. You know, you've gotten yourselves all stirred up because the Debtors overreached in what they wanted. And now you want to object to completely ordinary, reasonable provisions that are well-based in authority to which you haven't objected to any of the other bankruptcy cases that I have ever handled. So I think your position's preposterous. Go ahead, Mr. Morrissey.

MR. MORRISSEY: Good afternoon, Your Honor. Richard Morrissey for the U.S. Trustee. The U.S. Trustee will certainly review the Court's language and hopefully we can come to an understanding. I just wanted to make two points, Your Honor, about what the Debtors are seeking here with respect to exculpation. And again, I hope the language that Your Honor just read to us will be consistent with our view.

The U.S. Trustee believes that the exculpation provision as written in the plan in these cases was different from the corresponding provision in (Indiscernible). As a factual matter, my understanding, Your Honor, is that there weren't regulatory actions pending. And in addition, there were no temporal problems, which is to say that parties in interest were not worried

212-267-6868

Veritext Legal Solutions
www.veritext.com

in an enforcement proceeding, but not as a pre-determined bar by a bankruptcy court.

THE COURT: Okay. Please don't interrupt me in the middle of a sentence.

MR. AZMAN: I'm sorry about that, Your Honor.

THE COURT: What I was trying to say is the suggestion that I should be silent and just leave it for somebody else to decide whether my order has any such qualified effect, or what I myself intend my order to have as its effect, and what I'm telling people to do is ridiculous. People who will have to do what my order will compel them to do are entitled to know, okay? And they're entitled to clarity.

And some other court who doesn't know bankruptcy is entitled to know what I think people are being compelled to do, and what I think I am authorizing them to do, and what I am in effect, at least on an interim basis until somebody actually steps in and gets an order otherwise, I'm in effect saying by confirming this plan it is okay for you to do this, okay? And none of you have stepped forward to say otherwise.

So people are -- I think I'm the one that ought to be defining that, not some future court. And leaving it to some future court in complete uncertainty, I don't know how a bankruptcy case could function. And your arguments that I about what exculpated parties might do in the future outside of the Court's purview. And I think I raised this point yesterday. So we think it was a broader release. And Your Honor, another issue is -- that I did not raise --

MAN 2: (Indiscernible) --

MR. MORRISSEY: -- yesterday has to do with --

MAN 2: -- (Indiscernible). You did.

THE COURT: Who's talking -- whoever's talking on the phone needs to mute themselves because you're -- and wait until it's your turn to speak, okay?

MR. MORRISSEY: Thank you, Your Honor -- has to do with actions taken upon it by some counsel, which I think Your Honor used the word "defense" in speaking to Mr. Barnea before. I think that is certainly an affirmative defense in a future proceeding, but it's an issue as to whether that should be part of the ruling here.

THE COURT: All right. I'm not purporting in any way to modify to the extent to which reliance on the advice of counsel is or is not a defense for anybody. I'm simply saying that it's quite abundantly clear to everybody that the plan here contemplates rebalancing transactions and distributions of cryptocurrencies. Any governmental authority that thinks that those activities are illegal anyway is on notice of them and has had a full opportunity to come in and tell me why they are illegal, the Bankruptcy

Code says I shouldn't confirm it if the plan is proposed by any means that would violate any law.

I absolutely have been and made clear from the beginning that I was ready to consider any actual objections that there was a violation of law. I don't have any. I have hints that somebody might think, for reasons that I couldn't quite explain completely, that the two aspects or one aspect of the sale of VGX and perhaps something to do with Binance.US' business operations might raise regulatory issues, but no idea if that means that the transaction cannot be actually accomplished.

And therefore, based on the actual record in front of me, no reason at all to think that what the plan calls for people to do would be illegal. And so when I make that determination and then any fact by confirming the plan leave people with no authority but to do those things that I have in effect found are okay, I think it's preposterous to suggest that somebody -- people who do it would be personally liable.

You know, the alternative is to tell the Government you had your chance, you didn't speak up. You know, this is what the Debtors were trying to do last week. Therefore, forever shut up, there's nothing illegal about this. I'm not going to do that. I have no intention of doing that. That to me would overstep what is reasonable

And I think -- and I'm not trying to speak for the United States, but my sense is that that may be the kind of concern that is floating around there, is that the -- that's still -- I mean, it's not like we have been sitting here getting notices of every transaction that goes through in terms of the rebalancing and so forth. I have known basically from the terms that the overall rebalancing was illegal, but it is possible. And I think if we use the term "possible" that somebody could do something illegal in the context of that overall approved process. So I think that's sort of what's floating around out there.

THE COURT: Yeah. You know, I don't have a problem. I don't think anybody has a problem with that. Okay?

MS. CORDRY: Yep. So I think that's kind of where there was still the concern about.

THE COURT: Okay. All right. Everybody's going to want to see the language and make little tweaks. I don't -- I'm not in a position to be able to give it to everybody. I have one copy, which is the copy that I have for the purpose of making my decision right now.

MR. MORRISSEY: Your Honor, Richard Morrissey once again for the U.S. Trustee. I was going to raise an issue that's separate and apart from confirmation. I don't know if you wanted me to raise it now or wait until later in the here.

I wish, if the regulators had a problem, that they would've spoken up before me because I have absolutely no desire to set anybody on a course that raises any regulatory concerns. But for whatever reason, the governmental entities either were unwilling or unable to voice any opposition on those points. So if something happens, if they unlock their regulatory brakes and figure out that they have some objection, they can try to stop what's going on, I'm not going to prevent them from doing that. But the idea that they should also then be able to come in and claim any kind of liability for the people who have done what I've ordered them to do and the Government took no action to stop it just seems utterly ridiculous to me. Okay?

MR. MORRISSEY: Thank you, Your Honor.

MS. CORDRY: Your Honor, this is Karen Cordry again. If I could just say very quickly one point here which is that a typical exculpation provision does include in there in the language that the Debtor had written in another claim that we're exculpated from all of those sorts of causes of action. Unless there's a determination of actual fraud, willful misconduct, or gross negligence, which indicates that it's possible to have the basic transaction be approved, but they have some aspect of its being carried out constitute one of those problems.

-- later today.

THE COURT: Well, I have a lengthy decision to dictate into the record, and last I heard I had a 5:00 deadline. Where do we stand on the 5:00 issue?

MAN 3: Your Honor, I haven't spoken with my client about it and whether we need more time than that. I hope not.

THE COURT: We obviously are going to -- because people are going to have to see, if nothing else, the other revisions that I have already told you I want to make to the confirmation order and this particular language. The idea that I can announce my decision and have an order in the next two hours and ten minutes is just not going to happen.

MAN 3: We'd like to keep things moving along, but what would Your Honor suggest?

THE COURT: I would suggest that people are going to want to -- once I finish my decision, which is going to take a while, people are going to want to see the order, and that you should extend it until 3:00 tomorrow. Okay.

MAN 3: Let me request that from my client. In the meantime, we could suggest perhaps sending the language around to the parties via email to the Debtors.

THE COURT: I don't know if anybody --

WOMAN 2: Your Honor, when the attorney for Binance speaks, he has to go near a microphone. Otherwise the people in Court Solutions can't hear him.

THE COURT: I don't think anybody has the language I just read except for me because I wrote it out for myself here. I don't -- it's not in anything else I've given to anybody else, so...

MAN 3: Correct.

THE COURT: Okay.

MAN 3: Thank you, Your Honor. All right.

MR. MORRISSEY: Your Honor, the issue I was going to raise just so it's not a mystery to the Court and the parties has to do with Rule 3020. The version I have of the proposed order, it's Paragraph 118, Waiver of Stay. Your Honor, the U.S. Trustee would oppose the waiver of the stay. We think that the 14-day stay should be part of the order, and that Rule 20 should be abided by. Thank you, Your Honor.

THE COURT: All right. I understand the Government's position. When is -- if I don't enter a stay, when is the effective date likely to occur at the earliest?

MR. GOLDBERG: Your Honor, Adam Goldberg for Binance.US. We would be working to bring the plan effective as quickly as possible.

THE COURT: Okay.

MR. GOLDBERG: I'd (indiscernible) for the Debtors for anything else.

my decision with respect --

MS. SCHEUER: Your Honor, if I may just have one moment. I'm sorry, Your Honor. Therese Scheuer for the SEC. Your Honor, the SEC would also like to request the opportunity to review the changes to the order and Your Honor's proposed -- Your Honor's --

THE COURT: Understood.

MS. SCHEUER: -- exculpation language.

THE COURT: Understood.

MS. SCHEUER: Thank you, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Of course. I understand. All right. We are here to consider the proposed confirmation of the plan of reorganization of the Voyager Debtors, and also to consider some other motions that have been filed by Creditors. The plan contemplates a transaction that is subject to some strict deadlines, so I'm going to dictate my findings and conclusions into the record so that our timing does not unintentionally trigger any termination rights on the part of the proposed purchaser in the pending transaction.

I'm asking the Debtors to have a transcript of my rulings prepared as promptly as possible and to be submitted to chambers in Word format. The decision that I dictate today will explain my rulings and my findings, and we will endeavor to enter an order as soon as we can, reasonably can

MS. OKIKE: Yes, Your Honor. I think -- Christine Okike for Kirkland and Ellis. We agree with that. I do think it's going to take, you know, some time, but we will be working expeditiously to effectuate the plan.

MR. KIRPALANI: Good afternoon, Your Honor. Susheel Kirpalani from Quinn Emanuel on behalf of the Special Committee of the Debtors. I just wanted to let the Court know, I'm sure you have your own way of wanting to announce things, but I wanted to confirm that Your Honor is aware, and if not I wanted to make Your Honor and all interested parties aware, that we have scaled back the releases.

THE COURT: I saw.

MR. KIRPALANI: And I've got even some additional line item nits to further scale it back because there were things in there --

THE COURT: Okay.

MR. KIRPALANI: -- that I missed. And so I could read those changes into the record, or I could do it any which way you'd like.

THE COURT: We'll final -- I saw an in-concept approve of what you've done, and we'll get the wordsmithing done as we enter the order.

MR. KIRPALANI: Okay. Thank you, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Okay. All right. I want to announce based on the rulings and findings. But once we receive the transcript, we will correct spelling, citations, inadvertent errors, and places where I may misspeak or where I may find that I was less clear than I would have liked during the course of my dictation. And that corrected decision will be entered as the actual official decision of the Court.

We had a lengthy hearing that began on Thursday, March 2 and continued through yesterday, Monday, March 6, and to some extent has continued for another hour's worth of argument today. We have had an unusually large number of participants in the hearing, including a large number of pro se parties who are Voyager accountholders.

I want to pause and thank the pro se parties for their participation and for the unusual amount of work and energy that they have put into following this case in comparison to how relatively smaller creditors tend to treat other cases that I have handled. I appreciate that they are not attorneys, and that they have labored under some significant disadvantages as a result. I tried wherever possible over the course of the hearing to give the pro se parties the chance to ask their questions even if at times we may have strayed somewhat from the issues that are strictly before the Court in this particular hearing.

Unfortunately, I did have to exclude one pro se party who refused to abide by my instructions and who was

212-267-6868

Veritext Legal Solutions
www.veritext.com

516-608-2400

disrespectful in his conduct. But the pro se participants clearly have made a very significant effort to be helpful and to follow and to abide by the rules as I explained them, and I greatly appreciate the fact that they did so.

The primary issue before me in this hearing is the Debtors' request for a final approval of their Disclosure Statement and confirmation of their proposed Plan of Reorganization. The plan, as I said, generally speaking provides for a sale of customer accounts to Binance.US, although accountholders can elect not to become customers of Binance.US. The plan also includes a backup option in the event that the proposed deal with Binance.US does not close or otherwise has stopped from being completed.

The Debtors have argued that the proposed deal with Binance.US -- by the way, if I inadvertently say "Binance", I mean "Binance.US" whenever I make my comments here -- that the proposed deal with Binance.US will maximize the ability to make distributions to accountholders in the form of cryptocurrencies rather than cash. This may have tax benefits to the accountholders, although the tax issues apparently are not completely clear, and nobody has presented evidence to me or made legal submissions to me about the tax issues or tax benefits.

The Debtors have also argued that the proposed deal with Binance.US would permit more cryptocurrencies to

212-267-6868

Veritext Legal Solutions
www.veritext.com

516-608-2400

Binance.US currently operates in a regulatory environment that can best be described as highly uncertain. There are firms that operate as cryptocurrency brokers or exchanges and have done so for several years without being subject to clearer and well-defined regulatory requirements. The regulators themselves cannot seem to agree as to whether cryptocurrencies are commodities, they may be subject to regulation by the CFTC, or whether they are securities that are subject to securities laws, or neither, or may in some cases one or the other, or even necessarily on what criteria should be applied in making a decision.

This uncertainty has persisted despite the fact that the cryptocurrency exchanges have been around for a number of years. The current regulatory environment can only be characterized as uncertain, but the future regulatory environment can only be characterized as, in my mind, virtually unknowable. There have been differing proposals in congress to adopt different types of regulatory regimes for cryptocurrency trading.

Meanwhile, the SEC has filed some actions against particular firms and with regard to particular cryptocurrencies, and those actions suggest that perhaps a wider regulatory assault may be forthcoming. The CFTC seems to have announced some positions that may be at odds with the SEC's views. But just how this will all sort itself

212-267-6868

Veritext Legal Solutions
www.veritext.com

516-608-2400

be distributed in-kind than any of the available alternatives would provide. They have further argued that the Binance.US deal would limit the amounts of cryptocurrency sales that the Debtors would have to make, and thereby would reduce the extent to which sales by the Debtors might adversely affect market prices, particularly in the case of cryptocurrencies where normal trading volumes are not so robust as others.

The objections have focused on many things. Some objections have raised relatively common bankruptcy issues, such as objections to some of the releases that the Debtors have proposed. Other objections are focused more specifically on regulatory issues or on the wisdom of potential dealings with Binance.US.

Let me say at the outset and as background to my rulings that I cannot think of another case I have had that comes before me in quite a setting like this one does. I'm aware that there are some people who question the very concept of cryptocurrencies and the whole idea of cryptocurrency investment and trading. I note that no party in this case has taken such a position, and it's not for me to decide whether any particular investments are good ideas or not. But it certainly provides an unusual backdrop to this bankruptcy case.

I also am aware that Voyager operated and out, how the pending actions relating to cryptocurrencies will be decided, and just what future regulatory actions might involve, or how they will affect individual firms or the industry as a whole is very much unclear.

Complicating things further is the fact that Voyager operated and Binance.US continues to operate in an industry that has been the subject of some severe financial shocks over the past year. Many firms were adversely affected by the loan defaults of Three Arrows, including Voyager itself. The Three Arrows' defaults led to several bankruptcy filings across the country. The more recent and sudden collapse of FTX has reverberated even more throughout the industry and has also led to some financial problems at other firms.

Perhaps most worrisome for me are revelations of apparent misbehavior and misuse of customer assets at some firms. I certainly do not have all of the evidence as to what happened at FTX, and we will all have to wait until judgments can be entered in that case before we are sure exactly what happened. However, public statements by the persons currently handling the bankruptcy of FTX have so far indicated that there was an enormous disparity between the way that FTX actually operated and the way it actually used customer assets as opposed to what it had represented to its customers.

212-267-6868

Veritext Legal Solutions

516-608-2400

Page 42

1 I'm also aware of the examiner's report about the 2 business conducted at Celsius and how the actual behavior
3 and custody of customer assets at that firm may have 4 differed from public statements as to how customer assets
5 were being treated and custodied. Once again, I certainly 6 do not have all the evidence as to what actually happened in 7 Celsius, and we'll have to see what further developments
8 there are in that case. But the examiner's report certainly 9 raised the prospect of a disparity during the way that 10 particular firm actually operated and the representations it
11 made to its customers about how assets were handled.

12 Perhaps to some degree, those kinds of events and 13 the fact that regulatory regimes have been so unclear go
14 hand in hand with each other. That I don't know for sure.
15 In this particular case, some accountholders and some other
16 parties have referred me to newspapers, or magazine
17 articles, or to a recent letter sent by a group of U.S.
18 senators all raising questions and accusations about how 19 Binance.US does business and how its affiliated companies do 20 business.

21 Despite the questions that have been raised in 22 this regard, however, I have to note that I have been 23 offered absolutely no, I mean literally zero, no actual 24 admissible evidence that would support an accusation that 25 Binance.US is misusing customer assets or is engaged in any

Page 44

1 that the VTX token was one as to which some unspecified
2 issue might exist.

3 The SEC also suggested that the Debtors should be 4 required to prove that Binance.US is not operating as a
5 securities broker without registering as such. Once again,
6 the SEC did not actually take the position that Binance.US
7 is operating as an unregistered and unlicensed securities
8 broker. Instead, it just suggested that the Debtors had the 9 burden to prove the negative without offering any evidence
10 or even any reasons to think that Binance.US actually was 11 doing anything for which it required further SEC
12 registrations.

13 I questioned the SEC about these objections at the 14 outset of this hearing, and to some extent I rebuked the SEC
15 attorneys for the vagueness of their submission, although in 16 fairness to them, I think they were just the messengers and 17 not necessarily the architects of the message that they were 18 sent to deliver to me. Although the SEC contended that the 19 Debtors somehow how to prove a negative, that is that the 20 Debtors were not violating securities laws and that 21 Binance.US is not violating registration requirements for 22 brokers.

23 Once again, the SEC confirmed that it was not
24 affirmatively contending that the Debtors were doing
25 anything wrong, nor that Binance.US was doing anything

212-267-6868

1 misbehavior of any kind at all. Instead, I am in the 2 absolute unenviable position of having to make a ruling
3 about the proposed transaction in the face of hearsay
4 accusations of potential wrongdoing in an industry where 5 other firms have apparently engaged in real wrongdoing.

6 Knowing that many people are raising questions,
7 and certainly with no desire to put anybody's futures at 8 stake, but with little or more accurately no evidence as to 9 whether there was any good basis at all for any of the 10 questions that have been raised about Binance.US. So with 11 those observations to put things into context, let me turn
12 to some of the actual objections that have been filed.

13 The first one that I will address is the objection
14 filed by the Securities and Exchange Commission. The SEC
15 has argued in its written objection that the Debtors cannot 16 prove the feasibility of their proposed plan for two 17 reasons. First, the SEC argued that in its view the Debtors
18 had the burden to prove that the Debtors' own purchases and 19 sales of cryptocurrencies would not constitute illegal
20 purchases and sales of securities.

21 The objection did not take the position that any 22 particular cryptocurrencies are securities or otherwise
23 explain how or why the Debtors' activities, including their 24 rebalancing activities, might be illegal, although their 25 written objection did contain a vague footnote suggesting

212-267-6868

1 wrong. Nor did the SEC have any guidance to offer to any of 2 us to suggest what it was that the Debtors allegedly were 3 supposed to prove with respect to these issues, or how the 4 Debtors could possibly prove what the SEC wanted them to 5 prove without receiving any explanation at all from the SEC
6 and suggest why the Debtors' activities or Binance.US'
7 operations might raise legal issues.

8 Near the end of the hearing on Friday, the SEC
9 asked to provide clarification of the SEC's legal position.
10 It initially asked if it could state its position only to me
11 on an in-camera basis, but I denied that request and ruled
12 that, to the extent the SEC wanted to say something further
13 about its objection, it ought to be stated in the public
14 forum where all interested parties could hear and understand
15 the SEC's position.

16 The SEC representatives then said the following on 17 the record. First, we were told that the SEC staff believes 18 that the VGX token has aspects of a security, but that the 19 Commission itself has not taken any position on that 20 subject. Second, we were told that the SEC staff believes
21 that Binance.US is operating as a securities exchange
22 without registering as such. Once again, the Commission
23 itself has not taken any position on that subject.

24 Although the SEC offered these clarifications as 25 to what the SEC staff apparently believes, it emphasized

212-267-6868

Veritext Legal Solutions
www.veritext.com

516-608-2400

that only the Commission may take a formal position on behalf of the SEC, and that the views of the staff did not necessarily constitute or certainly did not constitute the official views of the SEC. Furthermore, although the SEC had obtained clearance to reveal the staff's contentions, the SEC confirmed that it was not authorized and did not intend to provide any evidence on these issues or even any further explanation as to the bases for whatever beliefs the SEC staff may have.

So to the extent that the SEC nevertheless contends that these issues are bars to the confirmation of the Debtors' plan, I am forced to disagree. In the first place, I reject the contention that the Court and the Debtors somehow were supposed to figure out for themselves just what it is that the SEC might argue about the VGX token, or about particular activities in which Binance.US might be engaged, as well as the reasons why those matters might have raised securities issues, and then somehow to offer evidence and legal argument to rebut them.

This bankruptcy case has been pending since July 2022. Customers and Creditors have been denied access to their assets for many months, and they deserve to have a resolution of this case. Bankruptcy cases also are very expensive, and each and every delay means that administrative expenses eat away at the recoveries that

Similarly, the SEC did not explain why it thought Binance.US might be operating as a securities broker. I do not know, for example, if there is one specific cryptocurrency token that may have been traded by Binance.US and that the SEC thinks was a security for which the relevant remedy might simply be to stop trading in that token, or whether the SEC has different theories. If we were to try to address the issues, we would have to guess just what the issues were and would not even have any idea if we were even discussing the right points.

I understand and appreciate that the SEC is limited in what it can say about potential enforcement actions, but I cannot conclude from this record that an enforcement action is even likely, let alone whether it is meritorious, or even the bases for any of the issues that an enforcement action might raise.

I also cannot determine, even if an action were meritorious, whether it would affect the transactions that I am being asked to approve. On this very point, for example, I asked the SEC's counsel at the outset of this hearing to explain what the consequences would be if Binance.US were to be found to have been acting as a non-registered broker/dealer. I asked if that would just mean that Binance.US might have to stop certain activities while it pursued a license, or if it would be that Binance.US would Creditors may eventually receive.

I have a proposed Plan of Reorganization in front of me, and I have an obligation to make a ruling now as to whether it can be confirmed. I cannot simply put the entire case in an indeterminate and expensive deep freeze while regulators figure out whether they do or do not think there is any problem with the transactions that are being proposed.

As I said at the outset of the hearing, if a regulator believes there is a legal issue with respect to something that is proposed in front of me, I am more than anxious to hear an explanation and to consider that issue. I have no desire to approve anything that raises legal issues. But I expect a regulator not only to tell me that it has an actual objection if there is a legal issue, but also to tell me what the issue is and why it is an issue, that the other parties may address it and so that I may make a proper and well-considered ruling on the point.

Here, I don't know how any party could possibly be expected to address the SEC's comments with the limited guidance that the SEC has provided. The SEC has not explained by the VGX token in its mind should be regarded as a security or what aspects of a security it thinks it has leaving me only to guess as to what the arguments might have been.

have to shut down all of its activities. The SEC said it could not answer the question.

Notwithstanding that statement, the SEC took the position yesterday that the Debtor's disclosure statement allegedly was deficient because it did not more specifically predict and describe what the results of a regulatory action against Binance.US might be. As I said yesterday, I do not know how the Debtors could've been expected to be more specific about that question when the SEC itself told me it could not answer the question.

In addition, the SEC's argument on these points has all been phrased in terms of whether the Debtors can prove the feasibility of their proposed plan. Feasibility in bankruptcy parlance is a shorthand reference to the provisions of Section 1129(a)(11) of the Bankruptcy Code, which states that in order to confirm a plan, a court must find that the confirmation "is not likely to be followed by the liquidation or the need for further financial reorganization of the Debtor or any successor to the Debtor under the plan unless such liquidation or reorganization is proposed in the plan."

Here the only issues the SEC has raised are, A, whether one specific token, VGX's, is a security; and B, whether Binance.US needs to register as a securities broker. There is no reason why these issues affect feasibility of the kind that is discussed in Section 1129(a)(11). As I've said, the SEC has been aware that the VGX token for some time it has not even reached a conclusion of its own as to whether it is a security, let alone taken any action to stop trading in the token.

In addition, even if there are problems with the sale or distribution of VGX, there's no reason why, to my knowledge, why that should interfere or impede or affect the remainder of what the Debtors are proposing. Similarly, even if Binance.US were to be told to stop its business entirely, the Debtors' plan in this case provides that what the parties have called a toggle option under which the Binance.US deal could be stopped and the Debtors would instead make distributions to the extent they could without using Binance.US.

There would have to be some practical changes as a result, and the recoveries that accountholders would receive would likely diminish, but the plan itself includes the toggle option. So there's no reason to think that the issues that the SEC has raised as to Binance.US would mean that the plan couldn't proceed or that it would need a further liquidation or reorganization of the kind that is not already contemplated by the plan. For that reason, the issues raised by the SEC do not really go to the feasibility of the plan as that term is used in Section 1129(a)(11) of or any other party that could support a contention that Voyager is purchasing or selling any token that should be considered to be an unregistered security, or that Binance.US is engaged in any activity for which it is required to register as a broker dealer.

I therefore reject and overrule any contention that the transactions contemplated by the plan would be illegal, and any suggestion that for regulatory reasons the Debtors would be unable to complete their proposed liquidation. The Debtors have offered evidence that Binance.US has the operational and financial capability to perform its obligations and have not been given any evidence to suggest that Binance.US could not legally perform those obligations.

For similar reasons, I reject the contentions by the SEC and others to the effect that the Debtors allegedly did not offer sufficient disclosure about potential regulatory risks. The disclosure statement that was distributed included specific disclosures about regulatory issues faced in so-called unsupported jurisdictions where Binance.US does not have certain regulatory licenses.

It also stated that the Debtors' business is subject to an extensive and highly evolving regulatory landscape that involves significant uncertainties, that it is possible that governmental bodies might disagree as to the Bankruptcy Code.

I appreciate that the SEC made some effort to tell me something about what the staff is thinking, but in the end it did not support the highly conditional objection that the SEC filed. This is a court. One of the requirements for confirmation of plan is that the plan has been proposed in good faith and not by any means forbidden by law. Obviously, I have no intention of approving anything that is illegal. As I said during the hearing, and I think I may be repeating myself now, I expect that if a regulator believes that what is being proposed in a plan would violate any applicable statute or regulation, that the regulator will bring that to my attention so the issue can be resolved.

The SEC and all other government agencies have had a full and fair opportunity to object here if they believe that the rebalancing transactions that are being proposed or the distributions of cryptocurrencies that are being contemplated are illegal in any way. Or if they're in violative of any statute, rule or regulation, they have not actually made any objection on those grounds. They have only vaguely hinted at issues that have not even been described in a manner that would permit the Court or the parties to address them.

I have to make decisions based on actual admissible evidence. I have no evidence here from the SEC whether particular laws or regulations are applicable to the Debtors or to the contemplated transactions, that the Debtors could not predict whether regulators would take the position that additional regulatory approvals are required for the completion of the contemplated transactions, and could not guarantee that there would not be regulatory issues.

The disclosure statement also stated generally that consummation of the transactions might depend on obtaining approvals of some governmental units, and that failure to obtain those approvals could prevent or impose limitations or restrictions on the consummation of the transactions contemplated by the plan.

Voyager also disclosed all of the regulatory inquiries it had received from federal and state authorities, and nobody has contended to the contrary. Although I note that none of those inquiries related to the two issues that the SEC said that its staff had concerns about. The disclosure statement disclosed a subpoena from the SEC that Voyager had received in January 2022 relating to the Voyager rewards program and apparently to questions about whether Voyager needed to register as an investment company.

The disclosure statement revealed that the SEC had made a follow-up request for some financial statement

1 information and other internal documentation in July 2022,
2 and that the CFTC had made inquiries and sent a subpoena in 3 August and September 2022. And other state and federal 4 inquiries are also described.

5 I do not believe that the disclosure statement,
6 which was circulated in January 2023, needed to be any more
7 specific than that, than what it said, particularly with 8 regard to issues that SEC itself did not identify until 9 March 2023, and that the SEC itself has not been able to 10 explain in anything other than an extremely conclusory form.

11 A number of questions have also been raised about 12 the extent to which accountholders would be protected if 13 they were to become customers of Binance.US. These 14 objections have been posed by the SEC, the Office of the 15 United States Trustee, the State of Texas, and the State of 16 New York. Nobody suggests that the Debtors had information
17 that they were hiding from anyone or that the Debtors had 18 and failed to disclose. Nobody has contended that the 19 Debtors made any misrepresentations as to the Debtors' own
20 conclusions about Binance.US.

21 Instead, the objecting parties have suggested that 22 the Debtors should have obtained or should obtain different 23 or more complete or better assurances from Binance.US as to 24 how it handles and will handle customer assets, and then 25 have argued that the prior disclosures supposedly were

1 mean, in effect, that the Debtors would have to stop their 2 due diligence inquiries once a disclosure statement had been 3 approved for fear that the prior disclosures would 4 immediately be rendered deficient and that the entire 5 expensive process would have to start over again to bring
6 everything forward to what the Debtors had more recently
7 discovered. That would be an absurd result.

8 I do not find anything deficient in what the 9 disclosure statement actually said. First, the disclosure
10 statement revealed that cryptocurrencies would be 11 transferred to Binance.US only as and when they were to be 12 distributed to customers, and that until such time as the 13 distributions were completed, Binance.US would receive and 14 hold the cryptocurrencies "solely in a custodial capacity in 15 trust and solely for the benefit of accountholders who each 16 open an account on the Binance.US platform."

17 Second, Pages 34 to 36 of the disclosure statement
18 revealed that the Debtors had sought and obtained various 19 assurances from Binance.US, including that Binance.US had 20 the financial resources to complete the proposed
21 transaction, that Binance.US maintains 100 percent reserves
22 for its customers' digital assets, and had substantial
23 capital remaining even if all customers were to withdraw all 24 of their digital assets, that Binance.US does not lend any 25 of its customers' assets or offer margin products on its

1 inadequate because they did not already anticipate or 2 include the results of these additional discussions or 3 assurances that the objecting parties think the Debtors
4 should obtain.

5 Although these objections have been framed as 6 complaints about the disclosures that were included in the 7 disclosure statement, I do not believe that is an accurate
8 way to characterize them. As I said during the hearing, it
9 is more accurate to say that these are substantive questions
10 masquerading as disclosure issues. They are substantive 11 complaints about what the Debtors have done or should be 12 doing to assure themselves of a lack of problems before the 13 transaction closes rather than proper objections to the 14 disclosures that the Debtors already made.

15 The Debtors have made clear that their due
16 diligence as to Binance.US does business is a constant
17 ongoing project, and that the Debtors will continue to ask 18 questions and to seek assurances as issues are raised. We 19 would all be horrified if the Debtors did not do so. It is 20 simply wrong for various parties to suggest that the January 21 23, 2023 disclosure statement was somehow inadequate because 22 it did not describe all of the follow-up conversations that 23 had not yet taken place, or all of the follow-up assurances 24 that had not yet been received by the Debtors.

25 If I were to impose such a standard, it would

1 platform, that customer assets transferred to Binance.US
2 would be held by Binance.US pursuant to its standard digital
3 asset wallet infrastructure, which is stored on Amazon Web
4 Services servers located in Northern Virginia and Tokyo, and 5 that Binance.US has various security protocols in place to 6 ensure the safe storage of customer assets, and that those 7 security protocols have achieved various third-party expert
8 certifications attesting to their compliance with industry
9 standards.

10 During the hearing, the Debtors also described 11 other requests for information that they had made and other 12 assurances they had sought. That included testimony that 13 Binance.US had been asked to provide and had provided a 14 sworn statement as to certain of its business practices. At 15 my request, the Debtors obtained the consent of Binance.US
16 to offer that sworn certificate as evidence of the diligence
17 the Debtors had conducted and as evidence of the bases for 18 the conclusions the Debtors had reached.

19 The certificate was admitted into evidence and 20 filed on the docket so that all parties could see it. It is 21 dated February 28, 2023, and it states that Binance.US holds 22 digital assets deposited by its customers solely in a 23 custodial capacity and on a one-to-one reserve basis, that 24 Binance.US segregates the customer assets from the company's 25 digital assets on its general ledger, that only employees of 1 Binance.US are able to move or withdraw customer assets,

2 that Binance.US does not lend or rehypothecate customer
3 assets, and that Binance.US maintains security protocols and 4 procedures that are reviewed by independent parties, and 5 that comply with various applicable standards.

6 This evidence does not satisfy everyone. It's 7 apparent that there are some objectors who are worried about 8 news reports and who would prefer to have nothing to do with 9 Binance.US. During cross-examination, more than a few
10 objectors pointed out that FTX had also made representations
11 to the Debtors, and that those statements turned out to be 12 false. Though in fairness, the witnesses have testified
13 that they have ramped up their investigations and increased 14 the information and assurances that they have sought from 15 Binance.US in light of what happened with FTX.

16 I do not mean to cast dispersions on Binance.US
17 when I say this, but it is of course true that in the end we 18 can never be 100 percent sure that a representation is true
19 and correct even when made under oath. At the same time, 20 however, we do not usually presume that people are lying and 21 we certainly do not usually presume that buyers are 22 dishonest, particularly absence of any evidence suggesting 23 that they actually are.

24 My role as the bankruptcy judge is, in the first
25 instance here, to determine whether the proposed plan

1 (Recess)

2 THE COURT: Please be seated. All right. I had
3 just explained why I believe that the evidence requires me
4 to conclude that the Debtors are exercising reasonable
5 business judgement in electing to proceed with the 6 transaction.

7 That does not mean that I thought that every 8 detail of the proposed transaction was necessary or even 9 appropriate. During the course of the hearing, I asked the 10 Debtors and Binance U.S. to consider certain changes to the 11 terms of their proposed arrangement that I believed would 12 not affect the primary business terms but that would help to 13 address other concerns and questions that had been raised.

14 First, after our hearing in January, the Binance
15 U.S. deal was clarified to say, and my order entered in 16 January clearly says that from the time when assets are 17 transferred to Binance U.S. until the time they are 18 distributed to accountholders, Binance U.S. would be acting 19 as a distribution agent for Voyager. Accordingly, during 20 that time, Binance U.S. would only be a nominal owner of the 21 assets. They would not have any beneficial interest in the 22 assets during that distribution period, and instead, the 23 assets would be held strictly in trust for and in a custody
24 arrangement for either the debtors or the accountholders
25 respectively. Binance U.S. has also previously confirmed

1 complies with the provisions of the bankruptcy code itself.
2 As to the business details and the business wisdom of the 3 arrangement, and as to the selection of the proposed 4 purchaser, my role is more limited. So long as the 5 provisions of the plan comply with the bankruptcy code
6 requirements, my authority is limited to a determination of 7 whether the Debtor's desire to do this particular
8 transaction is within the scope of the Debtors' reasonable
9 business judgment. See In re Borders Group, Inc., 453 B.R.
10 477, 482 (Bankr. S.D.N.Y. 2011) and cases cited therein.

11 Furthermore, as I've said several times, in 12 considering that issue, I am required to make decisions
13 based on the evidence that is submitted to me. I understand 14 the point of view of the skeptics here. Given what has 15 happened in this industry, I cannot help but be worried
16 myself about how any firm might handle customer assets in 17 this business. But the plan fact of the matter is that I
18 have been given absolutely no admissible evidence, literally
19 none, that would support a conclusion that Binance.US will 20 misuse customer assets or that it cannot be trusted. The 21 evidence that is actually before me requires me to conclude 22 that the Debtors are exercising reasonable business judgment
23 in electing to proceed with the transaction.

24 I'm going to continue in a moment, but we're going
25 to take a brief break while I give my throat a brief rest.

1 that customers may immediately withdraw assets from Binance
2 U.S. if they choose to do so.

3 During the hearing, I suggested that it might make
4 sense if what I have referred to as the distribution period,
5 the period during which Binance is deemed to have no
6 beneficial interest in the assets, were to continue for some 7 time after a customer's account is credited so that 8 customers who wanted to make immediate withdrawals could do
9 so without sacrificing any of the protections that the 10 provisions of the order might provide to them in that 11 regard.

12 Binance U.S. has not only agreed to that suggested 13 change, I think the parties have gone further. They have 14 agreed with the Debtor to include language in the plan
15 documents to the effect that the assets transferred to 16 Binance by Voyager, if I'm reading it correct, will always 17 be held in strict trust and in custody for customers and 18 that Binance will not have beneficial interest of those 19 assets. That language now appears in Article 4, Section C
20 of the plan.

21 Second, I asked that the parties consider a change
22 to the proposed treatment of accountholders who live in what 23 the parties have called unsupported jurisdictions, which are 24 four states in which Binance does not have the licenses
25 necessary to distribute cryptocurrencies to customers. I noted that under the parties' contract, customers in other states who do not become customers of Binance U.S. or who would just prefer cash distributions for other reasons will be given cash distributions at the end of a three-month period. I understand and will address below the issues that have been raised regarding the fact that customers in most states will be able to receive distributions in the form of cryptocurrencies whereas customers in the unsupported jurisdictions will have to wait six months to see if Binance U.S. can obtain the needed approvals and will only be able to get cash distributions if Binance U.S. cannot get such approvals.

The question that I raised with the parties, however, is as to accountholders in unsupported jurisdictions who do not want to become Binance U.S. customers and who would prefer to take a cash distribution. Customers in most states can get -- excuse me. Under the original proposal, customers in most states could get such cash distributions after three months. And so I raised the question as to why customers in unsupported jurisdictions should not have that same opportunity. I suggested that it could be made available by giving customers a simple opt-out form by which they could elect to take cash distributions and thereby would be entitled to them at the completion of the same three-month period. Binance U.S. agreed to this contact information in the first instance with the limitation of the transfer of other more sensitive information about bank accounts, social security numbers, et cetera, to such time as a particular customer actually elects to be a Binance U.S. customer.

And in response to my concerns, the parties have tentatively agreed that customers will have a two-week opt-out period in which time they would be able to notify the parties and to opt out of any transfer of any selfies or uploaded IDs or bank statements or bank account information, thereby giving them the chance to prevent the transfer of that information to Binance.

In my mind, there's still one open issue, which is as to the transfer of social security numbers and whether customers within that same two-week opt-out period should have the right to prevent the transfer of their social security numbers automatically to Binance U.S.

Binance U.S. has suggested to me that somehow this information is important to making it -- putting Binance U.S. into a position where it could readily open a customer account if a customer wishes to do so. But I don't really understand if Binance has all the other information just how hard it would be for a customer at that time simply to enter a social security number. Yes.

MR. GOLDBERG: Your Honor, I can provide proposed change and the change has been incorporated in the plan documents.

Third, I know that the parties' agreement includes provisions requiring the transfer of customer data from Voyager to Binance U.S. Voyager has argued that its customer arrangements permit the transfer of that data. No party has offered me any contrary evidence or contention.

Under the parties' agreement as I understand it, the only customer data that has been transferred so far is as to customers who have already made elections to be customers of Binance U.S. However, if there is an approval of the transaction, there would be a wholesale transfer to Binance U.S. of all remaining customer data, which would mean that Binance U.S. would receive all customer data for all Voyager customers even if those customers elect not to do business with Binance U.S.

I asked whether these terms could be modified to provide further protections with regard to the sensitive customer information of customers who might choose not to be Binance customers and who may not wish Binance U.S. to have their information.

I recognize that one of the things that Binance U.S. is buying here is the right to market itself to Voyager's customers. I asked, however, whether the transfer of customer data to Binance could be limited to customer additional information on this point now or at any other time.

THE COURT: Go ahead.

MR. GOLDBERG: Thank you, Your Honor. I apologize for interrupting, but I thought this was a good time.

For the record, Adam Goldberg of Latham & Watkins on behalf of Binance U.S.

I've consulted with my client on this issue and can provide additional details of why the social security numbers are of great value to this transaction.

There are essentially two levels of KYC checks pursuant to the FinCEN CIP rule, that is the Financial Crimes Enforcement Network, which is a Bureau of the Department of Treasury Customer Identification Program.

The first level is basic KYC, and that requires a name, date of birth, address and social security number. The second is advanced. And that requires selfies, identification documents, and other document uploads. Binance U.S. has agreed to forego the transfer of the information that goes to the advanced KYC, which is of higher long-term value, but is prepared to do so based on Your Honor's comments.

The social security networks allow Binance U.S. to clear all of Voyager's customers through the basic level one KYC at no additional cost. And that KYC clearance would

212-267-6868

Veritext Legal Solutions
www.veritext.com

516-608-2400

Page 66

1 remain in place forever, indefinitely, under the current
2 regulations.

3 If we don't have that information, the KYC data
4 that would be otherwise acquired, not including social 5 security numbers as Your Honor has requested, that would 6 become stale and would eventually require, should a customer
7 later elect to join the Binance U.S. platform, for example
8 at a time of a bull run in the crypto markets and they 9 change their mind, the cost at present could be up to $20
10 per customer. And recall there are a million customers in 11 this case, perhaps without coincidence, of the alignment of 12 those figures.

13 So without the social security numbers, Binance
14 U.S. would essentially be acquiring a mailing list for 15 customer marketing, which is of far inferior value relative
16 to the ability to pre-clear for KYC. So we respectfully
17 submit, Your Honor, that the transfer of social security
18 numbers is permitted under the policy and that that transfer
19 is supported by the Debtor's business judgement, the value
20 to the estate, and the overwhelming creditor vote.

21 THE COURT: Thank you. That's very helpful. But 22 I think you said at an earlier time during the hearing that 23 if a customer has a Binance account and closes it, that the 24 customer can elect to have Binance wipe out all of the data
25 it has for that customer. Is that right?

212-267-6868

Veritext Legal Solutions
www.veritext.com

516-608-2400

1 that, they are welcome to do so. And that's the business
2 agreement that was reached among the parties.

3 So they could join the platform, never buy or sell
4 anything, and then cancel out and tell you to get rid of the 5 information.

6 MR. GOLDBERG: That's right, Your Honor.

7 THE COURT: All right. Thanks. I appreciate the 8 explanation.

9 MR. GOLDBERG: Thank you.

10 THE COURT: All right. To get back to my 11 decision, I have raised issues about the information that 12 would be transferred and as to abilities of any customers to 13 control the information that's been transferred. Binance
14 U.S. has agreed that there will be a two-week period during 15 which customers can opt out of the transfer of selfies,
16 uploaded IDs, bank statements, and bank account information.
17 I have raised the question about the transfer of social 18 security numbers and Binance has now given me a better
19 explanation of why it wants that information.

20 I have a lingering concern that, as I just said to 21 counsel, the testimony is that customers who actually open
22 Binance accounts can close them immediately and can 23 immediately tell Binance to dispose of all the information
24 that Binance has obtained about them, whereas customers who 25 don't open accounts can only exercise that right if they

212-267-6868

Veritext Legal Solutions
www.veritext.com

516-608-2400

Page 67

1 MR. GOLDBERG: Yes. That's right, Your Honor.
2 There are a few requirements, such as that there is no
3 pending trades on the account. But yes, the customer can 4 delete their account.

5 THE COURT: So what about for people who haven't
6 become Binance customers? Do they have an equivalent point
7 at which they can ask you to wipe out the information that 8 you have on them?

9 MR. GOLDBERG: They would have to -- under the 10 current system, they would have to join, create an account,
11 and then they could delete that account.

12 THE COURT: Seems like an odd step to require
13 people to go through. Is there some point at which -- I 14 understand you want a marketing period. Isn't there some 15 point at which you can say that those people who haven't
16 joined you in six months can have the same option to tell
17 you to delete their information as somebody who had already 18 joined you would have?

19 MR. GOLDBERG: Your Honor, I completely understand
20 your logic here. And it has some resonance. But I think 21 the context of this deal is really from a retail 22 perspective. We want the ability to welcome a customer at 23 any time. And that's the value of this transaction. We 24 want a customer to be able to come into the store and see 25 the platform. And if they want to delete themselves after

Page 69

1 first go through the process of opening account and never
2 even putting anything in it and then giving that same
3 direction to Binance. I'm still not a thousand percent
4 convinced that there isn't some way to give Binance the 5 marketing opportunity it wants here while eventually making
6 it easier for customers to have their data expunged, whether 7 at the end of a six-month period or some other period. And 8 I will leave open the possibility of such a provision in the 9 final order and just ask Binance, since I have only just 10 this very instant raised this question, if it will yet take 11 that additional question from the pestering judge back to 12 its client and find out if there's something we can do.
13 Okay?

14 MR. GOLDBERG: Thank you, Your Honor.

15 THE COURT: By the way, do we have confirmation
16 that we don't have a 5:00 deadline? Because at this pace, I
17 won't even be finished with my decision by then.

18 MR. GOLDBERG: Your Honor, Binance U.S. agrees to 19 your request of 3:00 p.m. tomorrow.

20 THE COURT: Thank you very much. All right.

21 I think that these proposed modifications, subject
22 to answering that one issue that I have just left, clears up
23 many of the objections and issues that came up during the 24 hearing. There are still some other issues that I will now
25 proceed to discuss.

212-267-6868

Veritext Legal Solutions
www.veritext.com

516-608-2400

1 The Office of the United States Trustee raised
 2 some other objections to the disclosure statement. One
 3 objection was their contention that the disclosure statement
 4 was not clear as to who would hold cryptocurrencies and in 5 what capacities. I actually think the disclosure statement
 6 was clear on that point. It said, as I noted above, that 7 cryptocurrencies would only be transferred to Binance U.S.
 8 as and when they would be distributed to account holders,
 9 that until the distributions were complete, Binance U.S.
 10 would only have a nominal and not a beneficial interest in 11 the assets to be transferred, and that all such assets would 12 be held in custody and in trust either for the Debtor's or 13 for the account holders as applicable.

14 I believe that these disclosures were sufficient.
 15 And, as I have described above, the parties have actually 16 agreed to additional language to provide further assurances 17 to customers in this regard.

18 The SEC complained that the Debtors did not 19 disclose or that there are meaningful economic benefits to 20 the Binance U.S. transaction apart from the $20 million that 21 Binance would pay -- Binance U.S. would pay in excess of the 22 cryptocurrencies being transferred. I am going to overrule
 23 this objection.

24 The liquidation analysis that was attached to the 25 disclosure statement included projections as to what

212-267-6868

Veritext Legal Solutions
www.veritext.com

516-608-2400

1 statement was insufficient because it did not make
 2 sufficient disclosures about certain features of the Binance
 3 U.S. terms of use. However, I note that the disclosure
 4 statement contains many direct links to those terms of use
 5 and all of the arguments about provisions that Texas
 6 believes customer should know about are taken directly from 7 the terms of use to which the customers were directed. This 8 is not an argument about actual disclosures and about actual 9 information available to customers so much as it is a 10 contention made in hindsight that the Debtors should have 11 put greater emphasis on particular provisions that Texas at 12 this stage thinks are important and that the Debtor should 13 have highlighted them somehow more prominently in the 14 disclosure statement instead of making available by 15 referring customers to the places where they could be found.

16 I do not find this to be a reason to reject the 17 disclosure statement or a basis on which to decide that the 18 disclosure statement was not adequate and sufficient. I
 19 must note that the State of Texas reviewed the proposed 20 disclosure statement before I gave preliminary approval to 21 it in January 2023 and that the State of Texas filed some 22 objections and comments at that time and that in those 23 objections, Texas did not ask for any further disclosures
 24 about the Binance U.S. terms of use. That just supports my 25 conclusion that this is not really a complaint about

212-267-6868

Veritext Legal Solutions
www.veritext.com

516-608-2400

1 creditors' recoveries would be under the Binance U.S.
 2 proposal, under the alternative toggle proposal, and under a
 3 Chapter 7 liquidation. It stated that for various reasons
 4 that were explained in the footnotes, the Debtors believe
 5 that the Binance proposal would make approximately $90
 6 million more available for distribution, resulting in 7 approximately five percent greater recoveries for creditors
 8 when compared to the toggle option and about a 14 percent
 9 increase when compared to a possible Chapter 7 liquidation.
 10 I think those calculations were sufficient to disclose what 11 the Debtors believed as to the benefits of the Binance U.S.
 12 proposal.

13 Now, during the hearing, there were many questions
 14 about these calculations. The Debtors testified that their 15 current estimates are that the Binance deal will produce
 16 approximately $100 million more in distributable assets than 17 the so-called toggle plan would provide. The Debtors
 18 explained the assumptions that underlie those calculations,
 19 and of course many of them are based on assumptions of what 20 might happen in the market under certain conditions, and 21 therefore they are not guarantees by any means. But I did 22 find the explanations and testimony to be reasonable and 23 credible. And I note that no contrary evidence was 24 presented.

25 The State of Texas contended that the disclosure

212-267-6868

Veritext Legal Solutions
www.veritext.com

516-608-2400

1 something that was material and that had to be disclosed or 2 highlighted so much as it is a kind of belated decision by 3 one party that maybe something could have been given greater 4 emphasis. But if I were to apply that standard to every 5 disclosure statement that I ever see, I'm not sure any of 6 them would ever pass.

7 Texas has also complained that the disclosure
 8 statement allegedly did not disclose the potential effects
 9 that a preference lawsuit by Alameda could have on creditor
 10 recoveries. However, the figures quoted in the objection as 11 to how much recoveries would be affected were taken from 12 Exhibit C to the disclosure statement itself, at Page 198 of 13 140, ECF Document 863.

14 During argument, Texas contended that the 15 information was too hard to find, but I note that the 16 information was added to the disclosure statement after 17 there was discussion of the point in January 2023. And at 18 that time, I approved the addition of the information at 19 exactly the place where it ultimately appears. To my 20 recollection, no party complained at that time that it
 21 should be placed elsewhere.

22 Texas has also complained that the disclosures
 23 about creditors' recoveries -- complained in its written 24 objection, I should say, that the disclosures about 25 creditors' recoveries might suggest that recoveries under

212-267-6868

Veritext Legal Solutions
www.veritext.com

516-608-2400

the plan could be less than they would be in a Chapter 7 liquidation. I don't think Texas is actually continuing to press this objection. But just for completeness in the record, I will describe it and describe the reasons why I think it has been withdrawn.

The problem with the written objection is that it was based on an apples to oranges comparison. More specifically, Texas compared what the plan recoveries would be if Alameda has a very large, $400 million administrative claim against the estate compared to what the Chapter 7 recoveries would be if Alameda does not have such a claim.

The truth, however, is that if Alameda has a large administrative claim, it would have the same claim in both the plan in Chapter 7 liquidation contexts and would have the same proportionate impact on the recoveries in both contexts. So it therefore would not affect the Debtor's conclusion that the plan recoveries will be better than recoveries in Chapter 7 would be.

A number of parties have also objected to the releases that have been proposed in the plan. Some of these objections are based on misconceptions as to exactly how the releases work. Just to be clear, the Debtors have proposed to release some claims that the Debtors themselves otherwise would be able to pursue or that the estate would be able to pursue. Some other parties, Binance U.S. itself for releases here. There is a separate issue regarding the exculpation provisions of the plan that I will discuss in a moment, but there are no non-consensual third-party releases.

There are also challenges to some of the settlements and releases of the Debtor's own claims that are included in the plan. The United States Trustee filed an objection stating that the released party and releasing party definitions should not include the winddown debtors. My understanding is that that change has been made and that this particular objection is moot.

The Debtors have also proposed a settlement of claims against the Debtors' CEO, Mr. Ehrlich, and a former chief financial officer, Mr. Psaropoulos. The Debtors offered evidence that two independent directors had been in charge of the investigation of claims against certain insiders, that the special committee hired outside counsel, the Quinn Emanuel firm, to assist in that investigation, that the special committee had concluded that the only claims against insiders that were worth pursuing were claims against Mr. Ehrlich and Mr. Psaropoulos relating to the Three Arrows loans, that the special committee further concluded that those claims would be subject to various defenses and that the Debtors did not believe and that the directors, excuse me, did not believe that the claims were example, and the Debtor's officers and directors, have agreed to release claims that they might own against the Debtors and a long list of other parties.

In addition, creditors were given the opportunity, and shareholders, to elect to grant releases, or in bankruptcy terms, to opt in to releases if they chose to do so. However, the forms that were sent to creditors made clear that nobody was obligated to opt in and that the choice was strictly voluntary.

Many bankruptcy plans provide and there is case authority for the proposition that an affirmative vote in favor of a plan is itself a consent to the grant of releases that are set forth in the plan. But the plan in this case does not say that. Instead, the plan here provides that no creditor or shareholder has released any claims that are owned by that person or entity unless that person has affirmatively granted such a release by executing the opt-out release form.

I believe that this disposes of the objection filed by the Federal Trade Commission and quote relevant portions of the objections posed by the United States Trustee and by certain customers, including Mr. Newsom and Warren, Mr. Hendershott, Mr. Jones, and Mr. (indiscernible). They objected to the approval of non-consensual third-party releases, but there are no non-consensual third-party slam dunks, that the committee had investigated -- special committee had investigated the officers' resources and that the proposed settlements would provide for payments that represent a significant portion of the officers' available assets, that the Debtors would release other claims against the two officer but would not actually release claims relating to the Three Arrows loans and instead would only agree that any further recoveries on the Debtor's claims as to those loans would come from insurance proceeds and not from the individual assets of the settling defendants.

The Debtors also reserve their rights to undo a transaction by which Voyager allegedly paid as much as $10 million just before its bankruptcy filing for an additional $10 million of director and officer liability coverage.

When considering a settlement such as this, the applicable Second Circuit authority makes clear that my role is to determine whether the Debtors' decision to settle was a reasonable one after considering a number of factors.

In this case, consistent with the applicable caselaw, I have considered the nature of the claims that would have been asserted, the legal defenses that could have been asserted, including the business judgement defense, the testimony about additional defenses that could have been asserted under the terms of certain exculpatory language in the Debtor's bylaws or other governing documents, the benefits of the proposed settlement, testimony that the settlement was the result of arm's length bargaining, the testimony about the size of the settlement payments in relation to the settling parties' resources, the fact that the settlements preserve the Debtor's rights to pursue the Three Arrows claim further, though further recoveries on such claims would be limited to insurance proceeds, the competency and experience of the counsel retained by the special committee, and the support for the settlement by the official committee of unsecured creditors. See Iridium Operating LLC v. Official Committee of Unsecured Creditors (In re Iridium Operating LLC), 478 F.3d 452, 462 (2d Cir. 2007), citations omitted.

I conclude after considering the relevant factors that the settlement with Mr. Ehrlich and Mr. Psaropoulos is a reasonable one and should be approved. I understand that this is very disappointing to some of the pro se parties who have appeared, a number of whom expressed a strong resentment towards the two settling parties and who expressed a strong desire to pursue them more vigorously and to demand a higher percentage of their net worth as a part of any settlement. I sympathize with their frustrations, but the only actual evidence I have on these relevant points is the evidence that I have described. And I am forced to conclude from that evidence that the settlement is in fact a won't allow it.

The plan also proposed to release all of the released parties from any claim of any kind that the Debtors might have against those released parties. And the phrase goes on and on. "Based on or relating to or in any manner arising from in whole or in part the Debtors...their capital structure, the purchase, sale, or rescission of the purchase or sale of any security of the Debtors, the subject matter of or the transactions giving rise to any claim or interest that is treated in the plan, the business or contractual arrangements between any debtor and any released party, the Debtor's out-of-court restructuring efforts, intercompany transactions between or among a debtor and another debtor, or upon any other act or omission, transaction, agreement, event, or other occurrence related to the Debtors taking place on or before the effective date but with an exclusion for actual fraud, willful misconduct, or gross negligence."

The evidence before me, however, did not suggest that the Debtors or the special committee had done any investigation or made any careful consideration of all of the types of claims that would be covered by this sweeping language. I believe Mr. Kirpalani acknowledged that much during oral argument yesterday.

As I said yesterday, this is not a release that is tailored to claims that have actually been renewed and reasonable one.

The releases that the Debtors proposed to give were not limited to the releases to be granted as part of the settlement with Mr. Ehrlich and Mr. Psaropoulos. Instead, the Debtors also proposed to grant broad release of claims that the debtors might have against a number of other parties. The parties who would be the beneficiaries of those releases included the Official Committee of Unsecured Creditors and its members together with a long list of released professionals which appeared to include all of the law firms and other advisors in these cases, plus all "released Voyager employees", a term which was defined as "all directors, officers, and persons employed by each of the Debtors and their affiliates serving in such capacity on or after the petition date but before the effective date."

The scope of the releases that the Debtors proposed to give to such persons was extremely broad. The releases proposed to free all released parties from all cause of action, known or unknown, that the Debtors could have asserted in their own right "or on behalf of the holder of any claim." I really do not understand this latter phrase at all. If it is somehow intended to mean that a third party's own claim would be released on the theory that the Debtor somehow could have asserted it in some kind of representative capacity, it is too vague and excessive and I passed by the Debtor. Instead, it is a release that is deliberately as broad and all-encompassing as possible untethered to any actual review of many of the claims that would be subject to the release.

I therefore do not believe that the evidence before me justifies and warrants the full scope of those releases as they were proposed, that the Debtors have since proposed to modify the terms of the proposed releases so that they will be limited to new defined term language matters that the special committee actually investigated. I may have to look at some of that language myself and will possibly have tweaks to it in the final confirmation order. But in concept, I think that complies with the comments that I made yesterday or my rulings today and that it will be acceptable.

I want to pause to reemphasize a point that came up several times during the hearing. A number of accountholders or shareholders complained during the hearing that they felt that they had been misled as to Voyager's financial condition. If a customer or shareholder believes he or she was misled or that he or she took actions that he or she otherwise would not have taken and suffered damages as a result based on any claim of misrepresentation of Voyager's financial condition, claims based on those injuries would belong to the customers or shareholders.

1 They would not belong to the Debtors or the estate.

2 The Debtor's proposed releases would release
3 claims that the Debtors were injured due to mismanagement or 4 bad decisions by officers or employees. The claims for 5 injuries directly suffered by customers or shareholders,
6 injuries that were not just derivative of injuries directly
7 suffered by the Debtors are not affected.

8 The Office of the United States Trustee also 9 objected to the scope of the proposed exculpation provision
10 in the plan. Broadly speaking, that provision states that 11 certain parties do not have liability for certain 12 transactions and actions that occurred during the course of 13 the bankruptcy case or that will occur in the implementation
14 of a confirmed plan.

15 It is routine that bankruptcy plans contain
16 provisions that state that fiduciaries and other parties do
17 not incur liability by having engaged in transactions that 18 the court has approved and having taken actions that the 19 court has directed them to take.

20 In this case, the version of the plan that was 21 circulated to creditors and other parties-in-interest in 22 January, Docket Number 852, included a proposed exculpation
23 provision that was fairly broad. It stated in relevant part 24 that exculpated parties would have no liability or anything
25 they had done during the course of the bankruptcy cases that

1 (7th Cir. 2008) approving a plan provision that exculpated
2 an entity that funded a plan from liability arising out of 3 or in connection with the confirmation of a plan, except for 4 willful misconduct.

5 In re Granite Broadcasting Corp., 369 B.R. 120,
6 139 (Bankr. S.D.N.Y. 2007), approving an exculpation
7 provision that was limited to conduct during the bankruptcy
8 case and noting that the effect of the provision is to 9 require that any claims in connection with the bankruptcy
10 case be raised in the case and not saved for future
11 litigation.

12 My reasoning in the Aegean case has been approved
13 and adopted by other courts in other cases. See e.g. In re
14 Latam Airlines Group S.A., 2022 Bankr. LEXIS 1725 (Bankr.
15 S.D.N.Y. June 18, 2022), In re In re Murray Metallurgical 16 Coal Holdings, 623 B.R. 444 (Bankr. S.D. Ohio 2021). Such 17 provisions are proper to protect those who are authorized 18 and who may be directed by the confirmation of a plan to 19 carry out the terms of the plan. See In re Ditech Holding 20 Corp., 2021 Bankr. LEXIS 2274 (Bankr. S.D.N.Y. Aug. 20, 21 2021).

22 In this case, the Debtors and the United States
23 Trustee apparently had discussions, and my understanding is 24 that they had tentatively agreed that the proposed
25 exculpation language in the plan and confirmation order

1 -- or anything that they would do in the course of 2 administering the plan and further stated that they would be
3 deemed to be in compliance with all applicable laws
4 regarding not only the solicitation of votes, but the 5 distribution of considerations pursuant to the plan. And 6 therefore, an account of those distributions would not be 7 liable at any time for violation of any applicable law,
8 rule, or regulation governing the solicitation of 9 acceptances or rejections of the plan or such distributions
10 made pursuant to the plan.

11 I have previously issued a decision as to what I 12 regard as the proper scope of an exculpation provision and 13 the legal justifications for it. See In re Aegean Marine 14 Petroleum Network Inc., 599 B.R. 717 (Bankr. S.D.N.Y. 2019).

15 As I noted in Aegean, exculpation provisions are 16 to some extent based on the theory that court-supervised
17 fiduciaries are entitled to qualified immunity for their 18 actions. However, a proper exculpation provision is also a 19 protection for court-supervised and court-approved
20 transactions. As I noted there, parties should not be 21 liable for doing things that a court authorizes them to do
22 and that a court decides are reasonable and appropriate
23 things to do and in many instances that a court may direct
24 them to do. See e.g. Airadigm Communications Inc. v. FFDD
25 (In re Airadigm Communications Inc.), 519 F.3d 640, 655-657

1 would be scaled back to be more in the lines of what I
2 ordered in the Aegean case. This became a much bigger
3 issue, however, when at the end of last week, the Debtors
4 filed revisions to their proposed confirmation order that 5 included a number of paragraphs and additions to paragraphs
6 that could have been read as barring all federal and state
7 governmental entities and any other parties at any time from 8 making any assertion of any kind that the Debtors, Binance
9 U.S. or their representatives had done anything of any kind
10 that violates any federal or state law or regulation.

11 It is not my intention to approve anything of that 12 breadth, and I believe I made that clear as soon as the 13 issue came up yesterday.

14 As we discussed the issue yesterday, however, the 15 parties circled back to the proposed exculpation provisions.
16 And certain governmental entities who previously had taken 17 no position whatsoever and made no objection whatsoever to 18 the original exculpation provisions suddenly took the 19 position that as a matter of law, no exculpation provision 20 of any kind can be granted insofar as it would relate to any 21 federal or state statute or regulation.

22 As somebody put it during argument yesterday, the 23 government's position was that any officers or directors or 24 entities who will implement a confirmed plan just have to 25 take their chances as to whether the government might

1 contend that what they're doing is illegal and even as to 2 whether the government might seek to punish them for doing
3 not only what I had authorized, but what I had directed them
4 to do as a matter of the confirmed plan.

5 Frankly, I think this position by the government
6 is wholly unreasonable and is based on a serious
7 misunderstanding of just what it means when a court confirms 8 a plan of reorganization and the legal reasons for the 9 exculpation.

10 The approval of a plan of reorganization does not
11 just give a debtor an option to proceed with what the plan
12 provides. Instead, Section 1142(a)(1) of the Bankruptcy 13 Code states that "The debtor and any entity organized or to 14 be organized for the purpose of carrying out the plan shall 15 carry out the plan and shall comply with any orders of the 16 court." 11 U.S. Code § 1142(a)(1).

17 Section 1142 thereby imposes an affirmative
18 statutory obligation on the debtors, other entities, and 19 their personnel to do what the plan contemplates. In 20 effect, the confirmation order acts as a court order that 21 the plan be carried out. In this case, confirmation of the 22 plan will require the debtors, Binance U.S. and their 23 respective personnel and representatives, to complete the 24 rebalancing transactions that the plan contemplates and to 25 make the distributions of cryptocurrencies that the plan

1 the government those same people and entities might then be
2 liable for fines, sanctions, damages, or other liabilities
3 just for doing what my confirmation order affirmatively
4 obligates them to do. And the government contends that this 5 daunting prospect of future liability should hang over the 6 heads of the parties and their personnel even though the 7 government itself has had every opportunity to identify any 8 legal issues that are posed by the transactions and is not 9 prepared today to say that there is anything wrongful about 10 what we are currently contemplating.

11 That position is absurd. If the government really 12 wants to litigate the legality of the proposed transaction, 13 it has been free to do so and should have done so during 14 this hearing. Similarly, if the government truly wishes for 15 me to make a decision today as to whether the transactions
16 are or are not legal and to make that binding, then I will 17 do so. But if I have to do that based on the evidence that 18 has actually been offered to me and if I were to have to 19 make that decision today, I would have no choice but to 20 conclude that the transactions are perfectly legal because 21 nobody has offered any evidence to the contrary to me.
22 We're not attempting to do that to the government, although 23 I think maybe the Debtors were attempting to do that by the 24 proposals they made at the end of last week.

25 We're not trying to restrict the SEC or any other

1 contemplates. Once in confirm the plan, they will have no
2 choice but to do so.

3 Here, all of the relevant governmental entities
4 have been on notice of the proposed transactions. They had 5 every opportunity to tell me if they believed that anything
6 contemplated by the plan would violate any applicable
7 statute, rule, or regulation. Four states have taken the 8 position that Binance U.S. cannot open customer accounts in 9 those states without additional approvals, and the plan
10 specifically takes account of those objections and that 11 fact. No other regulators have contended during the 12 confirmation hearing that there is anything illegal in what 13 the plan contemplates. As noted above, the SEC has hinted 14 vaguely that it thinks there might be issues with the 15 Debtor's sales of VGX and/or with some unspecified aspect of 16 Binance U.S.'s business. But the SEC has explicitly stopped 17 short of contending that anything actually is illegal and 18 has repeatedly declined to offer evidence or to take a more
19 firm position on these points.

20 In short, what the government is requesting is 21 that I enter a confirmation order that will have the effect
22 under Section 1142 of the Code of compelling employees,
23 officers, professionals, and entities to do the rebalancing
24 transactions that the plan contemplates and to make the 25 distributions that the plan requires while in the view of

1 governmental entity's ability to argue in the future that 2 the transactions that we are authorizing and directing 3 should be stopped or prevented from going further for 4 regulatory reasons of any kind.

5 However, it is entirely appropriate that I ensure 6 that in the meantime, that the people and entities who will 7 be directed and required by my confirmation order to 8 complete the transactions contemplated by the plan will not 9 themselves face liability for having already done things
10 that I required them to do and that the government elected 11 not to challenge at the time that requirement was imposed.

12 I do agree that a modification of the original
13 exculpation provision is appropriate, and I am prepared to 14 hold that the exculpation provision should be modified to 15 say something along the lines of the following, recognizing 16 that there will be some inevitable further wordsmithing and 17 that the proposed order will reflect that wordsmithing.
18 What I have in mind is language to the following effect.

19 To the fullest extent permissible under applicable
20 law and without affecting or limiting either the debtor
21 release or the third-party release and except as otherwise
22 specified in the plan, no exculpated party shall have or 23 incur and each exculpated party is hereby exculpated from 24 any liability for damages based on the negotiation,
25 execution, and implementation of any transactions approved

1 by the Bankruptcy Court. That's the standard part of the 2 language that essentially just says that if you have pursued
3 a transaction that I have approved, you can't be sued later
4 by somebody saying it was unreasonable. Any claims about 5 the reasonableness of the transaction should have been made
6 to me.

7 The proposed language would continue, in addition,
8 the plan contemplates certain rebalancing transactions and 9 the completion of distributions of cryptocurrencies to 10 creditors. The exculpated party shall have no liability for 11 and are exculpated from any claim for fines, penalties, 12 damages, or other liabilities based on their execution and 13 completion of the rebalancing transaction and the 14 distributions of cryptocurrencies to creditors in the manner
15 provided in the plan.

16 For the avoidance of doubt, the foregoing
17 paragraph reflects the fact that the confirmation of the 18 plan requires the exculpated parties to engage in certain 19 conduct and the fact that no regulatory authority has taken 20 the position during the confirmation hearing that such 21 conduct actually would violate applicable laws or 22 regulations. Nothing in this provision shall limit in any 23 way the powers of any governmental unit to contend that any 24 rebalancing transaction should be stopped or prevented or 25 that any other action contemplated by the plan should be

1 I think most of the arguments that the government
2 has made in that regard are complete red herrings. They 3 pose reasons and explanations and legal justifications for 4 what I am doing that are absolutely not the actual legal 5 justifications for what I am doing and then rebut those 6 irrelevant purported legal justifications.

7 The actual authorities on which I have relied,
8 including my own Aegean decision and the decisions that I
9 cited in there are not even discussed in the objections and 10 supplemental submissions that the government authorities
11 made to me.

12 I am not barring the government from trying to 13 stop transactions from occurring. I am not barring any 14 regulatory contention at all. I am simply saying that when 15 the government has declined to argue that the rebalancing
16 transaction that the plan contemplates are legal and/or the 17 government has declined to argue that the distributions of 18 cryptocurrencies to creditors that the plan contemplates,
19 either through Binance, or by Voyager if the so-called 20 toggle plan is pursued, are illegal in any way, that 21 individuals who entities who upon confirmation will be 22 required to engage in those activities are entitled to know
23 that I am not thereby sentencing them to an ex post facto 24 contention or finding that they have unknowingly and 25 unwittingly and involuntarily incurred statutory or

1 enjoined or prevented from proceeding further, nor does
2 anything in this provision limit the enforcement of any 3 future regulatory or court order that requires that such 4 activities either cease or be modified, nor does anything
5 limit the penalties that might be applicable if such a
6 future regulatory order is issued and violated. Similarly,
7 nothing herein shall limit the authority of the committee on 8 foreign investment of the United States to bar any of the 9 contemplated transactions, nor does anything in this 10 provision alter the terms of the plan regarding the 11 compliance of the purchaser with applicable laws in the 12 unsupported jurisdictions before distributions of 13 cryptocurrencies occur in those unsupported jurisdictions.

14 This morning when this language was discussed,
15 somebody asked if we could add a typical exclusion for 16 liabilities that reflect actual fraud or willful misconduct.
17 I don't think anybody objects to the addition of such an 18 exclusion.

19 As I understand it, the government has argued that 20 even an exculpation provision of this kind somehow amounts
21 to a third party release that offends the principles set
22 forth in Judge McMahon's decision in the Purdue Pharma case
23 or that it otherwise represents an impermissible effort to 24 interfere with the discretion of regulatory authorities or 25 otherwise exceeds my jurisdiction.

1 regulatory liabilities for doing what I have ordered that 2 they can do and what my confirmation order compels them to 3 do. That is fully consistent with ordinary bankruptcy
4 practice with the authorities that I have cited above and 5 with basic principles of equity and estoppel. It is a fair
6 and proper consequence of the government's own unwillingness
7 or inability to challenge the legality of the contemplated
8 transactions during the hearing that I have held and of the 9 fact that I am entering an order that as a statutory matter
10 not only approves those transactions, but actually requires
11 them to be carried out.

12 I note that the government itself has conceded in 13 the supplemental papers that it filed that many courts have 14 considered participants in bankruptcy proceedings to be 15 protected by a species of qualified immunity for undertaking
16 transactions specifically approved by the bankruptcy court.
17 I think that in effect that is all that I am doing here.
18 And I am not by any means preventing the enforcement of any 19 law or regulation. Also, I am not stopping any regulatory 20 body from stepping in and attempting to enjoin any act or 21 transaction on any applicable regulatory ground. If the SEC
22 or any other party believes tomorrow that it has grounds to 23 go to court to enjoin further steps in the completion of 24 this transaction, it is entitled to do so. I am not barring
25 any such thing. I am simply saying that if we get six weeks

1 down the road and then the SEC decides to take action, that 2 in fairness to the people who have spent six weeks doing
3 what I have compelled them to do, those people cannot have 4 liabilities and sanctions and penalties imposed upon them.

5 I also have a suggestion by the government both
6 today and in the papers that I should simply say nothing
7 about these issues and that if somebody is entitled to 8 immunity of any kind for doing what I have ordered them to 9 do, well, they can just raise that sometime in the future in 10 some other regulatory context and we can just guess as to 11 whether another court might agree with me or whether another
12 court might agree that I even intended to grant such freedom
13 to such people and that otherwise those people should just 14 be left at risk as to what a future court might decide.

15 I don't see how that makes any sense at all. If 16 the whole idea here is that I am directing something that 17 gives rise to qualified immunity, I should be the one that 18 says what the scope of that immunity is. Not only does it 19 make sense for me as the court that's making the order to 20 give that guidance and to make that decision, the people who 21 are actually going to be required to do what I am compelling
22 are entitled to know that that's what I am doing, and they 23 are entitled to know that when they do what I have told them
24 to do, it is not subject to the risk that, as I said, that 25 they are being involuntarily sentenced to some sanctions for

1 customers in 48 states where Binance has the required
2 licenses may receive cryptocurrency distributions relatively
3 quickly but that Binance and the Debtors cannot legally do
4 the same thing in New York. Accordingly, customers in New 5 York would have to wait until such time as Binance may 6 obtain the necessary approvals in New York. Under the plan,
7 if such approvals are not obtained within six months, the 8 New York customers will receive cash distributions instead
9 of distributions that include cryptocurrencies.

10 Curiously, although the State of New York and the 11 State of Texas have filed objections, it does not appear
12 that a single New Yorker accountholder has objected on this 13 ground, and perhaps only one Texas accountholder. This 14 perhaps raises a standing issue as to the State of New York,
15 but I do not believe I need to consider that question
16 because I believe that in any event, the objection does not 17 have merit.

18 New York has asserted that the plan unfairly
19 discriminates between customers in New York and customers in 20 other states. Unfair discrimination technically is not 21 really the right way to describe the objection. Section
22 1129(b) of the Bankruptcy Code provides that a plan may be 23 confirmed even if not all classes have voted to accept it so
24 long as certain conditions are met. One of those conditions
25 is that the plan does not discriminate unfairly with respect

1 having done so. So in that respect, I think the 2 government's suggestion is completely off-base.

3 I also note that the government has taken very -- 4 have made very broad-ranged accusations that somehow this is 5 completely beyond my jurisdiction and completely unusual and 6 completely beyond my authority. I think it's completely
7 within my authority for the reasons that I have cited. And 8 I also note that that contention by the government is belied
9 by the literally thousands of confirmed bankruptcy plans
10 over the past more than 20 years I am sure that have 11 included similar exculpation provisions without any 12 complaint whatsoever by any of these same governmental 13 authorities. In fact, I have approved similar provisions in 14 my time as a bankruptcy judge and recall no objections to 15 them of the kind that the governmental authorities have 16 raised over the past two days.

17 I also have an objection by the State of New York
18 to the effect that the plan allegedly provides for an unfair
19 discrimination in the treatment of New York customers as 20 opposed to customers in other states. The State of Texas
21 has made a similar objection. It appears though that the 22 Debtors and Binance U.S. have resolved a similar issue as to 23 Vermont and possibly as to Hawaii. In any event, the State 24 of Hawaii has not pressed any objection before me during 25 this hearing. The gist of the New York objection is that

1 to each class of claim or interest that is impaired under 2 and has not accepted the plan. Here, the relevant class is 3 Class Three, which is made up of accountholders. That class
4 has overwhelmingly voted to accept the plan.

5 I think what the state regulators really mean to 6 argue is that the plan allegedly does not provide the same
7 treatment to all members of Class Three as is required by 8 Section 1123(a)(4) of the Bankruptcy Code.

9 I think there may have been a basis for this 10 objection insofar as it related to the treatment of 11 accountholders who chose not to receive cryptocurrencies and 12 who instead wished to take cash distributions. The plan as 13 proposed would have allowed most customers to receive cash
14 once three months had passed and they had not affirmatively
15 elected to be customers of Binance. Customers in the 16 unsupported jurisdictions, however, would have had to wait
17 six months while Binance tried to work things out with 18 regulators even if they did not want to be Binance U.S.
19 customers and even if they wanted cash. Binance, however,
20 as I have noted, has agreed to change this provision and now
21 the treatment of creditors who want cash is exactly the same
22 in all states.

23 I do not otherwise believe that the objection is 24 correct. It is quite clear that the Debtors and Binance
25 U.S. would like to make in-kind distributions to all customers in all states. It is not the terms of the plan that prevent the Debtors and Binance from doing so, it is the different regulatory requirements and licenses in the different states that account for any different treatment that may occur. Or to put it another way, the plan provides in essence that the Debtors will make in-kind distributions to customers as soon as they become customers of Binance and as soon as the applicable rules and regulations in a given state permit such distributions.

However, we are not free to ignore the fact that in certain states, that cannot be accomplished as readily as in others. That does not mean that the plan is providing for different treatment of different customers, it just means that the plan itself does not have the power to sweep away the different regulations that apply in different states and does not have the power to grant licenses to Voyager and/or Binance that they do not already have.

Every customer's initial distribution rights will be determined on the effective date -- excuse me, on the same date. The different regulatory regimes in different states may mean that some customers receive distributions on different dates or in different forms, but the Debtors cannot do anything about that. The only solution to the problem New York has raised would be to force everyone in the entire country to delay their distributions until such being distributed.

Similarly here, the Debtors cannot solve for the fact that cryptocurrency prices inevitably will fluctuate. The distributions that are calculated for creditors will be done on the same day and on the same basis. However, some creditors will have disputed claims and will not receive distributions until disputes are resolved. Other creditors may face delays due to regulatory issues or simply due to delays in their own submission and processing of paperwork needed to open the Binance account. It is just inevitable that some customers will actually receive distributions on different dates and that market values on those dates may fluctuate, but that does not amount to an unequal treatment proposed by the plan. I therefore overrule the objections as to the plan's treatment of customers in unsupported jurisdictions.

There were also objections that were filed as to the identity of the proposed plan administrator, Mr. Paul Hage. Many of the objections suggested that the job should not go to anyone associated with the Official Committee of Unsecured Creditors or their individual members apparently because a number of accountholders are not happy with the Committee's decisions and its work.

Mr. Hage testified about his qualifications and answered questions about his work in this case and also time as the necessary approvals are in place, if ever, to make distributions to New York customers. That would not make any sense and it is not required by any provision of the Bankruptcy Code, and the State of New York acknowledged during argument yesterday that it is not requesting such a result.

At one point I believe one of the unsupported jurisdictions argued that cryptocurrency prices can vary over time so the value of the consideration that customers receive may be different when the customers actually receive it. But that often happens under bankruptcy plans.

In the American Airlines case, for example, creditors were entitled to receive stock as distributions on their allowed claims. There were many disputed claims, however. And the people who held those claims only received stock as and when their claims were allowed.

In the Meantime, the stock price changed, sometimes very significantly. But there was no way for the debtors to control for those price changes and no practical way for any debtor to ensure that the stock that was reserved and later distributed would have the same value on every distribution date. The creditors received the same amounts of stock, which is all that the Bankruptcy Code required, and as a practical matter, the only thing that the bankruptcy could require when property other than cash is whether he has any conflicts of interest that would prevent him from serving as the plan administrator. He testified that he was the personal attorney to an individual who was a member of the Unsecured Creditors' Committee and that at the outset of the case he gave some advice to committee members as to how they could organize the process by which they selected a law firm to act as counsel to the committee.

A number of customers postulated that the individual who Mr. Hage represented was a close friend of Mr. Ehrlich, the CEO of the Debtors, and that this had improperly influenced the Unsecured Creditors' Committee in considering the settlement with Mr. Ehrlich that is embodied in the plan.

However, Mr. Hage testified credibly that the relevant committee member was a large customer of Voyager whose friendly relationship with Mr. Ehrlich ended when Voyager shut down its platform. Mr. Hage further testified that the relevant committee member actually spoke out against the proposed settlement when this was presented for the committees' review and that he ultimately abstained from voting after the votes of other committee members had already made clear that the creditors' committee approved of the settlement terms.

I do not believe that the evidence supports the contention that Mr. Hage's limited connections to this committee member gave rise to conflicts of interest or that in the real world they would affect his work.

There were objections as to whether Mr. Hage should be appointed because he has never been a plan administrator before. Anybody who has extensive experience in the bankruptcy world and has represented both debtors and creditors is qualified to do the work that a plan administrator in a case such as this will be required to perform. And Mr. Hage absolutely has those qualifications in spaces.

There were also expressions of concerns by some pro se investors that I can only say amount to a desire to have more of a pit bull as a plan administrator, someone who will be absolutely more aggressive and satisfy the desires of some people for more aggressive treatment of the people who ran Voyager and more aggressive pursuit of potential litigation claims.

I understand what's behind that attitude. It does not actually in the real world translate into what makes for an effective plan administrator, or in my personal experience, what makes for an effective litigator. People who aren't lawyers sometimes think that it is the snarliest and nastiest people who are the most effective litigators. People who actually do litigation and certainly judges know that those are often the people who are the least effective regarding the treatment of late claims have been modified to make clear that they will be disallowed only as I so order. Some Alameda FTX had at one point had objections, but it has dropped its objections.

The Bank of New York had an absolutely curious objection based on the odd fact that somebody apparently purported recently to transfer some real property to Voyager's name and Bank of New York has a mortgage lien on that property. That one was relatively easy to dispense with, and the confirmation order will provide Voyager is not claiming any ownership or interest in that property and that the automatic stay is no bar to the Bank of New York doing whatever it needs to do to enforce its mortgage.

I had previously indicated yesterday that I thought that the plan needed to be modified to say that -- to delete the provisions that said that the plan administrator and the Debtor do not have responsibility to try to locate people for whom checks or other communications were returned as undeliverable. Those provisions have been changed and I am satisfied with those changes.

I also said that the proposed provisions regarding professional fees had to be modified to make clear that their fees and their compliance with the provisions of the Bankruptcy Code have to continue through the effective date, not just through the confirmation date. I haven't actually litigators. They are the most annoying and they may satisfy clients' desires to inflict pain on an adversary, but by all means they are absolutely not necessarily the most effective. So I don't think that particular criticism of Mr. Hage is well-taken and I find that he is qualified for the work and that his appointment is reasonable.

An ad hoc group of equity securityholders objected to the way the plan described the treatment of intercompany claims. I was under the impression that had been resolved until yesterday. Some additional questions were raised. I won't go into those in detail because the Debtors have now agreed and have disclosed the names of the people who will serve as independent directors of each of the separate debtor estates, and it is clear that if there is a conflict of interest between those estates, that the independent directors will have the right to appear and be heard on any issue involving where such a conflict exists. And I understand that those provisions had been included in the plan documents and that this objection is resolved.

A lot of other objections have been resolved and don't need to be discussed in detail here. The amended plan, as requested by the U.S. Trustee, has deleted provisions deeming all claims to be objected to. The proposal that the winddown debtor would have the sole authority to object to claims has been deleted. Provisions seen if those changes have been made, but I cannot imagine that they are controversial at all.

Finally, there are a few other objections that were made but that I do not believe had merit. One owner of the VGX token argued that owners of VGX are being unfairly discriminated against. This is based primarily on the fact that there is no guarantee that the VGX token will continue to be traded in a meaningful way and therefore assurance that the VGX token will continue to have much if any value.

I note that under the terms of the plan, the amount of the allowed claims that customers have based on their VGX holdings will be based on the value that VGX had on the date that the cases were commenced and not based on its current value.

However, to the extent that some of the customers' distributions will be in the form of VGX, the values of those distributions will be based on the value that VGX has on a specified date in advance of the actual distributions.

The goal is to try, if possible, to make some in-kind distributions if they can be made, thereby possibly reducing tax consequences. But we have no guarantee that will work from a tax perspective.

I do not believe the Debtors are in a position to guarantee that VGX will continue to be traded any more than the Debtors can guarantee that any of the other coins that will be distributed will continue to be traded. Similarly, the Debtors can make no guarantees about what will happen to the future values of any of the coins. Those are all things that will depend on market forces.

Customers who elect to receive in-kind distributions instead of cash distributions will receive VGX if they previously owned some VGX. But I don't think this amounts to a deferential treatment or an improper discrimination in violation of any code requirements.

The gist of the suggestion I think yesterday was that it is okay to treat other cryptocurrencies as having values based upon their market prices, but that somehow the market prices of VGX are actually illusory. Ordinarily, the market price of an asset represents the market's assessment of the potential risk and rewards associated with that asset. Even when a stock or other marketable item may appear to have little future prospect of value, it may nevertheless carry an option value based on the possibility that circumstances will occur that will lead to future values. Those option values or other market values are real values in the absence of proof to the contrary. And I certainly understand the objectors' worries about VGX, but I have no contrary proof here or nothing that would allow me essentially to say that the VGX token should be excluded from the distribution process and treated just as though it address those now. We will over the course of the next day or so try to work out the terms of the final confirmation order and any of those remaining issues will be resolved in that process.

Is there anything else that anybody thinks I need to address in the course of this decision on the confirmation?

MR. ARONOFF: Your Honor, this is Peter Aronoff from the U.S. Attorney's Office for the Southern District of New York.

We had filed a letter around midday today requesting that the Court modify the provision in the confirmation order regarding the 14-day default stay (indiscernible). I know other parties have also raised that. I just wanted to (indiscernible).

THE COURT: I suspect that's why Mr. Morrissey is also standing up. I'm not going to give you the 14-day stay, but I'm not going to force some poor district judge to live with the kind of schedule I've been living with over the last five days. And so I will give you a -- if we enter an order tomorrow, I will stay its effect until Monday.

MR. ARONOFF: Understood, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Before I say that I'm going to do that, is that going to violate some term of the Binance U.S. deal?

didn't exist and just as though its value was a nullity.

I have one objection to the effect that the plan does not provide for a recovery for the holders of equity at the ultimate holding company level. In fact, the plan makes clear that those equity holders will be entitled to distributions if that ultimate holding company has assets once it pays its own creditors in full, although the current predictions are that that will not happen.

I believe I have addressed all of the objections that have been filed. And for the reasons stated, I have overruled the remaining objections. I therefore will confirm the plan subject to the changes that I have described.

As to the confirmation order, there are a number of provisions that seem to me to be superfluous or repetitive or otherwise unnecessary, or in a few instances improper. And I have made substantial revisions to the proposed confirmation order. And this morning, without making any changes that would suggest how I would rule here, I gave a form of confirmation order to the Debtors that showed those other changes that I would require in the event I were to confirm the plan. There are a lot of questions and a lot of things that are in the draft order that may not necessarily work in light of other provisions that I understand are in the plan, but I'm not going to try to

MR. SLADE: That's why I was looking at Mr. Goldberg.

MR. GOLDBERG: Your Honor, Adam Goldberg with Latham & Watkins. Binance U.S.'s goal is to complete this transaction as quickly as possible. If I could have two minutes to confer with the Debtors, we could see if that's an issue.

THE COURT: Okay.

MR. GOLDBERG: Your Honor, that would -- we are okay with that provision. Thank you.

THE COURT: Okay, thank you. All right. I do have another issue, but do you have a point on the confirmation itself, Mr. Morrissey?

MR. MORRISSEY: Your Honor, on the stay issue, frankly, Your Honor, I have to get back to the U.S. Trustee regarding whether Monday is okay. The issue obviously is, as I'm sure the people here are aware, is whether we would need to request a stay pending appeal. We would all like to avoid that scenario. But I have to find out whether the extension until Monday will put that issue to bed, at least for now. Thank you, Your Honor.

THE COURT: All right. Okay. I also have before me a motion to appoint a trustee or motions to --

MS. DIRESTA: Your Honor, can I ask a question about the customer data?

Page 110

THE COURT: Let me finish this first. Okay?

MS. DIRESTA: Okay, thank you.

THE COURT: But promise I won't forget you.

I have a motion to appoint a trustee or motions to appoint a trustee and/or to remove the Unsecured Creditors' Committee members and replace its advisors.

The Code provides that I may appoint a trustee for cause at any time before the confirmation of the plan, of course based on my decision that we are now less than a day away from the entry of an order confirming a plan. There is no way, even if I were to order the appointment of a trustee, that one would be in place before the whole issue would be moot, as the confirmation order will have been entered. I know that's frustrating for the people who have raised the motion, but I also think that while the motion makes a lot of accusations that actually have not really been answered by the Debtors, at this late stage in the case and right during the middle of the confirmation process, I can't see how the issues that were raised were of a kind that would provide cause to interrupt that process and to throw everything back into disarray. It just wouldn't have made sense to me if for reasons I said yesterday I didn't really think that there was cause at this stage of the case.

I also have two motions for returns of assets that essentially argue that customers should be allowed to take on behalf of Binance U.S., Your Honor. Home addresses would be part of level one data that would be transferred.

THE COURT: I'm sure that's level one.

MS. DIRESTA: Okay. And then what about the biometric? You didn't mention that.

MR. GOLDBERG: Could you specify what you mean?

MS. DIRESTA: When you have to hold the phone to your face and it does this biometric configuration of your face and captures your data and it stores all of that.

MR. GOLDBERG: I mean, I would think that's part of the selfies that would be available. So customers will be entitled to opt out of the transfer of that data to Binance U.S.

THE COURT: Your phone recognizes your face. That's just on your phone, isn't it?

MR. SLADE: Yeah. I think the biometrics is an Apple function, not --

MS. DIRESTA: No, it gets sent.

THE COURT: It gets sent? That's news to me.

MS. DIRESTA: Yeah, the biometric information does get sent to the company.

MR. GOLDBERG: Your Honor, we have agreed that we are not acquiring selfies or this data for customers that opt out.

THE COURT: Do you mind adding biometric data to out everything that was in their accounts and shouldn't be given only partial distributions as the plan contemplates. I simply cannot allow that. No bankruptcy case could allow that. If one customer started doing that, it would just mean that the next customer would get less. And the whole point of the Bankruptcy Code is to make sure that everybody gets equal distributions. And since there's not enough to go around here, nobody can get everything that was in their accounts. That's simply a basic matter of bankruptcy. So I will deny those objections.

And you had a question about the customer information? On the phone? I'm surprised I don't already -

MS. DIRESTA: Yes. Thank you, Your Honor.

THE COURT: I'm surprised I don't already recognize your names or your voices, but I'm afraid I don't.

MS. DIRESTA: Gina DiResta, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Yes.

MS. DIRESTA: So I wanted to ask, my home address, is that part of the level one or level two KYC that was being mentioned?

THE COURT: Do you know the answer?

MS. DIRESTA: Because I want to know if my home address is going to stay with Binance or not.

MR. GOLDBERG: Adam Goldberg of Latham & Watkins

what you're agreeing to exclude?

MR. GOLDBERG: Yes, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Okay. So they will exclude that.

MS. DIRESTA: Okay. And with regard to the social security information. And the attorney for Binance was saying that it would be costly and it would cost $20 per customer and there's a million customers. I just want to address the math on that. On paper, there's about 1 million customers of Voyager. I believe there's about 700,000 accounts that have under $100. And I believe there's about 400,000 accounts that are under $10. So those are kind of more like (indiscernible) accounts. And you can kind of see that with how many people actually participated in voting, which is under 62,000 people. And then supposedly 175,000 people have already opened accounts. There are only 2,117 people who voted no to the plan like I did. So if you assume that in a two-week opt-out period that all 2,117 people were to opt out, that only equates to $32,340 that Binance would have to pay if you pretend that all of those people decide to turn around and open an account. So I just (indiscernible) company that deals in billions of dollars, that that's a lot of money and that that would break them. And if they think it will, I'm happy to pay the $20 to reinstate all of my KYC information for level one in the event I ever lose my mind and decide to open a Binance account. But I just don't think when you look at it mathematically there's justification for holding the social security number. I just don't think it's justified based on the math.

THE COURT: Can you take that back to your client, Mr. Goldberg?

MR. GOLDBERG: Your Honor, Adam Goldberg from Latham & Watkins on behalf of Binance U.S. I will of course take that back to my client, but I fully expect the answer will be we are not making any changes to the deal that has been proposed and that is supported by 97 percent of customers voting.

MS. DIRESTA: Thank you for allowing me to speak, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Okay.

MR. LOREN: Your Honor, this is John Loren, pro se creditor. I have a few questions regarding Binance.

THE COURT: Just hang on. Hang on one second, Mr. Loren.

Mr. Goldberg, I've given you a lot of these things to take back. In the real world, I don't know how many people will take advantage of this election that I am making available and just what effect it would be or especially what effect it would be if, as the customer just suggested, people who made the election and then wanted to be Binance crypto from Binance. Will that fee be waived for Voyager users or are we expected to pay Binance to withdraw?

THE COURT: Does anybody here know?

MR. GOLDBERG: Your Honor, I don't know. I think all of that would be disclosed on the Binance U.S. website.

THE COURT: I don't think any of the attorneys here know the answer to your question.

MR. LOREN: Okay. I am on the Binance website, and there are fees to withdraw. So (indiscernible) pay Binance to get our money. The second question is in regards to the daily withdrawal limit. I believe there's a limit of $5,000 U.S. Dollars per day to withdraw from Binance. Will that be waived for Voyager users? Will my claim take a month to get my money out of Binance?

MR. GOLDBERG: Your Honor, Adam Goldberg with Latham & Watkins on behalf of Binance U.S.

I am being told that the limit depends upon the level of KYC that a customer complies with. So if they achieve the KYC two level with the additional document uploads, then there would be different withdrawal limits. But I would expect all of this information is available through Binance U.S. website and customer service inquiries.

MR. LOREN: Got it. Because the website I see is showing $5,000 withdrawal per day. And that's going to take me a month to get my money. And I have to pay them to get customers would have to pay you the $20 that you say it would cost. I understand you don't want to do this and wouldn't want to do this if, you know, it would mean 700,000 potential customers are going to leave you. I find it hard to believe that that's really what we're talking about here. And it certainly makes me more comfortable if customers have the right to stop their social security information. So just keep that in mind and talk to your client as a practical matter about whether it's really so important that they want to make me try to figure out what I have to do here and whether it's a small enough issue that they could just do what I've asked. Okay?

MR. GOLDBERG: I understand, Your Honor. Just to give you some insight onto this issue, we sought to negotiate a way to leave behind all of this data with the Debtor. It would require a meaningful price modification per customer that opted out. And the Debtors flatly rejected that. Understandably. This is I think in the end therefore an issue of business judgement of the Debtors in selling their assets. Thank you, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Thank you. All right. Mr. Loren, you had a question.

MR. LOREN: That is correct, Your Honor. Thank you for your time. I have two questions in regards to the Binance withdrawal process. There are fees to withdraw my money, too. It's very sad.

THE COURT: Let me ask you to -- I certainly have no ability to answer this question or to deal with it. This is a practical question. Let me ask you to get in touch or ask the Debtor's counsel to get in touch with you and see if they can facilitate putting you in touch with somebody who can give you a very precise answer to your questions. Okay?

MR. LOREN: Okay. Thank you for your time.

THE COURT: All right. Anything else?

MR. SLADE: Not from us, Your Honor. Thank you very much.

THE COURT: All right. Yes.

MR. ARONOFF: Your Honor, it's Peter Aronoff from the U.S. Attorney's Office again. I'm trying to run some things down here, talking with several people.

Just returning to the question of the stay. You know, we were obviously trying to move as quickly as possible to try to make a decision about whether to seek an appeal. That would require some coordination from the government. And this is an issue that from my perspective only arose just within the last few days. And so we're now -- we're moving as quickly as we can, but it takes time.

I believe this is a situation where having a little more time on the stay now will lessen the need for emergency applications when it's possible wouldn't be necessary if we just have an extra few days. And so I would ask that the Court --

THE COURT: Listen, you discuss that with the parties if you can work that out with the parties. If you can convince them that there's some prospect that you're not actually going to pursue the issue, you can look at it further. I don't know, maybe you can work something out with them. But in the first instance, do that. Okay?

MR. ARONOFF: Okay. Thank you, Your Honor.

THE COURT: All right. Your judge is very tired and he's going to --

MR. HENDERSHOTT: Your Honor.

THE COURT: Yes.

MR. HENDERSHOTT: Your Honor, Tracy Hendershott, pro se creditor. One question and one comment if I may.

THE COURT: Yes.

MR. HENDERSHOTT: The question is actually for pro se creditor Lisa Trevino, who has had to focus on her day job today. And she asked me to just put into the record if there was any follow-up with her action to getting data back that she requested from the Debtors. Your Honor, once this confirmation is done today, she wasn't sure if she was able to engage with you any further to follow up on that. So I committed to her I would ask that in the hearing on her behalf.

But thank you for the clarification.

MS. OKIKE: Your Honor, on behalf of the Debtors, we just want to thank you for taking extensive time to really help us navigate through very complex and challenging issues. So we really appreciate it.

THE COURT: okay.

MR. GOLDBERG: Gratitude to Your Honor and all of your staff and chambers. Thank you. The Committee thanks you as well.

THE COURT: Thank you all for your submissions, and we are adjourned.

(Whereupon these proceedings were concluded at 5:14 PM)

MS. OKIKE: Your Honor, Christine Okike on behalf of Kirkland & Ellis. We will provide her with the data. And if she needs an extension of the deadline with respect to the merit objection, we'll allow for that.

THE COURT: Very good.

MR. HENDERSHOTT: Thank you. I will relay that to her. Thank you both.

And then just one comment. I did want to clarify, Your Honor, your interpretation of our request for having a third party (indiscernible) -- I'm drawing a blank. I'm tired. We're all tired -- for the winddown trustee. We weren't looking for a snarling bit pull, Your Honor. We were looking for effectiveness. You've seen the UCC go along with every single exception and (indiscernible) all along we just didn't have confidence that there would be a level of (indiscernible), which is different. Effectiveness is different than a snarling pit bull. I just wanted to clarify that.

THE COURT: All right.

MR. HENDERSHOTT: Thank you, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Well, if that's true, maybe I'll delete that part of my discussion and commentary from the final version of the decision.

MR. HENDERSHOTT: Thank you, Judge.

THE COURT: I thought I understood it differently.
